"Socialists' Anti-War Theory Has Failed in Europe Because They Are Only Human," Says Leader

Allan L. Benson Declares German and French Partisans Are Fighting Each Other Under Stress of a Natural Law—Suggests That War Declarations of the Future Be Left to Popular Vote and That Those Voting for It Go First to the Front.

By Alleyne Ireland.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.

HE have heard a great deal in recent years about the important influence which the Socialist party might be expected to exert upon the warlike ambitions of countries imperialistically inclined. This influence we were told would not only make itself felt in the molding of national policies, but would in the last resort render armed conflict impossible by the simple process of calling to the standards of peace millions of men destined by autocratic rulers to serve under the banners of war.

ALLAN L. BENSON

Many of us are now seeking an explanation of the fact that there are today, facing each other on the line of battle, hundreds of thousands of Socialists in the German and in the French armies.

I submitted this question to Allen Louis Benson, whose name is a household word among the Socialists of this country. His three books, "Socialism Made Plain," "The Usurped Power of the Courts" and "The Truth About Socialism," have had a wide circulation, and the Socialist party distributed nearly two millions of copies of his "The Growing Grocery Bill."

No Magic in Socialism.

MR. BENSON has an interesting and vigorous personality. Unlike some Socialists I have known, his views are not the product of a vague discontent, but represent a pondered judgment based upon wide and intelligent observation backed by a careful study of Socialist theories. His opinions derive additional weight from the fact that he is not obsessed by that Utopian conception of humanity which has brought into well-deserved ridicule so much of the Socialist propaganda.

Mr. Benson realizes quite as well as do those who are opposed to his political principles that there is no magic quality in Socialism which will change the essential character of man, that will stamp out all that is mean and dishonest in human nature and usher in a new era of unselfishness and good will. He credits the Socialist party the world over with its fair share of fools and rogues, but he entertains a firm belief that Socialism will afford to fools and rogues infinitely less power to do harm than they enjoy under our present political system.

"The European war has undoubtedly made a breach in the Socialist attitude toward war," said Mr. Benson in reply to my questions. "In time of peace we take the position that all war is wrong. In time of peace we take the position that all King-made wars are solely in the interest of capitalists. In time of peace we call each other 'comrades,' and urge the workingmen of the world to 'unite' and throw off their chains; yet in this world-wide war we find the Socialists of the warring nations fighting shoulder to shoulder with the others.

Socialists Are Human.

"AT the moment I can think of two reasons why these facts exist. The Socialists are not frauds, but they are human. The Socialists are not blood-lusters, but they are home-lovers. Like everybody else, Socialists resent attacks upon their respective countries. A man may honestly believe that murder is wrong, yet if he awoke at night to discover an armed burglar in his sleeping room, the peace-loving man may kill the burglar. Every nation in Europe that is at war contends that it has been attacked. All the power of these various Governments has been exerted in an effort to convince their respective people that they were the victims of aggressors. The German Socialists firmly believe Germany was attacked. The French Socialists as firmly believe that France was attacked. The Belgian Socialists know that Belgium was attacked.

"Now please try to put yourself in the position of a Socialist. We are not gods, but men. Gentlemen who believe we should have overborne this terrific environment ask of us more than men could do. We were the victims of the false information disseminated by some of the Governments in their efforts to place upon others the responsibility for aggression. Wherever we were—in Germany, France or Belgium—we had the ordinary white man's hatred of invasion. And the war came upon us so suddenly that we had no opportunity to meet and exchange views.

"Given a month's notice, the Socialists of Germany might have united with the Socialists of France to resist the war, even to the extent of martyrdom. They might have said: 'We will let the authorities shoot us down—they will not dare shoot down too many—but we will not go to war.' But without consultation and the pledging of mutual support, resistance to the war call would have seemed to the individual Socialist a useless sacrifice of his life—useless because in his isolation he would have had no assurance that any other Socialist would resist even to death.

"Such are the reasons for the Sociarist spectacle in Europe. What are Socialists to do about the spectacle? Something must be done. A fortress in our defense is gone. Either we must make the international solidarity of our party a fact or we would do well to stop talking about it. I am not authorized to speak for the party. Neither is anyone else. The party always speaks for itself. But in the search for a remedy I can apply Socialist philosophy to the situation.

"International Socialist solidarity can never be a fact—except in time of peace—until the war-making power of the nation is democratized. To leave the war-making power in the hands of one or two or a few puts in the hands of our economic and political enemies the weapon with which to destroy our solidarity. As mere human beings we cannot stand up under the strain of invasive warfare. When invaded we are like Republicans, Democrats or anybody else—we fight. As matters now stand in Europe, almost any monarch has it within his power to begin an aggressive war. In no country—not even in the United States—is the war-making power distributed among more than a few men.

"This is monstrous. It is a fact against which not only Socialists, but everybody who is honestly in favor of peace should inveigh. The power to make war should be distributed as widely as the effects of war are felt among adults. The burdens of war fall upon all the people—why should not all the people be consulted before war is made?

"Too long have our economic masters arrogated to themselves the right to say when we should fight and whom we should fight. All through the centuries we have fought them inch by inch for the rights we have. We have fought for the right to vote for public officials. We have fought for the right to interest ourselves in the determination of economic policies. We now enjoy these rights, to a certain extent, without question by the capitalist class. But that class, which once denied us every right, still denies us the right to exercise the war-making power by direct vote of the people.

America Should Lead.

"WE must capture this last great right. Every cannon shot in Europe is an admonition to us to move. Europe is in the trenches today, but we may be in the trenches tomorrow. Nobody can say to what extent we may be involved in the colossal upheaval that has begun in Europe. Europe fought for 20 years in the Napoleonic wars—this may be the first of a series of wars that will last as long. America should put its house in order.

"America should lead the world in democracy by democratizing the power to declare war. We should no longer be content to permit a bare majority of Congress—fewer than 350 men—to plunge 100,000,000 people into war.

"The Constitution vests the war-making power in Congress. But the Constitution does not prohibit the President from so conducting the foreign policies of this Government that war becomes inevitable. The President should not conduct the foreign policies of this Government. The foreign policies of this Government should be conducted by Congress, acting through the Committee on Foreign Relations. Every dispatch received from or sent to a foreign Power should be made public. In delicate negotiations we now regard publicity as a danger, and seek to strangle it in executive sessions, but this is a mistake. The more delicate a situation is, the more reason that it should be placed under the most pitiless white light. If Congress or a committee of Congress be about to commit a wrong, let the people know it, and a reaction will come from the people, through the press, that will bring Congress to its senses. But if a foreign Power be working injury to us that may involve war, let the people who may have to fight the war know all the facts as they take place.

Declaring War by Ballot.

"THE power to wage defensive wars should still lie in the hands of Congress and the President. The power to begin war should be reserved to the people, and should be exercised at a special election by direct ballot. War should be proposed in one of three ways: By Congress, by a majority of the State Legislatures or by direct petition of so great a percentage of the people that the power should never be used lightly.

"War having been proposed in either of these ways, a special election should be called to take place in not less than 60 days nor more than six months from the date of the proposal. The ballots should read: 'Shall the United States declare war against (naming the nation)?—No. Yes.' The voter should sign his name below the

Immediate Assistance Vital to Small Growers

Governors' Views Wired to Post-Dispatch

TO obtain the best information regarding the cotton crisis in the Southern States, the Post-Dispatch telegraphed these questions to the Governors of the cotton growing states:

What has your State Government done, if anything, to prevent the sacrifice of the 1914 cotton crop below cost of production?

In your judgment, is the use of National or State credit, or both, necessary to prevent this sacrifice?

Several of the Governors were absent from the State capitals, but the answers of those responding are almost a unit as to sentiment, and are here presented:

Texas---State and National Co-operation

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 19.

BOTH the State and Federal Governments should use their credit to the fullest possible extent to prevent cotton from being sold at less than its actual value.

The State and National Governments should co-operate in taking the cotton farmers through the existing crisis.

O. B. COLQUITT,
Governor of Texas.

Alabama---State and Nation Should Act

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 19.

THIS State has done nothing yet. Am trying to call a conference of Southern Governors to settle upon a definite program to be adopted by the Southern States.

I think the use of both National and State credit will be necessary to prevent the sacrifice of the cotton crop.

EMMETT O'NEAL,
Governor of Alabama.

Oklahoma---State and National Aid Needed

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Sept. 19.

OKLAHOMA has taken no recent action with reference to handling the cotton. We have a law providing adequately for bonded warehouses.

All the credit, both State and National, that can be extended, will be needed in handling the present crop if it is to be disposed of without great sacrifice to the producer.

If a practical and effective plan of reduction of acreage and output can be had for 1915, it will, in my judgment, substantially meet the present crisis.

LEE CRUCE,
Governor of Oklahoma.

Mississippi---Only Nation Has the Power

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 19.

OUR State Government has not been able to accomplish anything to prevent a sacrifice of this year's cotton crop at figures below cost of production.

I am of the opinion the National Government is the only Government that can furnish us any relief in this regard.

EARL BREWER,
Governor of Mississippi.

Arkansas---Depending on Local Business Men

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 19.

THE State Legislature has made no provision to prevent the sacrifice of this year's cotton crop. I have issued a proclamation setting Sept. 29 for a meeting of bankers, merchants and farmers in Little Rock to take up and devise means to prevent the sacrifice of the crop.

GEORGE W. HAYS,
Governor of Arkansas.

Florida---Duty of National Government to Act

TALLAHASSE, Fla., Sept. 19.

I WOULD not say that National or State credit is absolutely necessary to prevent the sacrifice of the cotton crop, but it is my opinion that the Federal Government should provide a fund to advance as loans on cotton in bonded warehouses.

PARK TRAMMELL,
Governor of Florida.

Georgia---Squarely Up to National Government

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 19.

I STRONGLY favor Federal aid to meet the cotton crisis. The recent suggestion of Southern Senators, Representatives and business men that the States should take up and hold 5,000,000 bales off the market, in proportion to each State's share of the total crop, is impractical because the State Constitutions would have to be amended before this could be accomplished.

JOHN M. SLATON,
Governor of Georgia.

THE "buy-a-bale" movement has made the whole country acquainted with the fact that the Southern states are facing a serious commercial crisis, due to the overproduction of cotton and the war's destruction of a large share of the world's markets for cotton.

Southern farmers and business men are bombarding Southern representatives in Congress with demands that the United States Government shall come to the rescue, either by establishing warehouses, issuing certificates of deposit on cotton placed therein and loaning on the certificates at the rate of 8 to 10 cents a pound, or by buying the crop surplus at 10 to 12 cents a pound and holding it off the market until the general resumption of spinning shall bring the price of the raw cotton back to normal, or by both methods.

By no possibility can the "buy-a-bale" movement, or any other movement in sight, seriously affect the true market value of the crop. This "buy-a-bale" movement can, however, if purchases be made with discretion, bring immediate relief to scores of thousands of desperately poor and hard pressed cotton farm families. In the South the buyers are taking especial pains to buy only from the poorest growers, most of them tenants, those in direct need of prompt aid and least able to carry the crop unsold.

In this respect the "buy-a-bale" movement is one of the finest manifestations of American neighborliness, of the spirit of the Golden Rule, that recent years have produced. In so far as the North participates in the "buy-a-bale" movement, it places the South under an obligation of gratitude which cannot be measured by the mere extent of the money provided. It is peculiarly a case of helping the helpless, because a very large share of this "distress" cotton is made by the labor of little children. If the "buy-a-bale" funds are wisely managed, every $50 sent from the North to pay for a bale of cotton to be stored and held for a return of normal prices will provide food, shelter, clothes and a chance to attend school for the little boys and girls whose long labor in the cotton patches helped to produce it.

Asking National and State Aid.

THE South has not been much encouraged to hope for aid from Washington commensurate to its need. Such aid may be given, involving the temporary use of $200,000,000 to $300,000,000, to prevent the wiping out of an equal amount of cotton values while the South's farmers are turning to other crops, but the South is not sanguine of it. There is no American national precedent for such action, and proposals to create such a precedent are opposed by powerful political and commercial elements. It is a possibility, but no more than that.

Southern State Governments have been urgently implored to do their utmost in giving relief. Conferences of Governors have been called, both in the South and at Washington, to be held in the near future. Texas has been most prompt to act on her own initiative. Gov. Colquitt called the Texas Legislature in special session and a law was enacted under which the State undertakes to provide warehouses for storing the cotton, to issue certificates on it and to help in that way to transform the temporarily nonmarketable commodity into a quick asset. Gov. Colquitt also is urging the organization of a Texas State bank, with large capital, to join the Federal reserve bank system, take over the $77,000,000 of emergency currency to which Texas is entitled, and loan it to cotton farmers direct, at cost, on their cotton stored in State warehouses. Elsewhere in this article the Governors of several Southern states tell what has been done or is proposed to be done, to meet the emergency.

J. H. Davis, Congressman at Large from Texas, declares Judge N. H. Kittrell of Houston, started the South's need and its sentiment with entire accuracy in the following review of the situation:

"But I say somebody should help the farmers. They are behind and under and make possible every bank and trust company and railroad and steamship and factory and every agency and instrumentality of finance and commerce. Upon them rests the fabric of trade and manufacture and clothing a large part of the human race, and they bear the Government on their shoulders. If disaster comes to them economic and financial disaster will follow as to the aggregate of society. The farmers are behind and under the treasury of the United States. In practical effect every dollar in it they put there. A large part of the millions, indeed, billions, in it are the fruits of import duty on goods from foreign lands. But for the money coming from what the farmers raise in winter's cold and summer's heat there would have been no imports.

Relief Needed at Once.

"THE people need relief and need it now. They are in no temper or condition to wait. In the face of dire calamity the farmers have no time to give any thought to Federal Reserve Boards or regional banks, or directors in class A or class B or class C.

"It is suggested that the Government say to every national bank and every state bank: 'Whenever any man presents you with a certificate of a warehouse, which satisfies you that he has stored a 500-pound bale of cotton, weighed, sampled, classed, numbered, tagged with a metal tag, and insured, give him $40, and the Government will redeem the certificate.

"If the actual bills are not in the treasury, then make more. The people will take them. They will not be fiat money in any sense, because behind every dollar will be as good collateral as there is on earth. It will not deteriorate in value, more likely it will increase.

Waiving speculation upon possible results to other lines of business and industry in the South and the country at large, of this cotton crisis, it may be said there is food for thought for every American business man in the following study of facts drawn from the latest United States census reports.

Exact figures are not yet available for the surplus cotton carried over Aug. 31, 1914, the end of the Government's statistical year in reporting this industry, nor for the quantity that

Prof. Ferrero, Noted Historian, Defends Italy's Refusal to Fight for Austria and Germany

All Italians, He Says, Regard Austria's Movements Against Servia as a Blow at Them and Their Balkan Relations and They Charge the Kaiser With Bringing a Catastrophe Upon Himself by His Aggressions.

By Guglielmo Ferrero.

ROME, Sept. 19.

ITALY, although an ally of Austria and Germany, has declared herself neutral in the great conflict that has brought all Europe to blows.

The Italian Government has been induced to assume this attitude for several reasons.

The first reason is the very tenor of the treaty of alliance. The exact text is not known, but two things are certain: That the alliance was of a defensive character, and that the preservation of the balance in the Balkans was within its scope. In other words, Italy was pledged by that treaty to aid the two allied Powers if these should be attacked, and Austria was pledged to respect the status quo in the Balkan Peninsula, or not to change it except by agreement with Italy.

PROF. FERRERO

But the conflagration burst forth because Germany declared war on Russia on Aug. 1, while Russia and Austria were still in negitiation over Servia.

So there can be no doubt that this war is a war of aggression, desired by Germany, and to which the treaty is not applicable.

Foresaw Blow to Italy

BESIDES, although the conflagration burst forth by will of Germany, its primary occasion was Austria's declaration of war against Servia. It is clear that Austria declared this war in order to change the balance of the Balkan Peninsula to her advantage and to the detriment of Italy. So, also, is it true that she declared it without first having an understanding with Italy.

This point is now beyond dispute. Thus, Austria violated the treaty of alliance in one of its essential points; therefore, she had no right to invoke it in calling on Italy to come to her assistance.

But these are, so to say, the legal and political motives that have actuated the Government and justified its action. Beneath these motives there are others that might be called national—chief of all being public sentiment. Even if the Italian Government had been willing to lend an ear to the proposals that Austria and Germany made to induce her to take up arms on their behalf, it could not have done so.

The whole nation has unanimously declared against any participation on the side of Germany and Austria in this war. This sentiment was so unanimous that the few newspapers which tried to combat it had to desist after a few days.

Still Hate the Austrians.

WHAT are the reasons for this extraordinary unanimity of public sentiment? The first is the ancient hatred against Austria, that still broods in the depths of the Italian heart. Italy has not yet forgotten what she had to suffer from Austria from 1815 to 1859, and she knows that there are Italians still suffering under the Austrian yoke. The idea of helping Austria to subjugate a little people like the Servians, who have certainly done wrong, but who, even so, have the right to live, inspired horror in the nation.

"With the Austrians? Never" was heard on every hand.

Another reason was the indignation aroused by Germany's aggression. It must be admitted that upon to Aug. 1 the sympathies of Italian public opinion were for Germany, rather than for France. There are several reasons for this fact, but principally that Italy desired peace and that she was persuaded, wrongly or rightly, that the peace of Europe was maintained by Germany and threatened by France.

On Aug. 1 this illusion suddenly collapsed. Italy saw the Power from which she had been hoping for peace provoke a war and precipitate the ruin that must follow the war.

Such are the reasons for which Italy has declared herself neutral. The grave problem that arises now is this: Will it be possible to maintain her neutrality until the end of the war, or will she also be drawn into the whirlpool?

The answer is doubtful. The Italian Government is firmly resolved to observe neutrality. But of how much value are the intentions, even the most resolute, of a Government in a historic crisis of this magnitude. It is impossible not to see that, even now, the Italian neutrality is menaced from without and within. From without, it is menaced by the intrigues of the belligerent Powers. Each of the warring groups is trying to drag Italy to her side of the tumult—England especially, who, if she could succeed in her efforts to urge Italy to fight Germany and Austria, would completely surround them and deprive them of every means of communication with the rest of the world.

From within, her neutrality is menaced by a ferment of public opinion, still noiseless and latent, but already strong enough, urging the Government against Austria.

"Italy's Opportunity," Say Many.

MANY people are already murmuring that the moment for settling accounts with the neighboring empire has arrived; that, at the close of the war, the map of Europe will be redrawn and that, therefore, Italy ought to place itself in a position to get back the Italian provinces that are subject to Austria.

Up to now Italy has had to deal with a movement of public opinion that is, as I have said, latent. But who would dare to assert that, at any moment, events may not make this latent movement explode into violence and that the Government may not be dragged in?

It is no longer possible to foresee with certainty anything in Europe, for we are all living in the realm of the unforeseen. The order in which Europe has dwelt for so many years being now disturbed, anything is possible in this universal confusion—even two allies taking up arms against each other a few weeks hence.

In the meanwhile, Italy, as well as Austria, is taking great military precautions, each on its own frontier. This is a fact and it has its significance.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

No "Civilized Warfare."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

While the European nations are soaking their soil with the blood of their patriots, they are also giving to the nonbelligerent nations much food for pessimism. And the cynic, also, need do no foraging. Indeed, it almost seems that for the want of a worse name to describe modern conditions, we called them "civilization." Perhaps we coined the word as a master-sacrifice to the God of Euphony. And when our phrase-eating took a stronger hold upon us, and we ventured to commit the Greater Blasphemy, we did our worst and worked out the abortive phrase—"civilized warfare." And for this awful attempt to unite the idealism which civilization implies with the sum of all brutalities, which warfare is—for this attempt the future historian may well dare to say that a race so capable of prostituting a language should not have been endowed with speech.

The fact is that every device of war, every book on military tactics, all the destructive enginery of the world's gunmakers, every submarine, every war-headed torpedo, every floating mine, every magazine and arsenal stands as a protest against the influence of The Hague Tribunal of Peace. And civilization is measured by the progress of peace! If not so, by what other standard should civilization be measured?

Civilized warfare! Does the present European frenzy come under that head? If this be so, it is indeed a wonder that "barbarous" warfare did not complete the extermination of the race long ago. Perhaps among the tragedies that, in the present conflict will be metamorphosed into good, we will find our language purged of its corrupt phrases.

All warfare is barbarous warfare, and the fact is that the greater our pretenses to civilization, the more are the horrors of war raised to the first magnitude. B. FRANKLIN HUNTER.

Temporary Help Not Enough.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I want to thank you for publishing my appeal for work for my husband and self. Through your kindness my husband got a few odd jobs, which gave us temporary relief. But my, we would be so glad of something permanent. I am grateful to the kind person who sent $1; but it is work, not charity, we seek.

A DISTRESSED WOMAN.

What Will England Do?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

According to the reported statements of English officials, the allies, apparently under the direction of England, will not grant peace to Germany until she has been completely crushed. This can only mean that England and her allies intend to make such impossible terms that no nation with an ounce of resistance left, could possibly consider them. If I have not misunderstood, whether Germany sues for peace or not, England is determined to deliberately and relentlessly murder in cold blood thousands and thousands of the best German manhood, sacrificing whatever numbers of her own and her allies' men she may deem necessary to attain her ends.

If England purposes to put such a plan into execution, then, in the name of humanity, it is time for the world to interfere. I, for one, protest against the carying out of this diabolical program and German people and sympathizers with German people and their wonderful civilization should do the same. O. P. LONG.

Fourth of July Casualties.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Having read your editorial, "Less Safety and Sanity," would thank you to publish what caused the death of 40 and 1466 wounded. Was this attributable to fireworks? Usually the lists published as a record after Independence day include drownings, automobile and railroad accidents.

Having been interested in the fireworks line for many years, also, active in introducing laws to modify the articles to be used by children for celebrating purposes, I felt gratified at the progress actually made in our city under the new law. There has been no death in the last two years that can be attributed to the celebrating with fireworks, and no serious accident.

Don't you think it is unfair to continuously harp and legislate against an industry that has helped make the celebration of Independence day more safe than ever, in fact, so that the press commented favorably? Why should this particular industry suffer for recklessness and carelessness in other amusements. There is no day passes but what automobile accidents occur, and especially so on Sunday or holidays, as well as drownings at rivers.

The comparison on any other Sunday or holiday of accidents or deaths, if tabulated in this country, will compare very favorably with what happens on Independence day. This will also be found to be the case in regard to fires.

GLORY AND TEARS.

Militarism forbids the wearing of mourning. Regiments of widows in weeds are a spectacle by no means calculated to buoy war spirit, but a terrible reminder of the cost. The cost of war is grief—the great cost that the innocent must pay. Compared to the broken hearts and broken spirits, the physical hardships, poverty, waste and even famine are sufferable.

Militarism can prevent the wearing of black crepe. It cannot prevent the travail of hearts; it cannot stay women's tears and the crying of children in the streets. Nor can militarism escape the responsibility, the guilt. The murderous ambitions of war lords make millions mourn.

To all of the war lords whose conflicting prides and selfish purposes have plunged Europe into conflict and grief and wrecked the happiness of a continent we commend the eloquent reflections of the late Robert G. Ingersoll upon Napoleon Bonaparte:

> A little while ago, I stood by the grave of the old Napoleon—a magnificent tomb of gilt and gold, fit almost for a dead deity—and gazed upon the sarcophagus of rare and nameless marble, where rest at last the ashes of that restless man. I leaned over the balustrade and thought about the career of the greatest soldier of the modern world.
> I saw him walking upon the banks of the Seine, contemplating suicide. I saw him at Toulon—I saw him putting down the mob in the streets of Paris—I saw him at the head of the army of Italy—I saw him crossing the bridge of Lodi with the tri-color in his hand—I saw him in Egypt in the shadows of the pyramids—I saw him conquer the Alps and mingle the eagles of France with the eagles of the crags. I saw him at Marengo, at Ulm and Austerlitz. I saw him in Russia, where the infantry of the snow and the cavalry of the wild blast scattered his legions like winter's withered leaves. I saw him at Leipsic in defeat and disaster—driven by a million bayonets back upon Paris—clutched like a wild beast—banished to Elba. I saw him escape and retake an empire by the force of his genius. I saw him upon the frightful field of Waterloo, where Chance and Fate combined to wreck the fortunes of their former king. And I saw him at St. Helena, with his hands crossed behind him, gazing out upon the sad and solemn sea.
> I thought of the orphans and widows he had made—of the tears that had been shed for his glory, and of the only woman who ever loved him, pushed from his heart by the cold hand of ambition. And I said I would rather have been a French peasant and worn wooden shoes. I would rather have lived in a hut and with a vine growing over the door, and the grapes growing purple in the kisses of the autumn sun. I would rather have been that poor peasant with my loving wife by my side, knitting as the day died out of the sky—with my children upon my knees and their arms about me—I would rather have been that man and gone down to the tongueless silence of the dreamless dust, than to have been that imperial impersonation of force and murder, known as "Napoleon the Great."

ANOTHER WALL STREET OUTRAGE.

The bankers of Wall street have committed another outrage. This time they compelled the New York City government to pledge itself to adopt the pay-as-you-go policy for a while, and quit blithely piling up bonded debt for unborn babes to stagger under, as a condition to underwriting a new $100,000,000 refunding loan. Incidentally, and merely as a hint to lesser American cities now contemplating possibly dispensable bond issues, this latest New York City issue will pay 6 per cent interest.

OIL AND DIPLOMACY IN MEXICO.

When Henry Lane Wilson, Taft's appointee as Ambassador to Mexico, began acting as if he owed his appointment to the great American Oil Trust, President Wilson recalled him.

When Sir Lionel Carden, British Minister to Mexico, became too active in defending Huerta's dictatorship as a means of safeguarding the British Oil Trust's Mexican interests, First Chief Carranza determined to send him out of Mexico, and has just done it.

Today, with most ungentlemanly disregard of the concessions which the two trusts obtained from the dictators, Diaz and Huerta, the Carranza Government is taxing all Mexican oil production 60 cents a ton, for the benefit of the people of Mexico.

This explains British and American stand-pat disgust with President Wilson's Mexican policy. Perhaps it also explains why Felix Diaz and other adventurers are getting funds to finance their incipient insurrection.

STATE WAREHOUSES IN TEXAS

Populism has achieved a triumph in Texas, most stalwart of Democratic states.

The one platform demand of the departed Populist party which had not yet been enacted into law by one or the other of the two leading parties was its demand for public warehouses, to issue guaranteed certificates of deposit upon nonperishable farm products, and make these certificates negotiable.

The State of Texas has gone into the public warehouse business.

Gov. Colquitt on Tuesday signed the bill to pass which he called the Legislature in special session.

Under the new law the State banking and insurance commissioner is required to rent or lease a building suitable for warehousing cotton, grain, hay and other nonperishable farm products in every city, village and neighborhood where one is needed. He can require local authorities to pay all or part of the cost of establishing and operating the warehouse, and he can accept such co-operation as a gift from a local committee of citizens.

But the State will conduct the business. Its agents will be in charge of the warehouses. It will receive farm products and issue negotiable or nonnegotiable certificates on them, at the owner's option. It will insure products stored in its warehouses against loss by fire or storm. It can be sued for loss like any private warehouseman. It will fix charges for its services, at each warehouse, calculated to earn operating cost—and not a penny more.

The State hasn't assumed a monopoly of warehousing. Anybody can compete who cares to—on those terms. In practice, of course, the State won't put competing warehouses into towns already provided by private enterprise.

The State warehouse law, of course, is a war measure. It is part of the fruit of the triumph won by the embattled farmers of Texas when last July they rose in revolt against the professional politicians and chose a farmer to take the governorship next January; it got its final impetus from the cotton crisis created by the war in Europe.

The new experiment may or may not work well. If it provides housing against the weather for the bulk of the 1914 Texas cotton crop, it will save enough depreciation due to rain, mud and snow to more than pay for all it may cost.

It will undoubtedly be a wonderful help in transforming a temporarily dead asset into commercially liquid currency.

JEWISH HEROISM.

The admission of Jews to commissions as officers in the Russian army and navy is a belated act of justice to the Russian Jews. Yet the concession is sweetened for these persecuted people by the fact that a Jew won it by heroism on the field of battle. The student Osnas, who saved the colors of his regiment at the risk of his life and was badly wounded, forced the Russian Government to recognize the Jew as a man with the highest qualities of manhood. It should convince Russia that men who display conspicuous loyalty, devotion and courage on the battlefield fighting for the country which deserves so little from them have full qualifications for citizenship.

The heroism of Osnas in Russia is matched in France by that of the younger Dreyfus, son of that Dreyfus whose honor and loyalty were vindicated after he had borne the cross of horrible injustice for years.

In the armies of Continental Europe there are 330,000 Jews serving under the colors of their nations. Russia alone, the worst persecutor of the Jews, has 250,000. Germany, which is next in barbaric prejudices, has 6000. Austria has 52,000.

The war gives the Jews another opportunity to demonstrate their loyalty to the country in which they live. But the demonstration ought not to be necessary. In all those countries where the Jews enjoy fellowship, equal rights and opportunity they have proved equal value with the best as citizens and public servants. Here in America where there are no race or class distinctions the Jews are conspicuous and valuable factors in all lines of activity. Men of no other blood surpass them in achievement in science, art, industry, finance and commerce. Their usefulness in public service has been proven in many instances. They are first in philanthropy and social service. No one doubts their loyalty and devotion not only to the country, but to its republican institutions and the principles of liberty and justice upon which they are founded. The Jews have a passion for freedom and justice.

We indulge the hope that the cloud of prejudice against the Jews which befogs some of the European peoples will pass with the smoke of war.

BABES IN HIGH OFFICE.

Speaking with all the authority and wisdom that his 28 years of life endow, Assistant Secretary of War Breckenridge, U. S. A., is reported in a London interview to have said that a nation cannot fight a trained army with raw material and that a foreign army of 200,000 could march through the United States from coast to coast.

He can be forgiven in all charity, since he was only 12 years old when the Spanish War was fought. But how does it happen that such a youngster holds the important post of Assistant Secretary of War? And why is he publicly discussing our military affairs in London?

BAR ON MEXICAN TRADE REMOVED.

Mexicans cheered wildly the news that the American contingent was to be withdrawn from Vera Cruz. Soldiers and marines of the little army of occupation, wearied of service at the hot seaport, cheered just as wildly.

The popularity of the order on both sides of the line is deserved. Civilians in this country have good reason to cheer. It ends a most trying phase in the relations between this country and Mexico, which have had many disagreeable phases. It not only suggests again the gratitude due Mr. Wilson for the restraint of the past which prevented the misfortune of worse crises, but points to the importance of plans for making the most of the opportunities that peace brings.

With the removal of the embargo on trade and the handicaps to investment which have continued for more than three years, a brighter era for Mexico begins. The war has settled issues from which that republic must benefit. The recuperation of a devastated country in the first months of peace is rapid. Accumulated needs must be supplied. The agents of industry and commerce should renew activity as the troops are withdrawn from Vera Cruz and from along the border.

If the war across the water brings us many disadvantages, the restoration of peace in the South can bring many compensating advantages.

BELGRADE MYSTERY SOLVED.

Austria insists that Russian successes against her troops are greatly magnified. But Austria has been doing a little magnifying herself. At the very beginning of the war she announced the capture of Belgrade and continued so strenuously to insist that she held it, in the face of facts indicating a contrary status, that the Belgrade mystery became one of the most puzzling paradoxes of the early war.

But it seems that Belgrade was not taken. So little has it been in jeopardy that the Servian garrison became discontented with defensive measures only. They have crossed the river and captured Semlin, the Austrian town on the opposite side of the Danube, and the besieging army. The Servian Government, which, like the French Government, fled from its capital prematurely under the stress of war, may now return.

JUST A MINUTE.

MR. ANTWINE ON THE DEMOCRATS

"THE Demmycrats have taken Maine," Mr. Antwine said. "They have put a Demmycratic guv'ner in to hold the place for them while they take the rest of the country, an' the Republicans have fallen back on their next line of defense. It looks to me like we're in for a long Demmycratic reign. The Democrats' luck has turned, an' who should bob up at about the same time on their side but the wisest man any party has had in the White House in the last 25 years. I'm dogged if I ever seen any party get blessed with any such combination of favorable circumstances as the Demmycratic party is being blessed with now.

"Take the President: There was as pure an experiment as was ever elevated to power. He looked like the wisest man since Socrates. The Demmycrats needed that kind of a man to last. What with their weaknesses an' their incapacity for gover'ment, they had either to find that kind of a man or get out. It wasn't much of a chance to take, but such as it was, the Demmycrats took it. They won. There ain't anybody in the country denying very hard that the President is a very wise man, an' the country is for the most part so enthusiastic about havin' him where he is that it can't remember which side it was on. We have tried him out upon almost every side by this time, an' my own personal verdict is that he is as foolish as a fox. That goes, too, for ev'rybody I know out here in the hills—men who didn't want to have no fool war with Mexico, an' wimmen who didn't want to see their menfolks dragged out of their homes an' fields to do no fightin'. It goes for Maine, I imagine, too. The returns look like it.

"Then take the war: Great Scott! If the Demmycrats could find out who started that war, they could afford to pay his expenses. What the Demmycrats needed after reducin' the tariff an' reforming the currency was something on which to blame the ordinary unfavorable political phenomena of any given period until their policies could prove themselves. The war came along in the nick of time. Nothing could be better. All any Demmycrat has to do is to keep the war in the foreground. It answers ev'rything. The Republican party, as the poet would say, is one with Nineveh an' Tyre. If I was running the National Museum I'd ketch a typical specimen like Uncle Joe Cannon an' have him stuffed."

By Lewis B. Ely.

"Them dark-complected instruments of Providence from Africky that call theirselves Turcos seems to be takin' quite a hand in this war. They git their pictures in the paper most every day," says Pevely.

"I reckon they must be some kind of Black Turks, but if I ain't mistaken they have got a whole lot of kin over here in this country and their pictures would look more natu'al to me if they was armed with razors. Down in Arkansas and the rest of the South I reckon these 'Turcos' would be ridin' mostly in Jim Crow cars—but Pullman sleepers ain't none too good fer 'em in France. It must be a great comfort to Booker Washington to see how the Allies take to 'em.

"Them 'Turcos' and their cullud cousins from the Belgerian Congo are shorely totin' the White Man's burden, and with Gineral Jack Johnson to lead their regiments they will do a military cakewalk around Europe that will make the goose step look like markin' time. After the war is over I reckon Col. Roosevelt will invite the whole passel of 'em to lunch.

"But it ain't no new sensation for the 'Turcos' to be shoulderin' the White Man's load thataway. Back in 1861 the Turcos in this country was fightin' side by side with the Allies—only the Germans was with 'em that time, instead of agin 'em.

"The news says that the French is now blackin' up their faces to look like Turcos so as to scare the enemy. Well, maybe in a few thousand years they won't have to make up so much for the part."

After which Pevely Sadders softly whistled a few bars of "All Coons Look Alike to Me."

BEAUTY CULTURE.

MARION LOUISE AND MRS. D.—A writer on blackheads says: For blackheads and pimples you must first take a course of treatment for the blood, then get rid of the former by keeping the skin perfectly clean, and using an astringent lotion to close the pores after the blackheads are pressed out. Pimples will leave of themselves. You can take cream of tartar, a teaspoonful every morning in a little water; this will make your face break out at first, but will purify the blood. Wash the face in warm water with soap every night, press out a few of the blackheads at a time and apply a lotion of a dram of boric acid in 4 ounces of witch hazel; let this dry on the skin. In the morning wash in cold water, no soap, and rub in a very little cucumber cold cream. (In diet avoid cooked grease and pastry; drink plenty of water—not at meals. Fruit and green vegetables are healthful—not to be eaten together.)

FALLING HAIR.—Massage (pronounced mas-sahzh, accent on sahzh) is rubbing, stroking, kneading, tapping, etc. In massaging the scalp the finger ends are used. The scalp is pinched, and is loosened as much as possible. One person finds a cure of falling hair in sprinkling dry salt over the scalp and massaging. Another uses salt water with success, moistening the scalp two or three times a week. Another, disheartened by the salt trial, finds a panacea in cold tea, accompanied by rubbing the scalp with the tips of the fingers in rotary motion. A tea made of yellow dock root is sometimes efficacious. Perhaps the great majority of failures in the use of remedies is laziness. Immediate results cannot be expected. When roots are dead, tonics are useless. A popular prescription consists of one-half ounce oil of mace and one pint deodorized alcohol. Two more "excellent tonics:" Mix enough sulphur and water together to form a thin mixture; add a few drops of your favorite perfume, and apply to scalp as often as convenient, massaging well into roots of hair with tips of fingers. Or mix together 1 ounce glycerin, 1 ounce bay rum, 1 pint strong sage tea and apply every other night, rubbing well into scalp. Both tonics are fine for falling hair. Pure air and sunshine must not be forgotten.

ETIQUETTE.

BRIDE-TO-BE.—Church wedding: Where there are two bridemaids they enter first, singly or together, as the bride prefers; maid of honor directly after; matron next, ring bearer, and then flower girl, who is to sprinkle blossoms in the path for the bride, who enters last on arm of nearest male relative. Bridegroom does not come in from front of church. He enters through vestry and with best man comes out of vestry room with minister, standing at left side a little lower down until the bride approaches, when he steps down to meet her and stands at her right hand during ceremony. Father steps back and down to wait for that part of the service where the question is asked as to "Who gives this woman away?" when he steps forward and places his daughter's hand in that of the husband-to-be. The matron of honor stands at the left of the bride, the maid of honor beside her, the ring bearer to the right, where the bridegroom can easily reach the ring when the proper time arrives. In leaving after the ceremony, the wedded couple turn and the bride takes the bridegroom's left arm, the flower girl walking ahead to scatter flowers in their path; best man escorts matron of honor and first groomsman the maid of honor, while the ushers escort the two bridemaids. The ring bearer may walk with the flower bearer, or, if preferred, directly behind bride. Bridal party leaves church in directly reverse order to entering; that is, bride and husband walk first, attendants after and parents following.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

PAULINE.—Heavenly hash: Slice 2 or 3 dozen marshmallows very thin; add cup chopped nut meats and half as much candied cherries, chopped; mix into pint whipped cream and set on ice at least an hour. Some like better to mix cream and marshmallows, chill, turn out and decorate with nuts and cherries.

C. F.—Good catsup: Boil bushel of tomatoes 1 hour, then strain; add 1 big handful salt, 5 large white onions (grated), 1 cup vinegar, small bottle mustard, 10 cents' worth mixed catsup spice, scant teaspoon ground red pepper, half cup sugar, or more if liked. Boil from 6 to 7 hours. Bottle tightly. To make corks fit in catsup bottles, take those that are a little large and boil them in clear water 2 minutes. Insert them in the mouths of the bottles while hot, as they expand in cooling, thus making perfectly tight stoppers.

A. G.—Mock turtle soup: Have butcher prepare calf's head; put it, with feet, into soup kettle with gallon cold water; skim as it begins to simmer; add bunch of soup herbs, 2 carrots, scraped and chipped, 4 onions, 2 sticks celery, and season to taste with salt and pepper; boil about 3 hours; take out meat and press into a cake; let soup boil again 2 hours; remove bones, strain soup, and when cold skim off all grease. Next day cut pressed meat into dice, flavor soup with glass of sherry wine and juice of a lemon, heat all half an hour and serve with garnish or egg balls This soup should always be made the day before serving

European Comment on the War

"ONE SUPREME DUTY."

London Daily Telegraph: The Man of Blood who has let loose the fury of war upon the Continent must be beaten to his knees, and it is for Great Britain to be one of the prime instruments of vengeance. The main energies of the nation must be turned to the raising, equipment and training of army after army, until the work is done. There is reason to fear that some injury has been unwittingly—though with the best intentions—done by raising the cry of "Business as usual," in so far as it has led people to underestimate the military task before us. For the one supreme duty is that the manhood of Great Britain shall rise to strike the tyrant down. Let, then, every man who possesses influence with his fellows work now as he has never worked before

THE NEW CONSCRIPTION.

London Daily Herald: It is loudly asserted that the employer who, by the threat of dismissal, drives young men into the army, is doing a great and patriotic service to the country. We challenge this statement in its entirety. In our judgment this crisis will see no more mean or contemptible action.

The nation must make up its mind with regard to the present position. If the call of the Government is to be obeyed and troops are to be poured into France, then the facts must be faced. It will mean calling upon the able-bodied, without distinction of class, to join the ranks. Failing this, let us acknowledge ourselves wrong, bring back our troops and end the war.

But the mean and cowardly policy of pretending there is no conscription and simultaneously applying and applauding this pressure of starvation, must be stopped without delay.

ITALIANS DIVIDED.

Berlin Tageblatt: The Rome correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt points out that, in contradistinction to the violently Frankophile Corrier della Siera, the influential Giornale d'Italia, which has a large circulation in Rome and Central Italy, is decidely pro-German. According to this writer, the intellectual circles of Italy do not share the prevailing sentiment against Germany, which is particularly strong in the Socialist centers, notably in Milan and the so-called Red Romagna, where hatred against the tedeschi is cultivated as a sort of national sport. Foreign diplomats, the writer alleges, have all along stooped to pandering to this prejudice, and he recalls the fact that Crispi, in his day, had the courage to accuse publicly the representative of the French Government in Italy of supporting, financially as well as morally, the anti-Austrian (now equivalent to anti German) propaganda.

GREEKS FOR GERMANY.

Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger: The Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger prints a letter signed by a number of Greek students in that city, expressing their entire sympathy with the German cause, and saying: "We realize that Greece must seek in Germany her natural protector against the threatening Slavic danger, and we hope that the victory of the German arms may result in the erection of an unassailable barrier against Slavic greed, to the benefit of more than one of the smaller states." The same number of the Lokal-Anzeiger contains also letters from two eminent Greek scholars to a professor in the University of Berlin written in a similar strain. In one of the letters the writer says (in Greek): "I consider Germany my fatherland just as much as Hellas."

DANISH NEUTRALITY.

Copenhagen Politiken: Strictly neutral as we are, we consider it our duty to publish, as far as it is in our power, all the news that reaches us. When we see that the London Times warns its readers against telegrams from Copenhagen because they have a 'German coloring,' while at the same time Wolff's Bureau asks us to publish no telegrams sent by Reuter or the Agence Havas, we are quite pleased. The dissatisfaction of both parties shows that we have fully preserved our 'intellectual neutrality.' One thing is certain: Copenhagen must on no account become a center of rumors of one kind or another. Of us at least it should never be said that from this country emanate false reports, and nothing of the sort has hitherto been done. The proper course for the Danish press is, even if telegrams are now and then accompanied by explanatory comments, never to express a decided view until truth has emerged from chaos, and this is exactly what the leading Danish journalists are doing.

Our New Treaties

GIVE REASON A CHANCE.

Chicago Tribune: Treaties of peace and arbitration are valuable manifestations of public sentiment. They also help to create and deepen right sentiment. They are educational and they foster habits of thought that make for sobriety and moderation. The Bryan commission treaties are designed to insure delay and give reason and common sense a chance. If such treaties had been in force in Europe last July, and if Austria and Servia, to begin with, had lived up to them and appointed a high joint commission of inquiry, the war might have been averted.

BIND MANY MILLIONS.

Indianapolis News: Four great peace treaties were today signed at Washington. By these the United States will agree with Great Britain, France, Spain and China, to settle, as far as possible, all differences that may arise between them by arbitration. The treaties, as everyone knows, provide that all disputes shall be referred to a commission for investigation, and that the investigation may continue for a year, during which time there shall be no war, and no warlike move. Nineteen such treaties have already been ratified by the Senate, and there is no doubt that those signed today will also be ratified.

With these in force, it is believed that the peace of the United States will forever be assured with nations having a population of 948,000,000. It is felt, too, that a further effect will be an absolute insurance against even the remotest danger of being drawn suddenly into the war now raging in Europe. Of that there is, it is true, small probability. But it will be just as well to shut every possible door. Such an example as this ought to have a great influence in world affairs.

BULWARK AGAINST WAR.

Ohio State Journal: Secretary Bryan has a good record to send down into history, and especially that part relating to the peace treaties. He has negotiated 22 of them and is about to add four more, that four being England, France, Spain and China. So we will have 26 peace treaties that will stand as a bulwark against war. These treaties propose, when diplomacy fails to settle any question between this and other countries, there shall be an investigation by accredited agents on both sides of the controversy, to see if the dispute cannot be peacefully settled, and in the meantime the two nations shall refrain from all warlike movements.

The idea is to investigate and during the time necessary to confer the war fever will let up. It will every time. Give the passions time to cool and they will cool. All the nations, including those now at war in Europe, except Austria-Hungary, have signified their consent to enter into this arrangement. On the basis of these treaties, the United States need never go to war. It can stop building its dreadnaughts and dismiss its navy. There will be no more need of any ships, except the ships of peace.

Can Peace Be Made Now?

"NO PAPER PEACE."

New York World: Peace is no more possible in Europe now than peace would have been possible in our own Civil War before the issues of slavery and secession were determined for all time. Out of this war must come more than a mere truce—more than a paper peace. There must come a new emancipation proclamation, striking from civilization the shackles of military autocracy. Without a new birth of freedom all this sacrifice and suffering and bloodshed will have been in vain.

GERMANS NO QUITTERS.

Philadelphia Record: Those persons who are talking about peace because the Kaiser's armies have suffered a reverse in France doubtless mean well, but they are really adding insult to injury. Nothing has so far happened in the war that would indicate that Germany has any other intention than fighting to the bitter end. When the German army of invasion came within twenty miles of Paris there was no talk of peace on the part of the French Government. Indeed, it was said that hostilities would continue, even though Paris was captured and their armies driven back to the Pyrenees. The world knows that the Germans are no quitters, and will fight on no less tenaciously than the allies. Peace now would be an absurdity, and would pave the way for unending future strife. Whatever the cost, it is best that the war should continue until a decisive result is reached.

BRITAIN STANDS FIRM.

Washington Times: A few days ago the Times pointed out that Great Britain could not accept a peace that did not contain guarantees against a resumption of effort in Germany to achieve naval equality. In other words, Britain will not have conquered a telling victory in this war until the German war fleet shall have been destroyed or dismantled. For Germany to get off with her navy intact, and her heart filled with the grim purpose of revenge, would mean another test of strength, perhaps a generation hence; another generation, meanwhile, of strenuous and expensive preparation, of increasing competitive naval programs. Britain, it was suggested, cannot afford peace on terms that do not guarantee her against that menace in the future.

That this view is taken by the British Government has been indicated by the expressions, from the very beginning, of Grey, Asquith, Kitchener and other leaders. Now comes from London an analysis of British public opinion, which states exactly the same case; the British nation stands firmly for a program of forcing the war to the point of complete subjugation of Germany, of utter destruction of the German militarist system, of destruction or dismantlement of the German fleet.

"SCRAPS OF PAPER."

Chicago Herald: The representatives of the nations which issue victoriously from this war will be confronted by a different situation. The old fetishism of treaties has vanished in the light of plain facts. Treaties bind as long as they are convenient. They vanish into thin air when they are not.

Who doubts it? On Thursday Turkey tore up treaties with all the nations of Europe with the cynical comment: 'This war is Turkey's opportunity." At the beginning of the war Germany tore up treaties guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemburg.

On Friday was published from German sources royal correspondence purporting to show how the Franco-German conflict might have been avoided. And this correspondence shows that Germany's idea was to get England to persuade France not to keep her treaty with Russia.

These facts the representatives of the nations in council must take into account. They will naturally say: "We have fought this war to the bitter end to insure lasting peace. A lasting peace means guarantees. What guarantees are there, in the light of history, that are worth considering?

"Not treaties, certainly. Not the exhaustion of one side, for exhaustion is sure to be repaired. Not a new application of the old 'balance of power' theory, because that theory has crumbled to pieces. Not anything that has yet been tried, for everything that has yet been tried has only served to lead the world to the greatest war in history."

Proceeding along this logical line, considering the naked facts, they must, if they want the peace which they make to be lasting and beneficent, be irresistibly driven to the conclusion that there is but one guarantee that promises results. That is "disarmament."

ESSENTIALS OF PEACE.

Philadelphia Record: Militarism is dying, thinks Secretary Bryan; "the convulsions through which Europe is passing are its death throes." The responses of European statesmen to the pacific suggestions informally communicated to them during the past week through the representatives of this Government do not inspire a very lively hope of this consummation, however. Their utterances are too reminiscent of Cato's cry, "Carthage must be destroyed." Of course, there is no agreement as to which Power must be sacrificed on the altar of peace. Each of the spokesmen of the nations insists that the menace of war must be eliminated as a condition precedent, so that there may be a permanent peace and no mere unstable truce; and each of the militant Powers regards the other as the menace.

Despite the apologists for huge armaments, who claim that peace and security depend upon a martial array of battalions on land and dreadnaughts on the sea, militarism inevitably defeats its professed ends; and it constitutes the only real menace. And when militarism is mentioned in this connection no particular brand of that "ism" is to be understood. German militarism is no more a menace to France than Russian militarism is to Germany. The declaration in Parliament of the First Lord of the British Admirality: "It is our life against Germany's!" is identical in spirit with the German naval toast: "Dem tag."

The essential to a permanent peace in Europe is disarmament; not the disarmament of the Power or Powers which some other Powers consider to be the enemies of peace, but disarmament all around.

NO PEACE IN SIGHT.

Chicago Journal: For the allies to accept Wilhelm's terms now would be a blunder so vast that no statesman worth the name would consider it. As well might the Federal Government have recognized the Confederacy and made peace on Jefferson Davis' terms after the seven days' battle on the peninsula.

The war will continue until one side is beaten to its very knees, or until both sides are exhausted. There is no present prospect of a defeat sufficiently decisive to end the struggle, and in spite of the frightful strain, exhaustion is a long ways off. The American Government, very properly, will transmit peace proposals from either side, but to look for immediate results from such proposals is to indulge in willful self-deception.

PEACE THROUGH WAR.

Philadelphia Ledger: It is no paradox to say that sometimes the surest hope of peace is through war. There were those who wished, after North and South had been in arms for a year, to end our own Civil War. Great sacrifices would have been avoided, many lives would have been saved, had this been done. But in that case the great issue for which the war was fought would have remained unsettled. Sooner or later the great conflict would have been renewed. Was not a final settlement worth what it cost? The issues in Europe today are as vital in many respects as those of 1860. How can any peace be a real peace if it ignores them?

Meeting the Cotton Crisis

NO VALORIZATION.

Ohio State Journal: The cotton people down South have about given up any hope of the general Government providing them any relief through the valorization of their crops. The administration regards this as a personal affair, or at most a state matter, which is beyond the reach of the Government to cure. For the Government to interfere would be a stretch of paternalism which, if persisted in, would have to go to the rescue of other industries, until the nation would become identified with private venture and perplexed with unheard-of claims. There is so strong an inclination to depend upon the Government for relief when trouble comes that it really takes the nerve and spirit out of business. This remark does not apply to the railroads, for is there not some obligation on the part of the Government, following its interference with transportation affairs? It is well that these matters should be discussed preparatory to the Government getting out of the domination of paternalism.

REDUCE THE ACREAGE.

Dallas News: In buying a bale one ought to make sure, first, that it is a bale genuinely distressed. The resources of this movement are not so abundant that we can afford to use them for the accommodation of farmers who are not seriously in need of relief. And, for another thing, one buying a bale ought to impose the promise, as a condition of the purchase, that the farmer from whom the bale is purchased will reduce his cotton acreage next year. This also ought to be a condition imposed on any loans made by the banks with cotton as a security. Of course, there are no legal means by which these agreements can be enforced, or at least none that are practicable. Still, we believe that a large majority of farmers making this pledge would redeem it, in which case most of these accommodation purchases and most of the loans made on cotton, can be merged into a force working for a reduction of the cotton acreage next year, as well as one tending to sustain the value of the cotton grown next year.

HOLD TEN PER CENT.

Memphis Commercial Appeal: The buy-a-bale of cotton plan, recently inaugurated, is meeting with quite general approval and with the enthusiasm and patriotism that is back of it, the plan bids fair to take quite a large volume of cotton entirely off the market for a year, or until the price has advanced to or above 10 cents a pound.

But even its most ardent advocates admit that the plan will probably prove inadequate to care for the entire surplus of probably 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 bales in the present crop. The founders of the plan announced at the outset that the movement was started to work in co-operation with any other worthy movement that might be launched for the saving of the crop to the South.

But the effort bids fair to relieve to a great extent the distress of the planters of the South. The amount advanced is about twice that expected from the Government at the time when cotton dealers were soliciting Government aid. In other words, if the movement succeeds in buying 1,000,000 bales the amount of money advanced to planters will equal $25 a bale on 2,000,000 bales of cotton.

This being the case, why can't the farmers of the South hold this other million bales off the market? Or, better still, why can't they hold 10 per cent of the crop? It would seem an easy thing to do. Ten per cent means only one bale out of every 10 bales produced.

In other words, if a farmer has produced 10 bales of cotton, let him store one of those bales right at home on the farm; if a big planter has grown 100 bales, let him store 10 bales at home. If the crop this year amount to 15,000,000 bales, such a holding movement on the part of the growers would result in 1,500,000 bales being held entirely off the market.

Maine Election

DEMOCRATS HOLD THEIR OWN.

New York World: It is difficult to make just comparisons from the Maine returns, because there was a Republican-Progressive fusion on the State ticket in 1912, and the presidential vote in November of that year was much smaller than the vote for State officers and Congressmen in September. But it is plain that the Democrats have more than held their own in an off-year election, when the tide ought to be running against them at its strongest. It is also plain that public confidence in President Wilson's leadership has intensified rather than weakened.

But all elation over the Maine returns cannot be monopolized by the Democrats. The dwindling Progressive vote must be generally encouraging to the Republicans, especially as Mr. Roosevelt took personal charge of the State campaign. With a decrease of approximately 30,000 in the Progressive votes and a corresponding increase in the Republican vote, it is apparent that the third-term party is rapidly crumbling to pieces. It will still serve to divide the anti-Democratic vote in many places in November, but all hope of reassembling the fragments into a militant political organization must soon be abandoned.

A WILSON TRIUMPH.

Louisville Evening Post: The result of the election in Maine yesterday is a complete refutation of the claims of the Republicans and Progressives that the country is turning against President Wilson and the policies of the Democratic administration.

Maine has for many years been considered one of the most rock-ribbed Republican states in the country. Even in 1912, when the whole country was turning against the Republican party, as led by Mr. Taft, the Republicans managed to elect a Governor in Maine in the September election. Following the inauguration of President Wilson and the passage of the Underwood tariff bill, the Republicans of Maine boasted that the tariff policy of the Democrats had destroyed Democratic prospects in that part of New England.

PROGRESSIVE LOSS.

Indianapolis News: The significant feature of the election is the great loss of the Progressives, it being no less than 30,000 votes, whereas the Republicans gained 31,000 and the Democrats 10,000. The Roosevelt vote in 1912 was 47,948, while that cast yesterday for Gardner, the Progressive candidate, is only 17,463. Yet Maine is one of the strongest Progressive states in the country. Mr. Roosevelt made a campaign for Gardner, and yet out of a total vote of more than 136,000, he received less than 18,000 votes. A distinguished Progressive orator last night sneered at the mere suggestion that the Progressives were "coming back." Well, they are moving in some direction away from the Bull Moose herd. Perhaps some of them in Maine supported the Democratic candidates. Certainly many of them voted the Republican ticket. Few of them voted their own ticket.

Society

Customs Change With Time—Once, Prenuptial Affairs Were All the Go and the Bride-Elect Was in Every Gay Whirl—Nowadays, the Fashionable Bride-Elect Hides Out Till All the Flurry and Scurry and Worry Is Over.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

HOW customs revert! In our grandmother's day, maybe not as long ago as that, it was regarded bad form for a prospective bride to appear in public after her wedding cards were out. Later it became the fashion for each one in the bridal party to give some kind of entertainment. Even the wedding rehearsal became a function when all returned to the bride's home for supper or luncheon, whatever the time might be.

There were luncheons, dinners, dinner dances and theater parties, given by the bridemaids and groomsmen and by all the friends and relations of the bride and bridegroom-elect, up to the very day of the wedding when the bridal party, at least, would be sent out to one of the country clubs for a luncheon and for most of the day—to be got rid of, of course, so the house could be turned over to the caterers and decorators.

Now comes one of the most important weddings of the season, that of Miss Helen Maloy and Charles W. Wall Jr., and not one affair in her honor has she accepted.

Miss Ada Randolph started the fashion several years ago when she married Harry Potter, but in her case there were parties for the bridemaids and groomsmen which she did not attend.

Since then it is not unusual to find a bride who has declined all entertainments before her wedding.

It is a custom, however, which will not become universal, you may be sure, because there is so much glamour about prenuptial festivities, especially when some of the attendants come from afar, that not many brides can resist the temptation of a last gay whirl before she takes the matrimonial leap.

When Miss Dorothy Wall married Frank Liebke she announced she would rather be entertained after she came home from her wedding trip, as did some other recent brides.

Whether or not the individual cases will become sufficiently numerous to make a custom remains to be seen. The odds are against it, though, and you may rest assured the change is only passing fancy.

The marriage of Miss Alice Marie Doering, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guido Doering, and niece of the late George S. Johnston, to James Hendrix Stubblefield, took place yesterday morning at the family residence in Carondelet. The ceremony was performed by the father of the groom, the Rev. J. P. Stubblefield, in the presence of members of the immediate families. After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Stubblefield departed for an automobile tour. They will be at home after Oct. 1 at 6726 Vermont avenue.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Stanion to Arthur P. Strong took place at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Judson A. Stanion of 1381 Hamilton avenue, on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Only intimate friends were present. The Rev. S. H. Woodrow, D. D., officiated.

The couple departed for a honeymoon in Northern Michigan, after which they will make their residence at 7300 Oglesby avenue, Chicago.

MRS. CHARLES C. SPINK of 5235 Lindell boulevard has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Fritzi Spink and J. le Beau Christy.

The wedding will be in the fall and will be a very quiet affair on account of the recent death of the bride's father.

Miss Spink received her education at Mary Institute and Ogontz and spent some time traveling in Europe.

She never has been formally presented to society, but was seen at a number of parties last winter. Mr. Christy is the son of Mrs. Mary Christy of 4 North King's highway.

A special showing of attractive hats from $8 to $15; also the latest in dancing caps, hair ornaments and bridal wreaths, near wedding announcements. Sally Meagher, 801 Century Building.

Mrs. E. M. Sharp of 3732 Washington boulevard and her daughter, Miss Mildred, Mrs. Sharp's mother, Mrs. Elvira Manewal, and Miss Carrie Manewal have returned from Atlantic City, where they spent the summer. Miss Sharp will make her bow to society this season.

CARDS have been received here from Mr. and Mrs. William Edward Mitchell for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Marion Ruth Mitchell, and Howard Ives Siegrist, which will take place in Lio Chapel, Hastings-on-the-Hudson, Oct. 3.

the bridegroom-elect is a kinsman of the late Halsey C. Ives, the son of Mrs. Minnie Rowley Ives, formerly of St. Louis, and the grandson of Mrs. George A. Rowley.

After their honeymoon trip, Mr. Siegrist and his bride will reside in Hartford, Conn.

Opening and model exhibit Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. A. Schumack, Ladies' Tailor and Dressmaker, 856 Century Buildings.

Mrs. William C. Stickney of 46 Westmoreland place and her daughter, Miss Mildred Stickney, who have been spending the summer in Europe, will land Wednesday on the Olympic at New York. They will arrive in St. Louis the last of the week.

The engagement of Mrs. Stickney's son, W. Arthur Stickney, to Miss Sally Currier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Currier of Boston, has been announced.

Miss Currier and her sister were guests of Miss Carol Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman Miller, in July.

The marriage probably will be in the late autumn and will be an important social event.

ANOTHER interesting engagement announced during the past week was Miss Anita Gaebler's to Walter Knight.

Miss Gaebler is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Gaebler of 5336 Cabanne avenue. Like many girls of the day, who go in for something seriously, she has made dancing a study and for several years has been in demand as an attraction at fashionable charity affairs. She was chosen for the Maya dance in the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis last May, when she danced on the top of a revolving platform.

She studied while in Paris two years ago and so artistic and graceful is she that she passed out of the amateur class some time ago.

Miss Gaebler made her debut several seasons ago, when she was one of the maids of honor at the Veiled Prophets' ball, and will be a maid again this year.

The marriage will be in the autumn.

ONE of the interesting weddings of the week was that of Miss Hazel Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Meyer of 5115 Westminster place, and Julius Schweig. It was celebrated Wednesday evening in the rose parlor of the Buckingham Hotel.

The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Leon Harrison of Temple Israel at 6 o'clock in the presence of a large assemblage.

The bride entered the room with her father, who gave her in marriage. Her gown was of ivory satin with an over dress of rose point lace. She wore a cloud veil of tulle and carried a bouquet of white roses and maiden-hair fern tied with streamers of tulle.

The bridal procession included little Mildred Meyer, flower girl, Misses Alma Meyer and Renate Schwieg, bridemaids. They were gowned alike in pink taffeta frocks, trimmed with deep flounces of white lace, and carried pink roses.

The ushers were Carrol and Jeffry Meyer and the bridegroom's brother, Eugene Schweig, was best man.

Mr. Schwieg and his bride have gone for an Eastern honeymoon trip. When they return they will arrange for their home.

Miss Stacia Kearney and Lillie Kaut have returned from New York, where they attended the fall opening and model exhibits. Metropolitan Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nicolaus of 2149 South Grand avenue and their daughter, Miss Elsa Nicolaus, have returned from their summer home at Lake Geneva, Wis.

The engagement of Miss Lenora Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Walsh of 3867 Cleveland avenue, and Claud M. Daniels was announced at the tea Sept. 11 given by Mrs. F. T. Wood of 5308 Maple avenue in honor of the bride-elect. The marriage will take place in the spring.

Mrs. I. H. Rivenburgh of 3906 Hartford street has sent out cards announcing the marriage of her daughter, Miss Jane Rivenburgh, to Charles F. Nelson, which took place Sept. 9 at the parsonage of the Delmar Avenue Baptist Church, the Rev. J. E. Dillard officiating.

Mr. Nelson and his bride have gone to the Ozarks for their honeymoon and will make their home in St. Louis upon their return.

Miss Adrea M. Gregg of 4540 Oakland avenue is visiting her aunt, Mrs. John Kinney of Kansas City, Mo.

Prof. and Mrs. L. Breuque, 844 North Newstead avenue, and their daughter, returned home after spending the summer in Minnesota, where they have a cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben B. Linton of 3668 Lindell boulevard, and their children are making a tour of California and other parts of the West.

Colonel and Mrs. M. Shoenberg have returned from Charlevoix, Mich., after spending the summer at their cottage, Edgecrest, and are again located at the Washington Hotel.

Showing Monday newest effects in velvet hats. Hughes Millinery, 4217 Olive.

ONE more artist, Miss Adele Schulenberg, the St. Louis sculptor, has announced her engagement. Her betrothal to Charles F. Gleeson was made known last week and the wedding probably will follow closely upon the announcement.

Miss Schulenberg studied here at the School of Fine Arts and in Berlin, besides having traveled in the art centers of Europe.

Her work has attracted a great deal of attention, especially her portraits in clay and statuettes of children. She belongs to the coterie of artists which includes Misses Nancy Coonsman, Caroline Risque and several of the Potters who have attained distinction in arts.

Mr. Gleeson also is an artist, an etcher of note.

Miss Schulenberg is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Schulenberg of 3213 Russell avenue and a niece of Edward Mallinckrodt, whose portrait in bronze she did several years ago in one of her best pieces of work.

Tightens Her Skin—Loses Her Wrinkles

"I want to tell you how easily I got rid of my wrinkles," writes Luella Marsh. "While in London a friend, much envied because of her youthful looks, gave me a formula for a homemade preparation which has the effect of instantly tightening the skin, thus smoothing out wrinkles and furrows.

"The principal ingredient is powdered saxolite, which can be had at drug stores here. An ounce of saxolite is dissolved in a half-pint witch hazel. After bathing my face in this but once the transformation was so marvelous I looked years younger. Even the deep crow's feet were affected, and the annoying creases about my neck. It seems difficult to believe anything could produce such results. Several to whom I recommended the recipe have been similarly helped, one an elderly lady whose cheeks had become quite baggy."—Social Mirror.—ADV.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

L. L. K. asks: "What will whiten the skin, as I have a very muddy, yellow complexion and would like to have it cleared?"

Answer: Obtain one-grain quinoxide tablets and take them as per the directions with each sealed tube for several months if necessary. There is nothing better.

S. B. C. asks: "I am annoyed and embarrassed by my total inability to keep my hair looking respectable. It is stubborn and strings like the frayed end of a rope Please advise what is best."

Answer: This same trouble afflicts a large number of my correspondents, and to all I have recommended the toilet necessity which I use, called wavolene. Applying it to the hair keeps it curly or waving for days at a time.

Belva C. asks: "What can one do to increase the growth and thickness of the hair and eyebrows?"

Answer: Make a hair tonic containing no alcohol. Use one-half oz. concentrated hairwand powder to a pint of pure water. Shake the mixture and twice daily rub into the scalp with the finger tips. For the eyebrows, use a level teaspoonful of the hairwand powder mixed with one ounce of white vaseline. Massage the eyebrows gently every night with this balm. You can soon appreciate its marvelous action. The powder is obtained in sealed tubes.

Miss C. C. asks: "What sort of massage will fill out hollow cheeks? When I take a deep breath a great hollow appears in the front of my neck. Can I not fill out this hollow in cheeks and neck?"

Answer: If you are not too impatient you can readily do so by feeding the tissues with an emollient skin and flesh food such as gloriol emollient, the purest and best cold cream I know of. I use it daily and have for several years, and results are certain as with no other. Apply and slap the cheeks and neck vigorously until the skin flushes. Then rub gently for five or 10 minutes. Do this morning and night. Your complexion will improve marvelously.

Newlywed asks: "If I stay indoors my complexion is good, and perhaps pretty, but upon exposure my nose reddens and my chin and cheeks chap and the skin flakes, making me positively ugly. How can I overcome this?"

Answer: In cold weather I formerly had the same experience. In recent years I never go out into the weather, summer or winter, until I have massaged my face with gloriol balm, a pure, fragrant, greaseless, vanishing cream. I advise you to use it, as there is nothing so good.

Mrs. A. C. asks: "I want some massage to thoroughly cleanse the skin pores. If I rub soap on my face it becomes very red and tender. Also something to shampoo the hair."

Answer: I recommend a "water massage" with gloriol glowene. It is better than "ordinary toilet soaps," and is the best cleanser of the deep pores. It is a compound of saponified vegetable oils.

A. G. R. writes: "I am entirely too fleshy for my height. I would like to reduce, but am afraid to try the many 'fat cures' I see advertised."

Answer: It is not wise to purchase and use medicines of a doubtful or uncertain quality, but the treatment which I recommend is prescribed by physicians whom I know, and it is both effective and prompt in action. Obtain a sealed tube 5-grain tablets phythyrin and take as per the directions. You may safely reduce 30 pounds in a few weeks.

Mayme R. asks: "Will you please tell me what to use to cure dandruff and improve the luster of my hair?"

Answer: Obtain a 4-oz. jar of plain yellow minyol and massage it over the scalp at least every two weeks. This is splendid treatment for the hair and scalp. Professional hairdressers use it in preference to any other dandruff cure.

Mrs. H. W. writes: "I would be most grateful if you can give me a formula to fill out hollows in the neck and shoulders Also something to increase the bust."

Answer: It is possible to fill the hollows with good, firm flesh and develop the bust by a regular use of medicated venosol, which is marketed in sealed tubes. This is widely used by actresses and society women. Full directions for home use are contained in each tube. I advise, also, if very thin, to begin taking 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets.

Mrs. R. asks: "Would you advise tar soap to shampoo with?"

Answer: No, I would not use any ordinary soap, as they contain free alkali. Gloriol liquid shampoo is my favorite. It is superior to anything on the market for cleansing and beautifying the hair.

Betty asks: "How can a real thin person become plump?"

Answer: There is a remedy called 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets that quickly and surely induces greater nutrition and consequent flesh. Obtained in sealed packages with full directions.

Anna R. asks: "Will you please recommend a high-grade face powder for me?"

Answer: Gloriol face powder is pure and refined, and is superior to many imported or French powders. It comes in pink, white and brunette.—ADVERTISEMENT.

BAZAR RAISES $1700 FOR MOUNT ST. ROSE HOSPITAL

Sisters of St. Mary Say Work Has So Grown That New Building Will Be Necessary.

The Sisters of St. Mary, in charge of Mount St. Rose Hospital, announce that the proceeds of the recent bazar were $1700. The money will be used in caring for dependent wards. The charity work of the Sisters at Mount St. Rose, the only hospital in St Louis devoted exclusively to the care of those afflicted with tuberculosis, receives the support of people from every part of the city. The institution was established 14 years ago in a nine-room cottage, as an experiment. The fresh air treatment proved such a success that in less than five years a new hospital was built. The work has grown to such an extent that larger and more modern sanatorium and hospital accommodations are needed, and the Sisters of St. Mary will soon commence building a new hospital.

Mount St. Rose Rospital is at 9101 South Broadway, and is situated on a hill near the Mississippi River. Spacious, well shaded grounds surround the building.

While the hospital is a private institution, no worthy persons are denied admittance and care, if it is possible to accommodate them and care for them in comfort.

Sufferers from Rupture can be cured without surgical operation. Dr. W. A. Lewin, Star Building, 12th and Olive.

GIRL SAYS SHE GOT GOODS AS "DAUGHTER LOREETO"

Former Telephone Operator Charged With False Pretense Is Out on $800 Bond.

Miss Margery Liebing, 20 years old, of 1612 Biddle street, formerly a telephone operator, arrested Friday while obtaining merchandise under false pretenses, has been nicknamed "Daughter Loretto" by the police because of the manner in which she obtained goods.

Miss Liebing told the police that upon entering a store she would pass by the bundle counter and glance at the names on stickers on parcels. Then she said she would order certain articles, stating she was "daughter Loretto" of "Mrs So and So," and have it charged, carrying the package away with her.

She was arrested when she changed her formula and tried to impersonate a Mrs. J. E. Carroll of 2426 Coleman street. A clerk who knew Mrs. Carroll caused Miss Liebing's arrest. She told the police the names of several women whose "daughter Loretto" she had claimed to be. She is out on $800 bond, signed by State Senator Mike Kinney.

GIVES TWO VERSIONS OF ROBBERY, IS ARRESTED

Tailor's Employe Says Man Stole Money, Locked Him in Store and Escaped.

Ben Wishnuff, employed at Joseph Rosenblatt's tailor shop at 2204 Franklin avenue, yesterday told the police of the Dayton Street District two versions of how an armed daylight burglar robbed him of $9.50 and stole his employer's key and then locked Wishnuff in the store.

Wishnuff told a policeman that after the robber had taken the money and keys, he locked the front door from the outside, walked east on Franklin avenue to Twenty-second street and turned south.

Wishnuff said he ran to the back door, where the robber confronted him with a revolver and ordered him back, locking the back door and making him a captive.

He said he was released by Rosenblatt, who returned from lunch half an hour later. At the station Wishnuff told Capt. Singleton a different version. He said that the robber locked the front door from the inside, ordered him not to make an outcry and then locked the back door from the outside and escaped.

WHY HEADS OF HAIR ARE SO DIFFERENT

“Nature intended that every woman should have a wealth of beautiful hair—hair that can be arranged into an should have a wealth of beautiful ates her beauty,” writes Betty Dean, beauty authority. “But so much depends upon the method of care, especially cleansing, that many fail to claim their right. If you use makeshifts, instead of something designed for shampooing only, the scalp and hair-follicles may suffer injury and the hair grow dull, brittle and fall out. I have found that the easiest to use and most economical shampoo mixture is made by dissolving one teaspoonful canthrox (which I get from any drug store) in a cup hot water. It gently, yet thoroughly, removes every trace of dandruff, excess oil and dust and so energizes the hair-roots and delicate tissues that they become strong and healthy. After rinsing, the scalp is clean and pliant and the hair is soft, glossy easy to do up and so fluffy it looks very, very heavy. These scalp stimulating canthrox shampoos not only promote a healthy condition, but encourage an abundant and silky growth of hair.—ADV.

This Frees Your Skin From Hair or Fuzz

(Toilet Tips)

The method here suggested for the removal of superfluous hair is quick and certain and unless the growth is extremely stubborn, a single application does the work. Make a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply this to the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To avoid disappointment, be sure your druggist sells you delatone.—ADV.

MYSTERY CHILD WINS SHARE OF BUTLER ESTATE

LEGAL FIGHT SINCE 1908

Her Identity Established by Scar of Wound Father Inflicted on Her Mother.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 19.—Final settlement has been made in the estate of John Butler, one of the wealthiest inhabitants of Boone County, long known as the “King of Blackfoot,” and Mrs. Samuel Vantine of Paris, Mo., the lost daughter of Butler, has received from the Probate Court $7000 as her share.

A suit to break her father's will, which made no mention of her, and claiming one-sixth of the estate, valued at the time of Butler's death at $150,000, filed by Mrs. Vantine after a long investigation to establish her identity, has been fought through the courts since 1908, and her victory now not only gives her a share of the estate, but conclusively clears the mystery of her family relationship.

Evidence taken in court revealed that Mrs. Vantine was the daughter of Jane Gordon, Butler's first wife, whom he married shortly before the Civil War. When they had three children, Butler, in a fit of anger, caused by his finding a mouse in a jar of milk, drove his wife from his log cabin home and a few weeks later, while she was staying with a family in Sturgeon, Mo., a baby girl, now Mrs. Vantine, was born to her. She was afraid to return to her husband, too proud to go to her own people, and wandered about making a living for her baby and herself as best she could, taking shelter for a time with an army camp, at which time the baby became the “pet of the regiment.”

Girl Adopted at Paris, Mo.

She gave the child to Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Wetmore of Paris, Mo., who adopted it. In the meantime, her husband had left his other children with relatives and joined the army. When he returned after the war, he could find no trace of his wife, and married again without obtaining a divorce. This was one of the points on which his will was broken, for it was shown that at that time his first wife was living at Charleston, Mo., where she died in 1892.

The second wife lived only a few years, leaving three children. Butler married again. He divorced his third wife and made the fourth venture, this time marrying a Roman Catholic, who succeeded in converting him to her faith. Religion had been one of his chief differences with his first wife, for he was an extreme Protestant and she was a devout Catholic.

It is said that in his old age Butler made a long search for his first wife and child, but could find no trace of them. He died in 1906, leaving 3000 acres of land and a large amount of money.

The daughter of Jane Gordon grew up with the Wetmores as Libbie Caledonia Wetmore and did not know until she had reached womanhood and married that the Wetmores were foster parents. She then began an investigation and Judge J. C. Gillespie of this city established the chain of evidence which proved her birth and her right to share in Butler's estate.

Identified by Mother's Scar.

The proof in identifying Jane Gordon, by which name she was always known after Butler drove her away, as the mother of Mrs. Vantine, was by a scar on her arm, a mark resulting from a wound suffered when Butler knocked her into a fire place and her arm was severely burned. Mrs. Wetmore testified that the mother of her foster child had such a scar.

There was a tragic instance in the life of the child when a man was murdered because of her foster-parents refused to give her back to her mother. The mother, accompanied by two soldiers, went to the Wetmore home and demanded the child, and when her demand was refused the soldiers went away threatening Wetmore.

Wetmore sought Col. Woodruff, in command of the regiment, and told of the threats. Woodruff ordered the men put in irons and Jane Gordon sent to Mexico, Mo.

The Confederates, under McDaniel, captured Paris the week following and upon their evacuation to join Price, the Federals again entered the town, and with them the desperate child-bereft mother. It was on this occasion she said the child's name was Butler and declared she wanted it because the foster-parents were “Protestants and Rebels.”

Two soldiers went to Wetmore's carriage factory to kill him, but shot a man named Workman, who happened to be there, by mistake.

Milford's Store Crowded With Women Seeking Bargains.

Now that the delightful autumn days have come, for which St. Louis is famous throughout the world, nearly all the women of the city are preparing for their winter clothing. With this thought in mind the Milford store has set forth a special display of goods at what members of the firm consider bargain prices. The garments on display are exhibited on the very best models obtainable. There is no style of fall finery that the Milford store is not willing to display. There are weaves, with the flowing effect, the Russian blouses, popular colors of all the shades of the Orient to nigger brown.

As to milady's headgear at Milford's there is a marked increase in size. Velvet seems to stand out more prominently than anything else. In fact it is all velvet and running into the blacks. Gold and silver are used in the trimmings of the Milford hats. The gold and the silver are used to artistic advantage with the velvet background.

I Tell You Catarrh Can Be Cured

I Cured Myself—I Cured My Friends and Hundreds of Others, in a Simple Easy Way. No Salves, Lotion, Inhaler, Smoke, Squirt Guns or Injections Needed. I Want to Tell You How—FREE.

I am not a doctor and not a scientist, but simply an American business man with plain common sense enough to appreciate a really good thing when I see it proved to me, and with enough humanity to want others to benefit as I did. When a man suffers all the inconveniences, humiliations and embarrassments of catarrh for many long years, spending hundreds of dollars and much valuable time on alleged remedies without any success, and then suddenly finds a means that cures him almost like magic, it is only natural that he should want to tell others of his good fortune.

For all those years I went about ashamed of the nauseating and disgusting practices I was forced to indulge in. I couldn't help hawking, spitting, sneezing and blowing my nose, no matter where I happened to be (just as you do if you are a catarrh victim), and I was well aware that people shunned me like a leper and kept away from my vile breath and filthy habits as much as they could.

After I had tried doctors, lotions, sprays, salves, smoke, inhalers, injections, syringes, electricity, washes, douches, snuff powders, and dozens of other kind of remedies, instruments and devices, all without results, and got so bad the filthy disease seemed to threaten to wreck my very life, I suddenly found a simple, easy means that absolutely cured me in almost no time. I told suffering friends about it. They tried it and were cured. They told others and they were cured.

Now I want the whole world to know about it. I want every sufferer to profit by it. I have already told thousands and I am going to tell thousands more. I want to tell you. I know you will thank me to your dying day if I can show you how to free yourself once and for all from the monster joy-thief, Catarrh. I want you to send me your name and address on the coupon below or write me a post card or a note, and send it now—right today. As soon as I get it, I will send you absolutely free and without the cost of a single penny, full particulars and information about what I honestly believe is the simplest and yet the most wonderful treatment for catarrh that has ever been discovered. Just send your name and address, no money, but send now—right today.

RETURNS $4240, CONFESSES PART IN BANK ROBBERY

Twenty-Year-Old Youth Says He Was Forced to Aid in Homestead (Pa.) Holdup.

IS CONSCIENCE STRICKEN

Joseph Kaufman Declares He Purposely Ditched Auto in Flight to Chicago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 19.—Joseph Kaufman, 20 years old, a Chicago electrician, has returned $4240 to the officials of the Homestead Bank, which was robbed of $9996.40 by two men on Aug. 17, with the confession that he was a participant, against his will, in the robbery.

He said a man known to him as Frank Wilson, but who has been identified from photographs in the police gallery as Frank G. Hohl, an expert bank robber, who recently broke jail after robbing a bank at Altoona, Pa., compeleld him, at the point of a revolver, to assist in the robbery, and that he had been conscience stricken ever since.

Posing as a wealthy young banker, and giving his name as Frank Wilson, Hohl made the acquaintance of young Kaufman in a pool room in Chicago early in July. Kaufman says in his confession that "Wilson" spent money lavishly and treated him so as to win his friendship. In August he proposed an automobile trip to Pittsburg and asked Kaufman to go with him as his guest. Kaufman consented willingly, and they started in a big yellow car.

At Newark, O., Hohl told Kaufman that he was not a banker, but a bank robber, and that they were then on their way to rob a bank at Homestead. Kaufman refused to have anything to do with the affair and then Hohl, according to the confession, whipped out a revolver and threatened to kill his young companion unless he agreed to do what he was told.

Is Tied to Bed.

That night, fearing that he might run away, Hohl is said to have tied Kaufman to him with a rope. Next day, when a couple of miles out of Homestead, the men left the automobile and walked into the town, after taking cocaine to steady their nerves and make them daring, as Hohl explained. Hohl then gave Kaufman a revolver, loaded with blank cartridges, and drilled him in his part of the coming robbery, explaining he was to stand on the outside of the bank and fire the blank cartridges at anyone who might attempt to interrupt the robbery.

Kaufman did as ordered, and while Hohl went into the bank and held up the cashier, he fired several shots at pedestrians attracted to the place by the sound of Hohl's shots.

When Hohl came out with the money the two men jumped into an automobile which they had stolen for the purpose, and drove away, Kaufman firing some more blank cartridges at their pursuers. They reached the yellow automobile and continued their flight. Kaufman says that while bank officials were pursuing them, one of them fired a shotgun at them, and so frightened the bank robbers that they were on the point of surrendering when they discovered that the prisoner had no more shells for his gun.

Get Back to Chicago.

Kaufman said they continued their flight, dodging from one city to another, until at last they reached Chicago on a freight train after he had purposely ditched the automobile. There, he said, Hohl divided the money, giving him a little less than half, and then left, warning Kaufman not to "squeal" if he valued his life.

Finally Kaufman became so uneasy about his part in the robbery that he went to an attorney in Chicago, who advised him to make immediate restitution. He did so, but the news was suppressed until the present time by detectives who hoped to trap Hohl if he should attempt to communicate with Kaufman.

Since then Kaufman has been kept under surveillance in the hope of getting a clew to Hohl. Detectives are also watching a woman of Salem, O., said to be Hohl's wife. Shortly after the robbery of the bank two letters were received by officials of the bank, both signed "Bank Robber," one saying that he was coming back to rob the bank across the street, and the other bragging about having talked to the Chief of Police of Homestead, and to having gone through his pockets half an hour before the robbery was committed.

No Material Increase in Douglas Shoes for Coming Season.

That business in general and the shoe business in particular is not materially affected in the United States by the European war is shown by the announcement of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., that for the coming season there will be practically no change in the prices of the company's product. The W. L. Douglas Co. made large contracts for leather in advance, so that market prices could not have any big influence upon the price of the shoes when sold to the consumer. The company also has large quantities of leather stored in anticipation that the steady increase in the output of its plants will continue.

Socialists Human, So Their Anti-War Theory Collapsed

word indicating his desire and all men and women more than 18 years of age should vote. If a boy 18 years old is old enough to die for his countrfy he is wise enough to say whether he wants to die. And, since women also bear the burdens of war, they should be permitted to vote.

"The 'aye' and 'no' ballots should be kept separate in counting. If war be declared, every man and woman who voted for it should be sent to the front in the order in which they went to the ballot box. No man or woman who voted against war should be called upon to fight until every one who voted for it had joined the colors. And, since there are more than 40,000,000 men and women more than 18 years of age in this country, there is little likelihood that more than the 20,000,000 who would be required to bring about war would ever be called upon to serve. Thus, we Socialists should be in a position where we could escape the criticism of gentlemen who like to see us at peace in time of war, as well as at all other times.

Equal War Rights to Women.

"To require that women who vote for war should also go to war may seem like a drive at women, but it is not. It is simply an effort to give women the power they should have and balance it with the responsibility that should always accompany power. If the war-making power were democratized, it is doubtful if we should ever declare another war. The common people, of both sexes are opposed to war. But if a woman votes to send a man to the cannon's mouth she should go with him.

"People make war, of their own will, only when they are influenced by the press or by public officials. I believe every writer, speaker and public official who advocates war should be compelled, under heavy penalty, to file notice thereof with the War Department. In the event of such gentlemen precipitating a war, I believe they should be compelled to lead the march to the front, to storm all forts, lead all bayonet charges and serve throughout the war unless sooner killed. It is a terrible responsibility to incite war. The penalty should be made equally terrible."

Henri Rusch to Address Engineers.

Young Man Killed in Auto.

Four other young men were severely injured when the automobile overturned at a sharp curve one mile from town. A wheel came off. John Kokenos, Eddie Miller and Freeman Stricklin are seriously hurt.

THE TRUTH —ABOUT—

Kimball Player-Pianos

THE great reputation of KIMBALL Player-Pianos may have led some people to think the price too high for the average buyer. It is on this very point we wish to enlighten you.

It's true the KIMBALL is one of the old reliable, well-known makes; it's true the KIMBALL is expensively built; it's true the KIMBALL has a beautiful tone and responsive action; it's also true the KIMBALL is built to last a lifetime—BUT, the fact that the well organized, systematic and thoroughly efficient W. W. KIMBALL COMPANY manufactures nearly 20,000 Pianos and Player-Pianos annually enables them to build a high-grade instrument for a moderate price.

We firmly believe the value we offer in the new Style 9 Colonial Model KIMBALL Player can not be duplicated elsewhere for less than $550—possibly more.

Let us estimate the value of your present instrument in exchange for a beautiful KIMBALL Player-Piano.

Also Many Other Good Players, $390 to $2400

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Miss "Constance" asks: "I am very thin and bloodless and want to increase my weight about 30 pounds. Please tell me what method to pursue?"

Answer: A regular and persistent use of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets will usually produce an increase of weight by aiding nutrition and building up the flesh tissues. Scores of patients have reported increases of from 10 to 40 pounds from the use of these tablets. Full directions come with each sealed package.

Mrs. X. asks: "In hot weather my scalp itches terribly, is feverish and a great amount of oily dandruff is present. What is good for this?"

Answer: First shampoo the hair and then apply plain yellow minyol about once a week as per directions. This relieves the itching, overcomes the dandruff and makes the hair beautifully glossy and vigorous. Obtain in 4-oz. jars of druggists.

Mrs. "Annie R." writes: "My husband is surely afflicted with some kidney disease. He has become weak and suffers with headache and pains in his back and groins. Pains are like rheumatism. His ankles swell and his feet seem to be tired all the time. Some days he has chills and no appetite. Please prescribe."

Answer: The symptoms indicate derangement of kidneys and should not be neglected. I would advise balmwort tablets, a compound well suited to such cases. Obtain in sealed tubes with directions for home use.

C. O. C. asks: "I am constipated, tongue coated, have headache, dizzy spells and indigestion sometimes. Please advise?"

Answer: I advise that you begin using three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). These tablets are laxative, act on the liver, kidneys and bowels and tend to keep the blood pure, by arousing the eliminative functions. Relief should follow quickly.

"Secretary" writes: "I have pains in my spine and frightful headache in back of head, fainting spells, twitching and trembling, nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, and in fact am a 'has been,' when it comes to performing accustomed work and duties. Please advise."

Answer: In all such cases the assimilative functions have not kept pace with waste functions and a powerful, harmless tonic treatment is needed. I find three-grain cadomene tablets unexcelled and astonishingly beneficial in such cases and advise them for you.

Mrs. C. W. B. asks: "I suffer greatly in hot weather owing to too much fat. Can you advise me of a good reduction remedy?"

Answer: Any well-stocked pharmacy can supply you with 5-grain arbolone tablets, packed in sealed tubes with full directions for use. These tablets have proven wonderfully effective in reducing abnormal fat.—ADVERTISEMENT.

3569 COTTON BALES BOUGHT THROUGH ST. LOUIS OFFICE

Secretary of Business Men's League Expects Orders for Thousands More at Once.

NEW ENGLAND INTERESTED

Letters Are Coming From All Directions — Local Firms Make Big Purchases.

The buy-a-bale cotton movement will be accelerated this week when the St. Louis business houses begin turning in their orders, which they are now making up. It is expected that orders for several thousand bales will be placed with the Cotton Committee of the Business Men's League during the week.

W. F. Saunders, the secretary, said he had received letters from the commercial clubs of many other cities saying they were taking up the cotton buying movement. The letters are coming from all parts of the country, the New England cities showing especial interest. Some of the large mail order houses of Chicago also are buying cotton, and it is announced that the Association of Commerce there likely will take up the movement next week.

When Saunders closed his office yesterday he had recived orders for 3569 bales at $50 a bale, a total of $178,000. Among the orders received yesterday were 40 bales each from the Rosenthal-Sloan and Levis-Zukoski wholesale millinery houses, and 10 bales each from the King-Brinsmade and Geyer & Stroh Millinery houses, and the same number from both the Graham Paper Co. and the Herkert & Meisel Trunk Co. The millinery interests, as a group, bought 113 bales. The Eisenstadt Manufacturing Co. bought 20 bales, and the Blackwell-Wielandy Book & Stationery Co. bought 12.

Saunders said the disposition of the entire country seemed to be to aid the cotton planters of the South, who have been hit hard by the European war.

South Asks Federal Aid to Avert Cotton Disaster

will be produced in 1914 in this and other countries.

The United States produces 62 to 63 per cent of the world's cotton. India, Egypt, China, Russia, Brazil, Mexico and other countries produce the remainder.

The world's cotton mills spun 21,500,000 bales during the year ending Aug. 31, 1913. That was an uncommonly active year in the cotton factories.

That year the world's surplus of raw cotton carried over was close to 2,500,000 bales, of which about 1,750,000 bales were held in the United States.

26,000,000 Bales Available Last Year.

This country's 1913 cotton crop, picked and baled by March 1, 1914, was something over 14,500,000 bales—a very large crop. The crop of 1913 was also larger than usual in the other cotton producing countries. The year's total production was pretty certainly not less than 23,500,000 bales. With the 2,500,000 bales carried over from the previous year, that made 26,000,000 bales available for the spinning year ending Aug. 31, 1914.

Consumption during the year ending Aug. 31, 1914, has been considerably less than during the year preceding, owing to sharp curtailment and idleness in all the spinning centers, enforced by slack demand, especially during July and August. It is conservatively estimated that the world's surplus of raw cotton Sept. 1, 1914, was close to 6,000,000 bales.

The closest possible approximation, then, gives these figures as a basis for estimating the developments with respect to cotton in the near future:

	Bales.
Surplus carried over, Sept. 1, 1914	6,000,000
American crop, 1914, estimated	15,000,000
Foreign crops, 1914 (basis 1913 crops)	8,700,000
Total visible supply	29,700,000

What are the prospects for the consumption of that quantity of cotton during the spinning year to end Aug. 31, 1915?

The quantities spun during the year ending Aug. 31, 1913, in the several countries, afford a basis for computing the 1915 figures. Here are the 1913 figures:

	Bales.
United States	5,786,000
United Kingdom	4,440,000
Germany	1,800,000
Russia	1,700,000
France	1,025,000
Austria-Hungary	820,000
Italy	800,000
Spain	350,000
Belgium	240,000
Sweden	115,000
Switzerland	110,000
Holland	83,000
Portugal	75,000
Denmark	25,000
Norway	11,000
Other European countries	30,000
India	1,762,000
Japan	1,372,000
China	398,000
Brazil	285,000
Canada	125,000
Mexico	110,000
All other countries	80,000
Total	21,542,000

Thus, if foreign crops for 1914 do not exceed their total for 1913, and if all countries should spin, during the year ending Aug. 31, 1915, as many bales as they did in the busy year ending Aug. 31, 1913, the prospect for Aug. 31, 1915, would be a surplus of 7,158,000 bales of raw cotton.

But the most optimistic estimator cannot figure out a smaller world's surplus of raw cotton on March 1, 1915, over any probable mill consumption during the year ending Aug. 31, 1915, of less than 10,000,000 bales. The surplus will probably be nearer 12,000,000 bales, or within 3,000,000 bales of a maximum year's yield of the American fields.

It is evident the world's cotton planters have been producing an over-supply of the staple, even for normal market demand, during the three years last past. The enormous prospective surplus of raw cotton March 1, 1915, sharply emphasizes the demand, now running across the Southern states, for a radical curtailment of cotton acreage in 1915.

A million or more Southern farmers must wholly or in large part substitute other crops for cotton, next year. At least 6,000,000 bales of this year's crop must be taken off the market for a year or two in order to keep the price of cotton at or above 10 cents a pound.

The change from cotton to other farm crops will call for a very large amount of new capital investment. Most of the Southern States' farmers are equipped for growing cotton and are not equipped for growing grain or livestock. This is especially true of the 40 to 50 per cent of them who are not land owners. The tenant farmers, more than 220,000 of them in Texas alone, will need to be aided financially by their landlords and by the country merchants and bankers if they are to make other "money" crops instead of cotton. Only a small percentage of these tenants, and less than a majority of farm owners, have enough capital to finance the change for themselves.

Southern bankers, confessing their inability, even with the aid of a vast issue of emergency currency, to supply enough funds on requisite terms to maintain cotton's price at or above production cost, will during the next six months have to face this new demand for capital to transform Southern farming operations.

The Normal Flow of the Crop.

The following comment by P. H. Partridge, secretary of the St. Louis Cotton Exchange, will help the Northern reader to understand the situation:

"Never before has cotton appeared as important to the general business world of America. The fact that our exports of cotton bring into this country upwards of $550,000,000, exclusive of the by-products of cotton, and that this enormous export of cotton maintains the balance of trade on our side, passes without comment except at a time like the present. Now, when our efforts are directed towards keeping in this country our gold, the fact that we cannot export cotton impresses itself as a startling disarrangement of our whole system.

"What is our system as far as cotton is concerned? Without detracting in any way from the pressing need of the cotton producer, and that need is such as to permit no relaxation of effort toward his relief, it may be borne in mind that the cotton crop is not marketed 'all at once,' and we should not be driven into a panic with the idea that 15,000,000 bales must be financed within the next 30 or 60 days. What must be done, however, is to supply sufficient funds to assure that every pound of cotton will be gathered, and that his necessities will not be lacking to the farmer.

"Assuming that the crop about to be picked is 15,000,000 bales, in round figures, the question is what part of that crop will have to be cared for financially before Jan. 1 and what part subsequently? We are somewhat later this than last season, but for the sake of safety assume that the movement this year will be as full as last.

"Last year there had been ginned to Sept. 25, 3,246,655 bales, or 23.2 per cent of the total ginning; to Oct. 18, 6,973,518 bales, or 49.9 per cent; to Jan. 1, 13,347,721 bales, or 95.9 per cent. Almost the whole crop was ginned, baled and ready for market by Jan. 1. But it was not marketed.

"According to Statistician Hester, the 'into sight' market movement was as follows: In September, 1,639,846 bales; in October, 2,974,935; in November, 2,952,917 bales; in December, 2,[illegible],367 bales; total into sight by Jan. 1, 10,050,065 bales, or about two-thirds of the crop. According to the Chronicle, American mills had taken about 2,500,000 bales; there had been exported 5,236,000.

"Between now and Jan. 1 our concern is with this 5,236,000 bales, which we may consider a fair estimate of what we might export this season with shipping open. It is certain that our exports will not be entirely stopped; if exporting is to go forward at all, what countries will be shut off, and what countries will increase their consumption, and how much? With the normal increase in consumption our exports for the season should be between 8,500,000 and 9,000,000 bales, the larger figure if the cotton were obtainable. Our mills in this country can increase their consumption provided labor is available; Japan cannot to any great extent; European countries not at war may be able to do so, but it is doubtful, as most of them are mobilized and every spare man is at the front. Great Britain, dominating the sea, will take a fair percentage of her usual takings and her dominance will enable all the European countries who can use it, except Germany and Austria, to take cotton.

"Undoubtedly there will be exports of cotton; if half, we will hold a surplus of 4,000,000 to 5,000,000, less what American mills can use by an extension of capacity, for which there is room without the addition of new spindles, as many mills have not run to full capacity, and many were idle. If peace is declared within the next two or three months, European takings will reduce still further the amount we will have to carry as an unmarketable surplus."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.

WE are having a hearing on the bill before the House Banking and Currency Committee. We are vigorously pressing the measure. It is impossible to predict what action Congress will take. ROBERT LEE HENRY, Chairman Rules Committee, House of Representatives.

(Mr. Henry's proposal is for direct loans to be made to farmers by the Federal Government through national banks and possibly through postoffice loaning of approximately $300,000,000. It would allow a fair fee to bankers for serving the Government, but no profit beyond the fee. It does not stipulate what price the Government shall place on the cotton as a basis of loans. Its purpose is not to fix an arbitrary price minimum for cotton, but to enable growers to borrow whatever the current market value of the cotton entitles them to, without delay and without having to pay an extortionate profit to bankers for the accommodation.)

Warehouse Receipts Will Be Accepted by Southern Firms as Currency.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 19.—Commercial bodies in Nashville, Chattanooga, Memphis, Jackson, Knoxville and a score of smaller cities have indorsed the buy-a-bale plan. Many firms will take cotton ware house receipts as exchange for goods this fall, and these receipts are expected to become a medium of currency to some extent.

Louisiana Business Men Working on Storage Plan.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 19.—A scheme for holding the cotton crop of Louisiana will be devised at the second Southern cotton conference at New Orleans, Sept. 29. At a conference held last month it was decided to gather all possible data on the storage facilities of the State pending the making of arrangements for some form of credit advances, either State, national or local. This data has been collected by E. O. Bruner, State Commissioner of Agriculture. It will be submitted to the second conference.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 19.—The "Buy-a-Bale-of-Cotton" movement at present forms the backbone of the effort being made here to save the cotton crop.

Another feature is the proposition to use cotton instead of jute for bagging. The majority of jute is secured from India. It has been used up to this time chiefly because it was cheaper than cotton. This war has cut off the supply and they now plan to use cotton instead. At the present it is cheaper than jute.

HERPICIDE WILL SAVE IT! HERPICIDE WILL SAVE IT!! TOO LATE FOR HERPICIDE!!!

THE STORY OF THREE BROTHERS

(REPRODUCED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS)

Look at those three portraits again. They illustrate better than words can possibly do the principle of hair preservation, the principle upon which NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is based and acts. This is the principle, "You can do your hair more good while the hair is there, than you can after the hair is gone."

Ninety-nine per cent of the hair losses, with both men and women, are due to the contagion that causes dandruff. Whenever this invisible microbic growth is present, active hair destruction follows. If you are troubled with dandruff, depend upon it, the contagion is there, slowly but surely, robbing the follicle of life and pushing out the hair. Unless drastic and vigorous measures are promptly adopted to eradicate it, that contagion is going to remain and persist in its hair destroying activity until every hair is gone.

The great mistake that many people make is that they never take any particular interest in their hair until it is gone and their heads are bare. Instead of using NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE while they have an abundance of hair that can be saved they wait until the damage is done—until it is too late. Then realizing their condition they begin to appreciate the blessing of a nice head of hair. A bottle of so-called hair restorer is procured and much time an energy expended in an endeavor to accomplish the impossible—misspent money, misdirected energy.

By starting in time, the intelligent and systematic use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE would have prevented all of this trouble, all this anxiety. HERPICIDE eradicates dandruff contagion and prevents the hair from falling out. It gives to the hair life, luster and health. It prevents baldness. It stops itching of the scalp due to dandruff.

Big Rush of New Plays Now for Production in New York City This Season

Theater Folk Evidently See No Menace to Playhouse Prosperity in Great European War—Notable Offerings Include Colossal "Peace Spectacle" Staged by David Belasco and Financed by Andrew Carnegie — Plans of Leading Producers.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

MANAGERIAL announcements of early theatrical productions in New York City have come so thick and fast during the week just ended that it may be taken for granted that the list of stage offerings for the first three months of the dramatic season of 1914-1915 now is practically completed and ready for thoughtful consideration.

At the last moment, also, David Belasco appears with a rear-guard proclamation so novel that it seems to demand the first attention of interested lovers of the play. He now tells a war-cursed world that, in association with Andrew Carnegie and in furtherance of the Carnegie campaign for universal peace, he soon is to produce on one of the biggest New York stages—either that of the Century Opera House, the Metropolitan Opera House or in Madison Square Garden—a colossal spectacle entitled "The Prince of Peace," voicing and visualizing an appallingly convincing preachment against war. Belasco will be assisted in this production by C. R. Macauley, the novelist and cartoonist, whose novel entitled "The Red Tavern," now is in its fourth edition, and whose anti-war cartoons have in themselves constituted a powerful peace propaganda. Andrew Carnegie, who already has contributed many millions of dollars to the cause of peace, will be the financial backer of the production.

"In 'The Prince of Peace,'" it is announced, "a history of the world will be unfolded in a series of realistic stage pictures showing the bloodshed, the tyranny and the tragic devastation following in the train of wars. The drama will introduce the Nazarene as the first apostle of peace. Cartaphilus, the Roman doorkeeper for Pilate, who struck Christ as He came out of the Hall of Justice, will be a grim character who wanders like Dante with majestic sadness through the world, the philosophic observer of all that transpires in the centuries down which he travels. Fully 1000 persons will be employed in the spectacle, which is symbolical in spirit, its scenes, incidents and final teaching constituting an irresistible argument for the brotherhood of man."

The date for the first presentation of "The Prince of Peace" has not yet been fixed. A definite announcement of the time and place of the New York premiere will be made as soon as Mr. Carnegie returns from Scotland in the near future.

Many new plays already have been produced in the metropolis. Some have failed and been withdrawn. It is the contention of the leading New York play producers that the European war does not menace playhouse prosperity. The only thing needful is to find plays that please the public taste.

John Drew now is at the Empire Theater in "The Prodigal Husband," a comedy from the French that seems to have scored a New York success. Another Charles Frohman offering, "The Beautiful Adventure," in which Mrs. Thomas Whiffen is making her farewell to the stage, its cast also including Charles Cherry, Ann Murdock and Ernest Lawford, is at the Lyceum and playing to crowded houses. At the Knickerbocker is "The Girl From Utah," with Julia Sanderson, Donald Brian and Joseph Cawthorn as its triple stars. Douglas Fairbanks in "He Comes Up Smiling" is at the Liberty. "Twin Beds," exploited as a "laugh festival," is the Fulton's offering. "The Dragon's Claw," a big melodrama of the Boxer uprising in China, with Charles D. Waldron, Gladys Hanson, Frederic de Belleville and Mabel Mortimer in its cast of 30 speaking parts, seems to be a hit at the New Amsterdam. "Innocent," a strong drama adapted from the Hungarian, is at the Eltinge. The Republic houses Lew Fields in "The High Cost of Loving." At George M. Cohan's is an uproarious comedy entitled "It Pays to Advertise." "A Modern Girl," a comedy-drama by Marion Fairfax and Ruth C. Mitchell, is at the Comedy. The 39th Street Theater offers "The Third Party," claiming that it contains "more laughs than any other show in town." At the Hippodrome is "The Wars of the World," a massive spectacle which does not, however, touch upon the present European conflict. "On Trial," a thrilling melodrama, is at the Candler. "Miss Daisy," a big musical comedy, is at the Shubert. William A. Brady presents at the Playhouse "The Elder Son," an English adaptation by Frederick Fenn of Lucienne Nepoly's "Les Petites," a French comedy success. William Courtenay in "Under Cover," described as "a fusillade of thrills and laughs," is the Cort Theater attraction.

The plays here mentioned are those that seem to have "made good" and to be assured of reasonably prosperous metropolitan runs.

The Belasco autumnal offerings, in addition to "The Prince of Peace," will be "The Secret," with Frances Starr in its leading role; "The Vanishing Bride," with a cast that includes Gustave von Seyffertitz, Thomas A. Wise, Janet Beecher and other good players, and a new play entitled "The Man Passes," of which Leo Ditrichstein will be the star, with Laura Hope Crews as his leading woman.

The new attractions to be presented by the Liebler company include Phyllis Neilson-Terry, the young English actress, in Shakspearean repertoire, and, it may be, in a new play by Louis N. Parker depicting Queen Elizabeth in the days of her early womanhood; "The Garden of Paradise," a spectacular fairy play adapted by Edward Sheldon from Hans Christian Andersen's "The Little Sea Maid," with Emily Stevens in its star role and its stage pictures designed by Joseph Urban, the famous Vienna scenic artist; Nazimova in a new play by Basil Macdonald Hastings; "The Highway of Life," a dramatization by Louis N. Parker of Charles Dickens' "David Copperfield;" "Polyanna," a dramatized version of Eleanor H. Porter's successful novel; "The Philosopher," a new comedy by Grace Heyer, herself an actress, and a new play starring Brandon Tynan.

Charles Frohman's new productions, in addition to those already on New York stages, will include plays for Maude Adams, Ethel Barrymore and Blanche Bates; Otis Skinner in a new play by Jules Eckert Goodman entitled "The Silent Voice;" Martha Hedman in "The Heart of a Thief," by Paul Armstrong; Irene Fenwick in a new play by Edward Sheldon entitled "The Song of Songs," and based on a Sudermann novel; "The Outcast," a four-act play by Hubert Henry Davies to be produced in October; a "fantasy entertainment" by J. M. Barrie; "The Crime Doctor," by Ernest William Horning, author of "Raffles;" "Driven," a big London success of last season; "The Love Trap," a farcical play; "The Whirlpool," a dramatization of Victoria Morton's novel; "The Rich Man," adapted from a big success at the Renaissance Theater in Paris; a new farce by Margaret Mayo entitled "I Didn't Want to Do It;" "Sybil," a new musical comedy, and "One Must Be Young," a new musical play by Jean Gilbert, author of "The Queen of the Movies."

Joseph Brooks is to present Edith Taliaferro, Molly Pearson and Margaret Greene, supported by a notable cast, in "Tipping the Winner," a new comedy by George Rollitt, said to be built largely along the lines of farce.

Klaw & Erlanger will produce, in addition to Austin Strong's drama, "The Dragon's Claw," which already has been presented under the direction of Henry Miller, "Le Fils Surnaturel," a musical comedy adapted from the French; "Daddy Long-Legs," by Jean Webster, with Ruth Chatterton as its star and under Henry Miller's direction; "The Judge's Robe,' adapted by Ada Sterling from Eugene Brieux's "La Robe Rouge," and starring Bertha Kalich; "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," by Hall Caine, with Joseph Brooks as an associate in the production, and "My Lady's Dress," by Edward Knoblauch, which scored a big London success last season.

Selwyn & Co.'s new productions will include "The Money Makers," by Charles Klein, featuring Alexandra Carlisle and Emmett Corrigan; Jane Cowl in "Montmartre," a drama of Parisian life by A. E. Thomas; Owen Johnson's dramatization of his own novel, "The Salamander," with Janet Dunbar in the title role, brilliantly supported by Beverly Sitgreaves, A. E. Anson, Albert Bruning, Leslie Faber, Francine Larrimore and Hilda Keenan; "Back Home," starring Maclyn Arbuckle; a farce by Edwin Milton Royle entitled "Peace and Quiet;" "Rolling Stones," a comedy by Edgar Selwyn, Margaret Illington in a new play by Henry Arthur Jones, and a play by Margaret Mayo entitled "The Lookers-On," satirizing social climbers.

Cohan & Harris already have produced and headed for New York "The Miracle Man," dramatized by George M Cohan from Frank L. Packard's successful novel, the three featured players being Gail Kane, George Nash and Thomas Findlay, the latter in the title role. They also have presented "It Pays to Advertise," with Louise Drew, Ruth Shepley, John W. Cope, Grant Mitchell and Will Deming in its cast. Among their other new offerings will be "The House of Glass," a drama by Max Marcin, featuring Mary Ryan and Ben Johnson, and "Wanted, $22,000," a comedy-drama by A. E. Thomas and Clayton Hamilton, with Ernest Glendinning and Desmond Kelley in the leading roles.

"On Trial," another new Cohan & Harris production, already has scored a New York hit.

Walker Whiteside, with Henry W. Savage associated in the production, will be seen this season in "Mr. Wu," a strong drama with a modern Chinaman as its central figure, which scored a big popular hit at the Strand Theater in smashing French success, "L'Epervier," a gripping melodrama that crowded the Ambigu Theater in Paris for many months. A notable feature of the offering will be the appearance in the leading woman role of Mlle. Gabrielle Dorziat, the French actress who created this part of the heroine in the original Paris production. Mlle. Dorziat of late years has played principally with Lucien Guitry, but she also has appeared in London with MM. Hueguenet and Le Bargy, and has a full command of the English tongue. This will be her first visit to the United States.

The Shuberts have several big successes now running in New York, these being included in the list of current plays already mentioned

Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson, under their management, will complete his farewell American tour this season, appearing in "Hamlet," "The Light that Failed," and "Caesar and Cleopatra" with which repertoire he comes to the Shubert Theater in St. Louis for the week opening on Monday evening, Nov. 9 He will not be supported by Gertrude Elliott (Lady Forbes-Robertson) this season, her place being taken by Laura Cowie, an English actress, who then will be seen in this country for the first time.

Other Shubert offerings will be Marie Tempest in "The Honeymoon," by Arnold Bennett, or in some other of her London successes; "Consequences," a comedy of Jewish-Gentile intermarriage which already has scored an English success; "A Pair of Silk Stockings," another London hit by Cyril Harcourt; Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," probably with Mrs. Patrick Campbell as its star; "Papa's Baby," adapted from a German farce by Alexander Engel and Julius Horst, and "A Charming Person," by Paul Frank and Siegfried Geyer, which also has scored a German success.

The A. H. Woods productions announced for this season, several of which already have been presented in New York, include Lew Fields in "The High Cost of Loving;" Douglas Fairbanks in "He Comes Up Smiling;" John London, where it has been running since last November. Mr. Whiteside will play the title role, a grimly impressive figure, and Deidre Doyle, a young English actress, will have the leading woman part, which is said to call for powerful emotional work.

William Faversham will be the producer and star of "The Hawk," dramatized by Mrs. Talbot J. Taylor from the Mason in a new play by Owen Davis entitled "Cornered;" "Innocent," adapted by George Broadhurst from the Hungarian; "The Grass Widow," a musical play; and "Under Cover," now at the Cort Theater in the metropolis.

William A. Brady's new productions are "Sylvia Runs Away," with Alice Brady; "The Elder Son," with Norman Trevor and other good players; "Life," a colossal melodrama of New York and Mexico by Thompson Buchanan; "Sealed Orders," a Drury Lane, London, melodrama success; "The Decent Thing to Do," by Charles Rann Kennedy; "The Dreamer," by Jules Eckert Goodman; a dramatization of "The Lone Wolf," by Louis Joseph Vance, and "What Will John Say?" by Edith Orr.

Oliver Morosco's new offerings will be "Lady Eileen," a comedy drama by Geraldine Bonner and Hutcheson Boyd; "Brenda of the Woods," by Richard Barry; "Faith," by Otheman Stevens, "Satan" by Elmer Harris, and "The Lady We Love," by Frank Mantel. The announcements now made as above virtually cover the first half of the present season.

Two Players Who Will Be Seen on St. Louis Stages This Week

MAY DE SOUSA in "QUEEN of the MOVIES"—Olympic

LENORE ULRICH in "THE BIRD of PARADISE". SHUBERT

"RIGOLETTO" TO OPEN NOVEMBER OPERA SEASON

Constantino Cast as the Duke, Vaccari as Gilda and Antola in Title Role.

The grand opera season opening at the Odeon on Monday evening, Nov. 9, will have as its first performance Verdi's "Rigoletto," with Constantino as the Duke, Vaccari as Gilda, and Antola in the title role.

Vaccari and Antola were heard here in this opera last spring, and both scored brilliant successes. Antola's portrayal of the difficult role of the hunchback was notable for its virility and originality. The great duet in the second act was the occasion of such an ovation as is rarely witnessed.

Constantino, as the Duke, will repeat a success that has associated his name with that role on three continents. It is one of his best parts. The complete cast will be announced later.

The San Carlo Opera Company opened its season last Monday in Providence, R. I., with "Lucia di Lammermoor," scoring a distinguished success. Signora Vaccari sang the title role, Sciaretti was Edgar Ravenswood, and Antola was Lord Henry Ashton.

This success indicates that Mr. Gallo is giving very excellent opera indeed. Such opera is so well worth the cost of tickets—50 cents to $2—that the Odeon should be packed for every performance, as it probably will be.

A number of important changes have been made in regard to the Odeon exits, so that no one will have cause for the least anxiety in going to the Odeon this season. It is now one of the safest public buildings in the country.

The last time Signor Constantino appeared here was at the Olympic Theater with the Boston Opera Company, and the prices ranged from $1 to $5. At this moment, in Boston, opera is being prepared upon the same popular price basis as has already been put in practice for the St. Louis season.

'QUEEN OF MOVIES' TO OPEN OLYMPIC SEASON TONIGHT

"Bird of Paradise" at Shubert, Richard Carle and Hattie Williams, Columbia.

"Queen of the Movies." Olympic. Season opens this evening with successful musical comedy that scored six months' run at the Globe Theater in New York City.

The play's story is a travesty on the craze for motion pictures. The young wife of an old scientist starts a crusade against the "movie vice" in order to become conspicuous. She prosecutes her campaign in her famous husband's name, but he knows nothing of her work. In a scene burlesquing the making of a moving picture film the old scientist is photographed with his arms around the actress known as 'the queen of the movies," who is in very scant attire. There are many song hits, notable among them being "Oh, Cecelia!" and "In the Night."

May de Sousa heads the cast and the company numbers 80 players, singers and dancers. Beautiful stage women and gorgeous gowns are said to be features of the production.

Next week, Fiske O'Hara in his new play, "Jack's Romance."

"Bird of Paradise." Shubert. Return engagement of Richard Watson Tully's gripping Hawaiian melodrama, the production including the original company of Hawaiian ukalele players and Hula dancers.

The drama tells the story of Luana, a beautiful Hawaiian girl, who loves and is loved by Paul Wilson, an American, the latter's infatuation degrading and demoralizing him. Realizing that he is losing all which is his by right of birth and race, Wilson savagely turns about face and succeeds in rehabilitating himself to a degree. But this brings a great tragedy to his Hawaiian sweetheart and creates a heart-moving denouement. A vivid character in the story is that of a gaily self-abandoned "beach comber," a derelict known as "Ten Thousand Dollar" Dean, who is saved by a clean-souled American girl even as Wilson is almost destroyed by an alluring savage.

The big cast is headed by Lenore Ulrich and William Desmond.

Next week, Margaret Illington, in "Within the Law."

"One Day." American. Return engagement of Cecil Spooner's dramatic version of Elinor Glyn's story of the love affair of Opal, a Western girl, and Paul, the young Crown Prince of Sardalia—a perfervidly passionate romance. Fay Cusick as Opal and Victor Southerland as Paul head the cast.

"The Mayor of Tokio." Park. Richard Carle's big musical comedy success, with Roger Gray, now returning for the winter, in the star role, and all the Park principals, including Eleanor Henry, the prima donna, in the cast.

The play's story deals with the adventures and misadventures of Marcus Orlando Kidder, an American "impresario," and his "Konsolidated Komiques" on tour in Japan, and the jolly Mayor of Tokio and Gen. Satake, a conspirator, with his boon companion, a little Russian spy, are among the comedy figures. The "Komique" tenor falls in love with Olote San, the Mayor's pretty daughter, everybody else falls in love with somebody or other, and there are many laughable complications.

An Orientally colorful scenic and costume production is promised.

"The Fortune Hunter." Shenandoah. The Players, presenting this Winchell Smith comedy, now go to the South Side playhouse. They are effectively cast and give an excellent performance, with Mitchell Harris and Marion Ruckert in the leading roles, capably supported by John Maurice Sullivan, Eda von Buelow, Henry Hull, Elsa Rendel, Carson Davenport, Robert McClung and others.

Vaudeville. Columbia. Bill headed by Richard Carle and Hattie Williams in Sir James Matthew Barrie's "advanced drama," entitled "A Slice of Life." These stars are under the management of Charles Frohman, who now presents them in vaudeville.

Vaudeville. Grand. Bill headed by Texas, "the Gentlemanly Gorilla," in feats of strength, assisted by Helene, his beautiful wife.

Vaudeville. Hippodrome. Bill headed by the Gallarini Family, featuring the youngest musician and accordeon band.

Sam Rice's Daffydills. Standard. Will present burlesque and an entertaining vaudeville bill.

Jean Bedini's Mischief Makers. Gayety. Three-part program includes burlesque, bright vaudeville, "The Girl in the Muff," and the Aloha Twins, Hawaiian Hula-Hula dancers.

Harry Hasting's Big Show. Princess. Featuring Dan Coleman and Eileen Sheridan in "On and Off the Earth." Singing, dancing and other vaudeville specialties.

"Neptune's Daughter." Victoria. Third week of photoplay featuring Annette Kellermann.

"Damaged Goods." Garrick. Photoplay version of Eugene Brieux's widely discussed sociological play.

Photoplay. Lindell. Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, "The Lion of Venice." Wednesday, Thursday, "Hearts of Oak." Friday, Saturday, "Protes." Also comedy and current events reels.

Photoplay. Juniata. Picture-drama version of Jack London's story, "The Valley of the Moon."

A STUDY OF THE PLAYERS IN "THE FORTUNE HUNTER"

Their Achievement Indicates That St. Louis Now Possesses a Permanent Stock Company Worthy of Appreciative Support.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

OWING to the fact that I have been on vacation, and therefore absent from my post of duty for several weeks past, I have had no earlier opportunity to see and study the quality of The Players, the new dramatic stock company at the Park and Shenandoah Theaters.

The other evening, however, I witnessed their performance of Winchell Smith's comedy, "The Fortune Hunter," at the former playhouse. I found much comfort in the careful finish, the excellent balance, the earnest individual effort and the effective "team" spirit of their work.

This is because I estimate a worthy permanent theatrical stock company as a valuable asset to a community, precisely as is a worthy orchestra, a worthy art gallery or any other worthy medium of culture that makes for the general happiness.

I was not expectant of so good a showing. The demand of "The Fortune Hunter's" wholesome, though not always plausible, story is for clean-cut playing that shall score its points quietly, yet with a convincing sureness of touch. This demand was well met. The appeal of the play's pretty romance, both in humor and sentiment, was sent across the footlights competently.

Mitchell Harris, the leading man, played the title role of Nat Duncan, the young New Yorker, who deliberately invades a provincial town to marry its richest heiress, and who manfully chooses its poorest girl instead, in a vein of irresponsible youthfulness, with a substratum of innate sincerity and steadfastness which admirably realizes the plain intent of the author.

It also does much to diminish the defect of the story's more or less improbable incidents.

Both humor and tenderness are possible to Mr. Harris in a considerable degree. Occasionally he is a bit mechanical in gesture, but he has an intelligent comprehension of character, he is well grounded in his art, his stage presence compels attention, and one's final impression of his performance is satisfying.

Marion Ruckert, the leading woman, cast in the role of Betty Graham, who wins Nat Duncan from his ignoble fortune-hunting enterprise, acquits herself with peculiar credit by a steadily maintained heightening of the value of her work.

She seems content to let the play's action "bring her out," as it were, and this willingness to forego the spotlight until her claim to it becomes legitimate bespeaks a sound judgment in art. Her Betty grew constantly in the house's favor.

One menace to her best achievement is an unduly fervid use of the eyes to express the feeling of certain tense moments. She possesses an appealingly musical voice, capable of effective shading in emotional utterance.

In common with Mr. Harris, her associate in the leading roles, Miss Ruckert seems to gain and hold the friendly regard of her audience, a vital essential for the success of a player in stock.

Robert McClung as old Sam Graham, Betty's father, the haplessly dreamful inventor-druggist around whose early failure and later triumph the play's plot so closely revolves, would be entirely admirable with just a bit more of the "spiritual" touch in his work.

He brings a realizing sense of old Graham's undeserved lucklessness in life. But he does not quite encompass the whimsical pathos of the character, its childlikeness in vision seeing, the piteous yet exasperating unworldliness of genius which explains alike the occasional impatience of Betty and the protective regard of Nat Duncan.

It is asking not a little of Mr. McClung to sound this psychological note at its proper pitch. But he comes so near doing it, as matters now stand, that one feels encouraged to the urging.

Josie Lockwood, the village heiress, is played by Miss Eda von Buelow with the heartiest relish and, in alliance with keen ability, this brings excellent results. The part is a genuine character creation, racy of its environment and social condition, at all times divertingly human.

Good low-comedy work is done by Henry Hull as the marriage-hating village sheriff, who "can whip anybody in town except his wife," and Mr. Hull's faithful make-up is not the least delight of his performance. The conventional skinflint-hypocrite, Banker Lockwood, father of Josie, is acceptably played along necessarily conventional lines by Carson Davenport.

These are the more salient roles of the play's story. The general test of ability extends, however, in varying degree, throughout the entire cast. It is capably met by John Maurice Sullivan, Robert Longmire, Phillips Tead, Louis Calhern, Ashley Cooper, William Bliss, O'Neil O'Halloran and Miss Elsa Rendel.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Makes It Lifeless, Dull, Dry, Brittle and Thin.

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will be silky, fluffy, lustrous, soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—ADV.

CHEESE MAKERS SUFFER FROM COTTON SITUATION

Negroes Are Large Buyers of Wisconsin Product and Are Short of Money.

MARSHFIELD, Wis., Sept. 19.—Wisconsin cheese makers are hard hit by the cotton situation, and have joined in a statewide movement to interest Wisconsin Congressmen in the proposed bill to permit the issuance of Government warehouse receipts on a basis of 7 to 8 cents a pound to relieve the financial tension caused by the European war.

The Southern negroes are large consumers of Wisconsin cheese, and depend on their cotton crop each year for money to live through the winter. Now that cotton cannot easily be turned into cash, they are unable to pay for more cheese, and the dealers are afraid to trust further credit shipments.

Local and South State dealers have wired Senators La Follette and Stephenson and all State members of the House asking them to support the cotton relief measure without delay.

Kansas City Man's Attorneys Are Now in a Position to Seek a Dismissal.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 19.—Judge Porterfield of the Criminal Court has granted another continuance of the Hyde murder case, until the first Monday in January, this time at the request of the County Prosecutor and against the wishes of Hyde's attorneys. Floyd Jacobs, the County Prosecutor, asked for the continuance on the ground that the county did not have money enough to prosecute the case.

Attorneys for both sides heretofore have always agreed on the continuances and this is the first forced continuance.

The effect of the action of the court is to put the Hyde attorneys in position to seek a dismissal of the case. If a case does not come to trial after two forced continuances the Judge can dismiss it.

Witherspoon Illustrates Bad Taste in Mississippi

Carroll Page, Who Told Minister's Wife He Preferred to Sleep, Was Like Congressmen Who Take Pay for Days They Are Absent, He Says.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.

REPRESENTATIVE SAMUEL A. WITHERSPOON of Mississippi accepts no salary for any day he is absent from the capital's legislative halls. When congratulated the other day in Meridian on his honesty, he modestly said he didn't deserve it—that Congressmen, like most other people, were honest or dishonest, according to taste.

"The honest," he said, "have good taste; the dishonest bad. Take Carrol Page for instance"—and Witherspoon's eyes laughed. "Page, you know, has bad taste. He was visiting a preacher once and on Sunday morning sat with the preacher's wife in her pew to hear his host preach.

"The morning was warm and somnolent. The preacher's voice was soothing. Carroll Page, in the middle of the sermon, fell asleep.

"The preacher's wife saw his head give a terrific nod, and she touched him on the shoulder and held out her bottle of smelling salts.

"'You seem sleepy,' she whispered. 'Try my smelling salts.'

"'No, thanks,' said Carroll, 'I prefer to sleep.'"

Even an Auto Trapping Constable Must Look to Future Business

CONGRESSMAN JEFFERSON M. LEVY of New York, speaking recently of country motoring, said that in a small town one afternoon a country constable appeared at the office of a Justice of the Peace with a motorist in one hand and a time watch in the other.

Hearing the evidence of the officer, the Magistrate imposed a fine of $50. Loudly and eloquently the motorist protested that the fine was excessive, but the official was inexorable.

"Say, Jim," reproachfully remarked the Constable to the Magistrate, after the motorist had paid the money and indignantly departed, "I'm afraid ye made a mistake with that feller."

"A mistake!" returned the other with an air of judicial superiority. "What do you mean?"

"I mean," explained the Constable, "that he looked like a promisin' customer, but ye soaked him so much he won't never come back."

Parker of New York, Tells of the Trouble of New Husband

THE talk turned to newlyweds at a hotel corridor meeting the other night, as it always does at a gabfest where jokes are going around, and Congressman James T. Parker of New York smilingly told the story of the Joneses.

Young Jones, who had been married about two months, was sitting in his office one afternoon when a terrific storm arose. Lightning seemed to split the sky, heavy thunder pealed and rain drenched the earth. Suddenly the telephone rang, and Jones heard his wife's voice pathetically say, "Come home!" An instant later he was on the way.

"Oh, Harry!" tearfully exclaimed the pretty little wife as Jonesey dashed up the steps and through the door, "I am so glad you have come!"

"What is the matter, darling?" cried the excited Jones, catching his wife in his arms. "What in the world is the matter?"

"Oh, Harry!" piteously moaned the young wife; "we have moths! I just found one in the parlor carpet!"

Secretary Lane's Woman Friend Dismayed at Convict's Strength

SECRETARY LANE tells a story of a remarkable feat of strength. He says a kind-hearted, elderly woman once visited a penitentiary and stopped before the cell of a man who had stolen a piano.

"I am very sorry to see you here," remarked the woman, turning to the convict. "Is is true that you stole a piano?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the frank admission of the convict. Then he added: "I did it in a moment of weakness."

"In a moment of weakness!" gasped the elderly visitor. "Mercy me! I presume that had you had your usual strength you would have walked away with the whole house!"

Man Who Defends War Is a Hero Too, Is La Follette's View

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE, apropos of the European war, said to a Washington reporter one day last week:

"War, thanks to the splendid peace propaganda that has been going on for a decade, becomes more and more unpopular. This war promises to be the most unpopular in history.

"Its unpopularity reminds me of the two squabblers.

"'I,' roared the first squabbler, 'I went to the war and defended my country.'

"'Pshaw, what of that?' sneered the second squabbler. 'I stayed at home and defended the war.'"

Federal Official Dismayed, He Almost Forgot Mikado's Birthday

IT is a serious thing to forget one's wife's birthday. Most men admit that. But to Charles Lee Cook, the most grievous oversight that could blight his life would be to slip by the birthday of the Kaiser, or the Czar or any other of the eminent sovereigns.

One night Cooke was attending a fashionable little dinner party and a young woman, two plates away, remarked by way of keeping a bit of table chatter in the air that her birthday fell on the morrow and that her husband had agreed to buy her a beautiful pearl necklace.

When Charles Lee Cooke heard that he clapped his hand to his brow melodramatically and gasped:

"I nearly forgot," he whispered, "that tomorrow is the Japanese Emperor's birthday."

Then everybody laughed uproariously, thinking that Cooke had merely sprung a clever little joke and all began to offer him suggestions in a giddy vein.

"What're you going to send the Emperor," asked one, "a celluloid comb and brush set, or a match safe?"

But it was no joke with Cooke. You see, he's attached to the office of the Third Assistant Secretary of State. One of his duties is to prepare cablegrams of congratulation whenever a sovereign with whom we have diplomatic dealings has a birthday.

Newlands Seldom Knows How or Where He Is Going, or Gets There

THE travel eccentricities of Senator Newlands of Nevada have been the cause of much amusement in official circles at Washington. The Senator, it seems, never knows when he starts to a railway station what road he is going over, if there is more than one road, and if there is only one road he doesn't know where he is going.

He never starts to the station until he has just barely enough time to get the train, [illegible]haps on the run, and even then he [illegible] change his mind and take another [illegible]. He has even been known to reverse after starting on his way, and instead of going to St. Paul, land in Texas for a visit wih his grandchildren. His desire to see his grandchildren in different parts of the country, it is said, is responsible for the Senator's sudden changes of plans.

One day recently Newlands left his office and told one of his clerks he was going over to Philadelphia for a day or two. The next they heard of him he was in Southern California—mingling with those same grandchildren already referred to. He changed his mind after getting on the train for Philadelphia.

MAN IS ARRESTED FOR MURDER AFTER 22 YEARS

Old Indictment Is Found When Desk Is Moved in Pittsburg Office.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 19.—That "murder will out" was exemplified in the arrest of Joseph M. Clark of 128 Harrison street, Chicago, for the murder of his brother in this city 22 years ago. The prisoner likely will be brought to this city in a few days to confront an indictment that has lain forgotten for years in an old desk in the District Attorney's office and was unearthed recently by accident.

When a new railing was put in last Friday the old desk was moved. One side of it, made false to represent drawers, swung open on hidden hinges and more than a bushel of dusty, yellow papers fell out.

Some of them were 26 and 28 years old, indictments which had never been tried. One indictment charged Joseph M. Gantt of 52 Fourteenth street with the murder of his brother, Frank Gantt, aged 37, at 5:20 p. m. Sept. 17, 1892, by stabbing him in the heart with a butcher knife at the supper table. Assistant District Attorney Dunn spent an hour or more looking over the old papers. When he saw the indictment for murder he remembered having heard of the tragedy when it was committed. He made an investigation and learned that Gantt, charged with the murder, has been living for years in Chicago under the name of Clark, is a structural iron worker and quite well-to-do.

What he had to sell: An automobile, a motor cycle, a summer cottage, a Morris chair. And he sold them through the Post-Dispatch Want Ad columns.

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Peruna Saved Me

Mrs. Powers, whose address is given below her portrait, is an ardent friend of Peruna. She says:

"I am thankful to tell you that my old trouble has never bothered me any since you received my testimonial. Any one wishing to know the facts in my case, if they will write me I will be glad to answer. Your medicine has saved me, and gave me perfect health. I frequently meet friends that knew me when I was in poor health. They ask me what has made such a change in me. I always tell them that it was the nerve remedy, Peruna. I shall praise Peruna as long as I live."

Catarrh of the Internal Organs

Mrs. A. T. Powers, R. R. 7, Box 121, London, Ohio, writes: "I write to thank you for the wonderful good your Peruna has done for me. I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for twenty-two years. Two years ago I began to take Peruna, and I only took about three bottles and today I can say I am a well person."

Catarrh is liable to affect any of the internal organs. This is especially true of the bladder, which is very frequently the seat of catarrh. This is sometimes called cystitis.

Mr. James M. Powell, No. 1620 W. Walnut St., Rosedale, Kansas, writes: "About four years ago I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder, which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain. I began taking Peruna and it greatly relieved me and in eleven weeks I was completely cured, and felt like a new man."

Those who object to liquid medicine can now procure Peruna in Tablet form. —ADV.

"Gets-It" for Corns Sure as Sunrise

New Plan. Corns Shrivel, Vanish.

Until "GETS-IT" was born nobody was ever sure of getting rid of a corn. Corn treatments nearly all contained the same ingredients, only some were liquid, some plasters, some "wrappers" and some in

Yankee Doodle had a limp, He had to ride a pony—
He put some "GETS-IT" on his corn, And called it, "O you only!"

salve form. Now comes "GETS-IT" with a newly discovered formula—the corn cure on a new principle and a simple plan that never fails. This is why "GETS-IT" has grown in three years to be the biggest-selling corn cure the world has ever known.

There's no more need of fussing with corns, no more digging or cutting. There's nothing to press down on the corn, nothing to inflame the flesh, to "pull" the corn or cause pain. Put two drops of "GETS-IT" on in two seconds. That's all. For any corn, callous, wart or bunion.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It If Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that every one should use:

5 grains Optona (1 tablet).
2 ounces Water.

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Optona system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.—ADV.

AIR DOES WONDERS WITH GRAY HAIR

When you looked at yourself face to face in the mirror last night and saw they gray strands that streak your hair, didn't you secretly wish that you knew of a way of GETTING RID of them?

There are two ways of meeting this gray hair problem. You can temporarily change the color by chemical staining with dye, or bring back the NATURAL color with Hay's Hair Health.

Hay's Hair Health performs this miracle with the aid of AIR—harmless, but absolutely sure and effective. It contains a wonderful element which, when applied to the hair, causes that hair to come back to its natural color by the action of the oxygen.

Yet so effective is it that every strand of gray now marring your appearance will disappear—must disappear. Other gray hairs will be kept from coming—and your whole head of hair will be made strong, lustrous, beautiful.

Dandruff will disappear. The scalp will be clean and healthy. And no one will know you are using Hay's Hair Health.

Nervous Periodical Headaches

Succumb to Anti-Kamnia Tablets

The trouble commonly called "sick headache" is said to be due to sickly conditions of the system. Often it is stated that a poor condition of the blood is a cause of these headaches, or that it is a nervous condition; and in certain cases, no doubt this is true.

Where treatment is demanded, it is more for the pain than anything else, and Dr. A. F. Schellschmidt of Louisville has found Anti-kamnia Tablets to give prompt and satisfactory relief. "Rest should be insisted upon," he says, "and the patient should go to bed, darken the room and all the attendants and family should be as quiet as possible. An emetic will sometimes shorten the attack. The bowels should be kept open with "Actoids;" a hot bath and a thorough rub-down with a coarse towel often give grateful relief. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets when the first signs appear, will usually prevent the attack. During an attack, one tablet every hour or two will shorten the attack and relieve the usual nausea and vomiting." These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for nervous headaches, neuralgia and all pains.—ADV.

HALF OF LOWRY'S ALLEGED SHORTAGE IN POSTAGE STAMPS

Former Condie-Neale Cashier Said to Have Charged Up $2963.60 Not Used.

TOTAL SHORTAGE $6314.15

Peculations Declared to Have Taken Place Between April, 1913, and Last Month.

Almost half of a shortage of $6314.15 alleged against Frank F. Lowry of 347 Fairlawn avenue, Webster Groves, former cashier of the Condie-Neal Glass Co., 2500 North Broadway, who was arrested yesterday, is said to consist of excess credits taken by him for postage stamps. He is alleged to have given himself credit on the books, between April, 1913, and August 11, 1914, for $2963.60 more stamps than were used.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Baer, after going over the report of accountants who had been examining Lowry's books since Sept. 1, said he would isue an information charging Lowry with embezzlement. Lowry was locked up. Friends are trying to obtain bond for him.

In the latter part of August D. H. Condie, president of the company, noticed the postage expense of the firm had greatly increased and called it to the attention of George R. Wendling, resident vice-president of the Fidelity and Deposit Co. of Maryland, which is on Lowry's bond for $5000. Wendling ordered an audit of the books and Lowry was relieved from his duties.

The acountants found that the average expenditure for stamps was $145.12 a month during the three years prior to Lowry becoming cashier, while during the 40 months that Lowry was cashier it averaged $293.30.

The accountants also found, their report states, that there had been duplication of entries for payrolls, postage, traveling expenses, etc., not substantiated by vouchers or other evidence, aggregating $2505.10. The method, they say, was to juggle the accounts between the cash book and the register. The irregularities found in the books covered the period from April, 1913, to August 11, this year.

Lowry has been employed by the firm seven years. His salary was $100 a month. He is 41 years old and has a wife and two children. His father is a clergyman at Little Rock, Ark.

He told the detectives that there was a shortage of about $700 on his books, due to errors in the petty cash accounts. He declined to make a statement to reporters.

OHIO COPPER MINING COMPANY IS BANKRUPT

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The Ohio Copper Mining Co., a Maine corporation, with authorized capital of $8,000,000, in which F. Augustus Heinze was one time a guiding spirit, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy this afternoon. The assets, the petition recites, are $1,343,000; the liabilities $1,668,000.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed several days ago against the corporation on behalf of three creditors residing in Salt Lake City, whose claims aggregated less than $1000.

The chief assets, according to the petition, are mining properties in Utah, valued at $1,000,000, and copper in possession of the American Smelting and Refining Co. to the value of $316,000. The petition states that the company owes $1,312,000 to holders of its bonds and coupons.

RAISED $2 BILLS TO $20S

Peddler Is Held for Trial by U. S. Authorities.

Fred Dreste, 27 years old, of 3016 Iowa avenue, a peddler, was arrested this morning on a charge of raising $2 bills to $20. When taken to the Carr Street Police Station one of the raised bills was found in his pocket.

Dreste said that his wife had tried to dissuade him from raising the bills, but that he had continued it. His method was to cut an 0 out of a piece of white paper, then place it after the numeral 2 on a $2 bill. He passed several on commission merchants with whom he dealt. He is held for the United States authorities.

HEAVY RECEIPTS OF BEEF

The receipts of beef cattle at the National Stockyards last week were the heaviest of the year. The total receipts are more than 35,000. Prime beef steers, however, have continued scarce, and have sold for as much as $10.75 per 100 pounds.

There has been a heavy demand for choice cattle. Lower grades have been very dull, and the market has been slow, consequently.

Civilization

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

ONE singular feature of the war in Europe is that all the participants are fighting for civilization. The Briton is trying to civilize the German, the German is trying to civilize the Frenchman, and each of them is doing his utmost to give the other what he apparently needs. What they mean, of course, is that each of them needs the other's civilization, and if one of them can thrust his civilization upon somebody else, he will consider that he has rendered the world a great service. Every country has its own civilization, as well as every community and every individual. In my civilization it is not possible for me to see any great virtue in yours. I may, but it would have to be so much like my own that one could not easily tell them apart. It is presumable that, taking the view we do of our bounden duty in this respect, somebody's civilization will ultimately prevail. A very serious student of the upheaval in Europe explained this to me the other night.

"The Slavic civilization is going to conquer Europe," he said. "In another 75 years there will be no other civilization upon that side of the Atlantic. The Slavs are fast becoming the dominant European race. They have tremendous families. They are just developing their fighting machine. Their civilization is just getting to its feet. This generation will not live to see it, but the Slav will come down on the Teutonic, Latin and British civilization exactly as the barbarians swept down upon Rome. It is the way of the world. It has always happened."

That made it quite plain, I thought. It struck me that if such genius as some of the Slavs possess in art and literature should take a political turn as well, Europe probably has her best days ahead of her. There are good things about her civilization now, just as there was an undying glory about the civilization of the Greeks; but civilizations, as far as I can make out, are pretty much like automobiles: the latest model is the best. It has more improvement on it. It is less work to run it. The action is smoother. More than all else, too, it has some attachments which are absolutely new—which nobody else ever had. That is a great thing with human nature. All is not vanity in this world, but a good deal is. No doubt of that.

IT is very difficult to see how we are ever to have peace. We never have had it, and we find that after all we have said about it we have not diminished anybody's intolerance of what anybody else likes. That remains. It was so in the beginning, and it will be so to the end. I am satisfied of it. It is not necessary to say that man is descended from a monkey. He is a monkey now. Not content with having a competent religion and a good working civilization, he is unhappy until he thrusts those things upon somebody else. To that end we have always hunted one another down, and there does not seem to be much change in us under the skin, now that we have big universities and wear beautiful clothes. Something primordial stirs in us at the thought of some religion other than our own or some other system of ethics. We can't abide it. We want to kill those people. There seems sufficient extenuation for anything we may do in the conviction that we are doing this not for ourselves alone, but for posterity and the world. That has always been the case, and a great many people have actually been killed. I read the other day that more people have been killed in battle in Europe than there are living or about to get killed on that continent now. The cheerful business of thrusting one's civilization, one's religion or one's ethics, upon somebody else at the point of the sword has gone on merrily in Europe since God knows when. It is going on now—and, what is more alarming for our ideals, it is going on with even more vigor and effectiveness than ever before.

The last foolish question was, "What caused the present war in Europe?" It was caused, my dear simpleton, by human intolerance of what anybody else likes. If Mr. Carnegie's money can take that out of human nature, we shall forgive him his manner of making it, nor do we care very much how far he went. We have tried to refine that out of ourselves in every way we could think of. Some of us even thought it was gone. We know better now. When we see about half of the civilized world carrying on exactly as the Greeks and the Trojans carried on through those 10 bloody years before Troy, we know it remains and is moreover as lively as a cricket.

IT is interesting to speculate upon the first hostile interest we displayed in each other. It is supposable that first seeing one another we were not very hostile. That feeling arose when we observed that we did not comb our hair alike, that we did not pray into the same point of the compass or that our table manners materially differed. We thereupon yielded to the strange conceit that something ought to be done to make these things uniform, and the bloody work of standardization set in at once. That this was the beginning of our hostility to one another is easily discoverable by analyzing ourselves today. We cannot see why other people do as they do, and when the respects in which we differ from one another in manners and customs become intolerable we all take up arms, call upon God to take sides with us, and engage in the gentle art of excitedly shooting each other down. If that doesn't prove man to be a monkey this minute, what does it establish?

We read a great deal about the morale of the contending hosts in Europe. It is said to be excellent. That is, everybody is still convinced that he is right and the other fellow is wrong. The guns of the other side may rock him a little, but they cannot shake his conviction that he has right on his side. That imbues him with confidence. It gives him courage. God is with him. That is always essential. Once an army wavers in its conviction that it is doing the Lord's work, or that it is fighting for men unborn, it is a goner. Its morale is bad. It is not sure of itself. The first thing it knows it is running, and the exultant enemy is on its back. One must be sure of the righteousness of one's cause. There is no time to think that over after the action begins.

The spectacle of those men, who are exactly like us, butchering one another and delighting in the smell of one another's blood, amazes us. We think of it in the morning as a nightmare that must have invaded our rest. It is no such thing, of course. It is real enough. The trouble with us is that with spinning daydreams we got a little ahead of ourselves. We did not stop to ask ourselves if we had finally become tolerant of what other people like. If we had done that, we would have known that there is no peace except as a period of preparation for war. The process of standardization is the same as it was. The efficacy of prayer is not sufficient to make other people like what we like. We cannot do anything talking with them about it. There is but the one alternative—war! Somehow, in the necessity of that cruel adjustment all the refinements of feeling which are characteristic of us in peace miraculously vanish. We live a double life, so to speak. Our civilization, which ought to restrain us, becomes the very casus belli itself. What do you make of it, gentle reader?

It does beat all.

Prisoner Convinced of Guilt Despite Circumstantial Evidence

WASHINGTON,, Sept. 19.

AT a recent banquet, Congressman Joshua W. Alexander of Missouri was seen to stretch his features into a broad grin when it was remarked that the innocent are sometimes convicted on circumstantial evidence. When Alexander grins like that his friends know he has been "reminded of one." Those present were persistent, so he unfolded the following yarn of a Western court:

"A man was charged with stealing a gold watch and chain, but at the trial the evidence was very meager, and the Judge discharged the prisoner. Instead of beating it for the door, however, the prisoner remained in the dock with a perplexed expression.

"'The prisoner is discharged!' again exclaimed the Judge, noticing that the man wasn't making any motions like hurrying away.

"'Yer honor,' began the prisoner, glancing first at the Judge and then at the plaintiff,'I wants'——

"'You are discharged!' exclaimed the Judge, a trifle irritably. 'Why don't you leave the dock?'

"'I wants to ask a question, Judge,' was the startling rejoinder of the prisoner. 'Do I have to give him back his watch?'"

Senator Swanson's Stirring Speech to Two Mountain Women

SENATOR SWANSON of Virginia holds an enviable reputation as a political orator. One of the best political speeches he ever delivered was to an audience of two women. He had been campaigning in a moonshining district in the mountains of Virginia. After dinner at a well-to-do friend's house that evening, the host said:

"See hyah, my wife and daughter haven't eve. had the pleasuh of hyan' yo' style of speakin'. I want yo' to stand up right hyah and now and give them that same speech yo' delivuhed this afte'noon."

Senator Swanson was game. He did not omit a gesture or an anecdote from the speech and the audience seemed in accord with what he had to say. Also, the women must have made favorable comments on the speech to the neighbors, for he has been carrying that precinct by almost unanimous vote ever since.

Newlands Figures on Time When He May Not Be Worth the Cost

SENATOR NEWLANDS of Nevada has a horse that nearly cut itself to pieces at Reno recently while trying to sift itself through a barbed wire fence. A veterinary was called and said it would cost $50 to properly take care of the animal. As the horse was old and not worth $50, the veterinary advised Newland "to just shoot it."

"But," asked Newlands, "how do I know the horse wants to die. Put him on his feet again and send me the bill. Do you suppose I'd want anybody to shoot me when I got old just because I've ceased to be worth the amount of a doctor bill?"

BANKERS TRUST STOCKHOLDERS TO HOLD A MEETING

Three Persons Largely Interested Call Gathering for Wednesday at Planters Hotel.

WILL BE FIRST OF KIND

Conference Had Friday Fails to Decide on Receiver—Lester S. Parker Is Suggested.

Three large stockholders of the Bankers' Trust Co., which is in the hands of State Bank Commissioner Mitchell, yesterday sent out letters calling a meeting of all stockholders at 10 a. m. Wednesday at the Planters Hotel. The letter states the meeting is the first one to which all stockholders have been invited and that the affairs generally of the trust company will be considered.

It is expected the stockholders will be given full information regarding the trust company affairs and it is understood an effort will be made to obtain a copy of the audit of the company by Westermann, Trader & Co., details of which have been published in the Post-Dispatch.

The call was signed by Emil S. Strauss, president of Strauss Brothers' Mercantile Co.; Adolph Singer, president of Singer Brothers Cloak Co., and H. W. Wiswell.

L. S. Parker Suggested for Receiver.

A conference yesterday, attended by Bank Commissioner Mitchell, Assistant Attorney-General Fitch and Charles W. Bates, attorney for M. S. Leming, who recently filed a receivership suit against the trust company, failed to result in an agreement for the appointment of a receiver. Mitchell opposed the receivership suit in the Supreme Court and was successful in preventing the appointment of a receiver. It is reported he is now agreeable to such an appointment and will recommend that Lester S. Parker of Jefferson City be appointed.

Parker was a director of the trust company during nearly all of its existence and the records show that he participated in nearly all directors' meetings at which various deals, which are shown to have resulted disastrously for the company, were authorized or approved. He was named by Mitchell as special agent of the Banking Department to take charge of the trust company after the receivership suit was filed.

Letters have been written to Mitchell by J. P. Graham, also a director, and other stockholders requesting the appointment of Parker for receiver. Mitchell also has received a number of protests against a recommendation that Parker be appointed.

Franklin's Statement.

John E. Franklin, former president of the Bankers Trust Co., who is now in Colorado Springs, has sent to the Post-Dispatch a statement, which follows:

"I have just read the articles in the Post-Dispatch criticising the Bankers Trust Co. and its management.

"As to the charge that I sold some of the stock after the first of May, when the company was in financial trouble, this is absolutely false. The stock of mine that was sold was held as collateral and was sold by order of the banks that held this collateral and against my protest.

"As to the charge that the management of the trust company paid unearned dividends—this is based upon the alleged inflation of book values of bank stocks held by the Bankers Trust Co. As a matter of fact, there was no inflation of these bank stock values.

"It was the rule with the management of the trust company to carry the bank stocks of the company at book value. Banks do not pay all their earnings in dividends, but retain more or less of these earnings in surplus and undivided profit. We put into our profit account the dividends received from these banks and once a year revised the book values of these stocks by adding in the earnings for the year that had not been paid out in dividends. These are the various entries criticised as inflations of book values and these were entirely legitimate and proper, as any banker will concede.

"The fact that the appraisement of these stocks by Messrs. Hilliard, Clarkson & Hubbard at a somewhat less amount than they were carried on our books arises from the fact that one of the banks in which we held stock—namely, the State National Bank of Little Rock, had been closed for liquidation by action of its directors and this committee marked them off as a loss the entire amount at which we were carrying this stock, also reduced the value of the stocks of some of our banks that held rediscounts of the State National Bank. The Comptroller of the Currency later held that the State National Bank was solvent and it is being liquidated now under the superintendence of its Board of Directors.

Personally Favored Selling Stocks.

"That some of these bank stocks have been sold recently at less than book value is not surprising, considering that they were forced sales and at a time so unfavorable to the sale of any property. As a matter of fact, the entire list of bank stocks held by the Bankers' Trust Co. could have been sold in April at a higher value than we were carrying them, and I personally favored selling these stocks, but was opposed by some of our directors.

"The fact that some of the notes held by our trust company were considered slow and uncollectible by the Committee of Bankers that made the appraisement is no subject of just criticism. No large financial institution in St. Louis but what has as much or more of such paper.

"Another criticism was that $1,600,000 was added to surplus account without any assets to show therefor. This is entirely erroneous, as the report of Westerman & Trader show; for this entry was more than offset by the value of subsidies and donations received on account of the construction of the San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf Railroad.

"It is charged that the Committee of Bankers that appraised the assets of the trust company valued this railroad at a much less amount than it was carried on the books of the trust company. This valuation of the committee was confessedly arbitrary, as they did not profess to be railroad experts. They admitted that the railroad cost, from all the information they could obtain about what we carried it at, and a half dozen expert railroad men who examined the property assured us that the valuation at which we were carrying it was low enough and that whenever there was any sale of railroad property at all we weuld dealize what we were carrying this property for, or more.

Building Railroad a Mistake.

"The fact that the management of the trust company made a mistake in undertaking the construction of this railroad is frankly admitted. This did not seem to be the case at the time the deal was undertaken and it is only the unfavorable course of events, that could not be foreseen, that has made this undertaking so unfortunate for the Bankers' Trust Co.

"It is this railroad construction that has caused all our trouble and I am wholly to blame for undertaking it, for it was on my recommendation that the board of directors of the trust company approved the undertaking. It was an error of judgment which I greatly deplore. I have suffered greater financial loss than any one else, but at the same time the losses of my friends and others who were stockholders in the Bankers' Trust Co. have worried me more than my own losses.

"The most thorough investigation, however, will not show any malfeasance on the part of the management of the Bankers' Trust Company or its board of directors.

"A few disgruntled stockholders demanded in May that they have the privilege of employing a firm of chartered accountants to make a thorough investigation of the books and affairs of the trust company. This privilege was freely granted and the firm of Westerman & Trader made a very exhaustive examination. I have not been furnished with a copy of that report, but I am so sure that they found nothing that would reflect on the management of the company that I am asking this firm today to give you a written statement for publication and am asking them if they found anything to criticise that they frankly state what it is."

Memoranda taken from the records of the Bankers Trust Co. shows that in November, 1913, Franklin held 5584 shares of Bankers Trust stock, and on May 8, 1914, he held only 5140 shares, having reduced his holdings 444 shares, most of the reduction being between May 1 and May 8, when the collapse of the trust company was impending.

The audit of the trust company books shows that during its existence the trust company appreciated the value of stocks it owned to the amount of $296,819.58, and that this money was paid out in dividends. The appraisers of the assets found that instead of these stocks being worth more than their book value, they were actually worth $188,654.75 less than their book value.

The audit shows that the San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf Railroad is carried on the books at a valuation of $3,982,638.57, and that $1,600,000 of supposed value had been carried to surplus. The appraisers reported that the road had a valuation of only $3,160,000.

25,197 VOTERS REGISTER, 145,000 ARE NOW ELIGIBLE

Election Commissioner Says About 3500 to 4000 New Names Are Added to List.

The total registration Thursday was 25,197, as shown by the tabulation completed yesterday by the Board of Election Commissioners.

Election Commissioner May estimated that between 3500 and 4000 new names have been added to the poll books by the registration. The registration for the charter election was 141,216, which, with the addition of the registration Thursday, will make about 145,000 eligible to vote at the general election and on the Free Bridge bond issue.

In the fourth precinct of the Sixteenth Ward, which is largely populated by negroes, May said it had been reported a negro who was waiting in line to register, when suddenly asked his name by an election official, referred to a card and said his name was Smith.

May said the entire Sixteenth Ward was canvassed by clerks of election yesterday to check up the registration and 125 names had been placed on the doubtful list. A further investigation will be made to see if an effort was made to pad the registration books.

OVERCHARGE CASE OF ROADS ARGUED IN FEDERAL COURT

Santa Fe and Burlington Attorneys Present Motion to Transfer All Suits.

The motion of the Santa Fe and Burlington railroads to have transferred from the State to the Federal courts the suits filed against them by Attorney-General Barker for the recovery of the overcharges in freight and passenger traffic during the seven years' suspension, by injunction, of the maximum freight rate and 2-cent passenger laws, was argued and submitted to United States District Judge Dyer yesterday.

Barker, on behalf of the State and all the shippers and citizens who paid the alleged overcharges, filed suit to collect a sum estimated at $20,000,000 to $25,000,000. After the two laws were passed by the Missouri Legislature the railroads got an injunction in the Federal courts declaring the laws unconstitutional. The cases went to the Supreme Court of the United States, where they were decided adversely to the railroads.

Assistant Attorney-General Fitch and Special Counsel Gilmore contended the hands of the officials and citizens of the State were tied during that time, by the injunction, and that they were forced to submit to the rates which were higher than the laws permitted. They argued there was no Federal question involved in the suits, and that they were based strictly upon statutes of this State.

The attorneys for the railroads contended that each claim of each shipper or citizen was a cause for a separate action, and that when the Attorney-General attempted to include in his suit all the people in the State he had clearly laid the groundwork for having the case carried into the Federal courts. Some of the claims also amounted to more than $3000, thus entitling the railroads to have them tried in the Federal courts, they argued.

ZOO'S TWO LION CUBS ARE NOT FEELING WELL

Gretchen and Hans, erstwhile residents of Hamburg, Germany, but who since last March have made their home in Forest Park Zoo, are ill.

Gretchen and Hans are two lion cubs, the former presented to the zoo by Lorenz Hagenbeck, the animal trainer, and the latter by J. Arthur Anderson. Gretchen has required the services of a veterinarian three times a week for indigestion, and has lived in luxury hardly dreamed of by her cousins in war-stricken Germany. Tomato soup with rice, sherry and milk and beef stew are some of the delicacies which have constituted her diet. With laudable chivalry he has refrained from pleading for any of the sympathy showered on his mate.

School children in increasing numbers have visited the cages of these cubs during the summer, Park Commissioner Davis says, and he feels the increased popularity of the zoo more than compensates the city for the expenditures of $150 for the care of the indisposed cubs.

POLICEMAN'S SON HELD FOR DESTROYING TREES

Boy, 10, Implicates Three Others in Killing Yeatman Square Vegetation.

Peter Moloney Jr., 10-year-old son of a desk sergeant in the Laclede Avenue District, admitted to Capt. Singleton of the Dayton Street District yesterday he was one of four boys who destroyed 20 young maple trees in Yeatman square about 10 days ago. The other boys were Kenneth Floyd, 14 years old, of 1731 North Leffingwell avenue; Carl Barnes, 16, of 2700A Howard street, and Leo La Blaine, 14, of 2556 Montgomery street. All were arrested.

The police suspected the boys after learning they had quarreled with Private Watchman O'Brien, custodian of the playgrounds, and inquiry at their homes revealed three of them had left the city after the tree-cutting incident.

Moloney, when questioned, admitted his part and implicated the others. They returned from High Hill, Mo., yesterday.

MOTHER-IN-LAW HANDS DOCTOR OVER TO POLICE

Says He Was About to Desert Family—Ticket to New York Found in His Pocket.

Dr. Max Malevanchik, a physician with offices at 807 Chemical Building, was turned over to the police yesterday at Eighteenth and Market streets by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Rose Gibstine, and his brother-in-law, Sam Gibstine, of 1610 Franklin avenue, who said he was deserting his wife and children. Malevanchik, his wife, Tilla, and two children, have been living at 1414 Belt avenue.

When searched at police headquarters he had in his pockets $2 in cash, eight express money orders for small amounts, a gold watch and a ticket to New York. Immediately after arriving at the police station, Malevanchik called his wife on the telephone, told her that her mother had caused his arrest, and asked her to come and sign his bond. He then told the police that he was on his way to New York to take an examination in dentistry.

"You can't go. You must stay and take care of your wife and children," Mrs. Gibstine told him.

He broke down and wept and was led away to a cell. A charge of disturbing the peace was made against him when Mrs. Gibstine said he had struck her while she was holding him for the police. Dr. Malevanchik has been married seven years.

TWO OFFICIALS CLAIM CONTROL OF MORGUE

New Charter Names City Health Commissioner—Coroner Can't See It That Way.

Who's the boss of the morgue?

Under the old charter Padberg was in command, appointing two keepers at salaries of $1200 and $900 a year respectively, and a janitor at $600. The Coroner has been in charge of the place by virtue of being a State officer in charge of the bodies of all people who died by violent death. He contends that this is still under his direction.

The new charter specifically states that the Health Commissioner shall have charge of the institution. Starkloff asked the opinion of City Councillor Baird, and said that Baird read that section of the new charter to him which states that he shall be in charge. Then Padberg asked for an opinion, and said that Baird told him what was meant was that the Health Commissioner should have charge of the sanitation, etc.

Starkloff said that Henry S. Caulfield, attorney for the Board of Freeholders which framed the charter, and Selden P. Spencer, who was a board member, agreed with him that the charter mean he should be in charge of the "dead house."

Baird was out of the city yesterday, but upon his return will be asked for a more concise opinion.

Man Hit by Auto Is Badly Cut.

Frank J. Gilleran, 20 years old, of 5816 Ridge avenue, paymaster for the Laclede Gas Light Co., was cut when an auto while driven by Frank A. Grant of the Park Hotel struck his machine with such force at Lindell boulevard and King's highway that he was thrown through the windshield yesterday.

FIRST REGIMENT MUST GET $7000 OR CLOSE ARMORY

Col. Donnelly Says City Crippled Militia by Cutting Appropriation in Half.

Col. Arthur B. Donnelly, commanding the First Infantry, National Guard of Missouri, yesterday said the regiment would have to raise funds immediately or close the Armory, at Grand and Manchester avenues, on Nov. 1. The regiment is now without funds.

This condition has been brought about, he said, by the city's failure to appropriate $10,000 this year to meet Armory expenses. The customary appropriation was cut in half last April, so that the regiment only received $5000 from the city. This already has been spent. Col. Donnelly said $7197 was needed to operate the Armory until April 15, next, when another municipal appropriation is due.

The city appropriation is used to pay for janitor service, heat, lights and repairs. Col. Donnelly plans to ask Mayor Kiel for an emergency appropriation of $5000, to be made as soon as the Municipal Assembly reconvenes next week. No reason, he said, was given for cutting the appropriation.

The maintenance of the regiment costs about $50,000 a year, Col. Donnelly said. The city pays only a small part of it. About $15,000 or $20,000 comes from the State. The War Department furnishes uniforms, arms and ammunition. It also pays the regular army scale of pay when the regiment is in camp, and, until this year, has paid for transporting troops to camp.

Repairs are needed on the Armory, which was built seven years ago for $60,000, and was intended for use for five years, when it was hoped a permanent structure could be obtained. Funds for the repairs will be raised from the proceeds of the regiment's annual play, which will be given this year at the Odeon, Dec. 7, 8, 9. This will be the fifth year a play has been given.

LEAGUE CHILDREN RESOLVED TO EARN $5000 FOR FUND

When the tenth season's life-saving service of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund reaches its close next month the record then established will be the most brilliant and beautiful in all the years of the Fund's history.

This is because it will have been made by the biggest and most earnest army of Children of the League yet organized to fight grim Death away from the babies of the poor in the city's crowded tenement districts. Nearly 3000 boys and girls now are enlisted under the League standard.

They have fought splendidly. Their dauntless efforts have been so effective that again St. Louis takes its proud station as the city that has the lowest baby death rate of any large city in all this great country.

Do you realize what this means?

CONTRIBUTIONS.

Previously acknowledged	$4421 92
Nicholas Scharff II	5 00

It means that the Children of the League, raising nearly, if not quite, $5000 for the support of the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission, which maintains 18 pure milk distributing stations in the congested quarters of St. Louis, and the Free Ice and Sick Diet Circle of the King's Daughters, which distributes free ice to tenement mothers and the sick poor, have saved hundreds of baby lives that otherwise surely would have been sacrificed.

Every child whose name appears on the membership list of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk League this season shares in the credit of this noble achievement. It is their help which has made possible the saving of all these baby lives. It is they who have contributed the financial support but for which grim old Death would have claimed his full toll of baby lives in the tenements. They will be the victors in the summer-long conflict.

All honor to these Children of the League!

And they still are working to save the little ones of the poor. The very latest addition to their number is Nicholas Scharff II, who contributes $5 to the Pure Milk Fund to help save the tenement tots. His name, too, is on the League membership list, and the Post-Dispatch Weather Bird on the League Button has flown straight to his home in witness to that fact.

Welcome and greeting, Nicholas Scharff II! It won't be your fault, nor the fault of any other of the nearly 3000 Children of the League, if the Pure Milk Fund fails to reach a total of $5000 this season. The Children of the League know that every dollar of this amount is needed for the good work, whose cost is defrayed by them. They are doing their level best to break all Fund records by reaching a $5000 total.

WOMAN CHARGES FRISCO DEAL COST R. I. $7,000,000

DES MOINES, Io., Sept. 19.—A petition for an injunction restraining the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Co. from holding the annual meeting in October or a previous special meeting of the directors, was filed here today in the District Court by Mrs. Clara S. McNeill. She is the owner of $80,000 of the bonds of the company and recently filed a petition for a receiver.

Unless restrained, the petition today says D. G. Reid and other officers will transfer on the records $71,353,500 of the stock of the company which, Mrs. McNeill alleges, has been pledged to pay the bonds of which she holds a part.

It is claimed in the petition that in the purchase of the St. Louis and San Francisco and its sale later to B. F. Yoakum, Reid and his associates lost more than $7,000,000 for the Rock Island and that the transaction was made for the purpose of defrauding the stockholders and bondholders of the Rock Island.

PARACHUTE PLANTS ARE IN BLOOM AT SHAW'S GARDEN

There is a floral aeronautic meet in the cactus house of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Five forms of the parachute plant are in bloom. Three are planted in pots on the ground and two are of the vine habit of growth, while the other is stalky. Two forms swing from hanging baskets suspended from the ceiling.

The Sandersoni, named in honor of the botanist, Sanderson, is the most perfect parachute form. The flowers grow upright along the stem of the vine. The petals of the flower are united, forming a funnel, about one and a half inches long, with five seams or ribs. The ribs extend about one-fourth of an inch, then unite, forming a five-pointed canopy, which is suspended over the funnel-form corolla by the five ribs. The form of the flower is exactly like a parachute opened for flight. The flower is a delicate green, the canopy is mottled with dark brown. This species has foliage, but rather scant.

Ceropegia Hybrida—a hybrid of the Sanderson variety—is much like the parent in form, except the canopy part of the flower has the appearance of a parachute which has been caught in a storm and turned inside out. The plant is almost without foliage, the leaves are very scant and are merely undeveloped leaf buds.

Another form of this curious plant is to be found in bloom. The flowers in bud resemble a closed parachute, and when in full bloom the flower has the appearance of a parachute which has been ripped at each rib. This variety is leafless.

The other two varieties have small flowers and foliage, and make pretty hanging baskets.

The parachute flowers are natives of South Africa, and are succulent. They are the desert plants of South Africa, as the cactus is of our plains.

Files $5850 Suit, Alleging Services.

A suit for $5850 was filed yesterday by Charles G. Behnke against Christian Rathsam of 4334 Virginia avenue. The suit is for services in connection with Rathsam getting his share of the estate of his nephew, George Rhodius of Indianapolis. Behnke says he was promised 15 per cent by Rathsam. The petition states the defendant got $30,000 and paid the plaintiff $100.

JOPLIN WOMAN IS RESTORED BY WONDERFUL STOMACH REMEDY

Mrs. Hillman Took Treatment Two Years Ago—Has Been Well Ever Since.

Mrs. Ida Hillman of Joplin suffered from stomach ailments for twelve years. She followed the advice of several expert physicians and took a great deal of medicine. Two years ago she discovered Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy—and she has been well since. Mrs. Hillman took but a few doses. She writes:

"I suffered with stomach trouble almost twelve years. I tried many doctors, but received no help until, while in Cleveland, Ohio, I read your notice in a paper and concluded to try Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Since then I have felt like a new woman.

"I took only four bottles, but that was all that was needed to make me well. It has been almost two years and I have had no return of my trouble."

Similar accounts of the remarkable results of the use of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy came from all parts of the country. It clears the digestive tract of mucoid accretions and poisonous matter. It brings swift relief to sufferers from stomach ailments, liver and intestinal disorders. Many declare it has saved them from operations; many are sure that it has saved their lives.

We want all people who have chronic stomach trouble or constipation, no matter of how long standing, to try one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy—one dose will convince you. This is the medicine so many of our people have been taking with surprising results. The most thorough system cleanser ever sold. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is now sold here by Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and druggists everywhere.—ADV.

WRONG NEGRO PUZZLED BY QUICK CONVICTION

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 19.—Will Russell, a negro, held as a witness in a murder case, was tried, convicted and sentenced to two years in the chain gang in the criminal division of the Superior Court here, because he has the same name as another negro charged with burglary. The wrong Will Russell answered the bailiff's call and throughout the trial the astonished negro sat without saying a word.

He was identified by the complaining witness, by the arresting officer and by witnesses. When sentence was pronounced, his lawyer asked him if he wanted to make a statement.

"I ain't done nothin', boss," said the negro. 'I ain't no burglar. I don't know anything about it. I don't even know you."

"You don't know me!" gasped the attorney. "I'm your lawyer."

"Boss," the negro said, earnestly, "I never saw you before."

An investigation revealed that they had tried and convicted the wrong negro. The action of the court was set aside.

MORE GETTYSBURG DEAD

Bones of Three Bodies Unearthed in Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 19.—While George Woodward was hunting bullets in the field of the Alms House farm near Barlow's Knoll he saw what he thought was human bones and began scratching with his umbrella, unearthing a human skull. He then secured a shovel and dug up the bones of three men.

Together with the bones were found two five-dollar gold coins of the dates of 1833 and 1844, two portions of shoes and nine brass buttons, bearing the coat of arms of New York State, a number of iron trouser buttons and several musket caps.

8 GIVE SKIN FOR WOUND

Operation on Webb City Woman Is Successful.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Sept. 19.—Mrs. W. M. Drury, a victim of the motor car wreck on the M. & N. A. Railway in August was taken to the city hospital here this morning to have pieces of skin from eight other persons grafted on her wounds. This was necessary to save her life.

Among those who made the sacrifice of skin are Misses Mary Coyne and Clara Danglade, daughters of mine operators, and Edward Stevens, mail carrier. The operation was successful.

GAS FUMES KILL FOUR MEN

Patients at Ohio Hospital Were Working in Silo.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19.—Four men were killed at the hospital farm today, according to a telegram sent by officials of the Athens State Hospital to members of the State Board of Administration, the governing body. Two other persons were reported probably fatally injured.

A later telegram explained that the men were overcome by noxious fumes generated in the silo where they were working. All of the victims were patients in the State Hospital.

DOG HAS WOODEN LEG

SUPERIOR, Wis., Sept. 19.—William Billstein of the Columbia Clothing Co. is the proud possessor of a dog with a wooden leg. Last winter his pointer dog, Max, caught one of his hind legs in a steel trap. Before he was released it was frozen and had to be amputated.

Since then various devices were tried, but none was successful until Mr. Billstein obtained the services of an expert artificial limb manufacturer. He built a miniature limb for Max, who is now "just as good as a new dog." Billstein thinks Max will make just as good a showing in the hunting field as any dog.

24 SHIPS REGISTERED

Twenty-Seven Others Prepare to Come in Under New Law.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Twenty-four foreign built vessels, with a total tonnage of 100,820 have been admitted to American registry under the new shipping law, and customs collectors are acting on registers for 27 additional ships of 106,360 aggregate tonnage.

Secretary Redfield informed the Senate yesterday the time was not opportune for a general trade campaign in South America. He said displays of "individual and corporate products should not be made under the auspices of the Federal Government."

"For the moment," he added, "it seems the policy called for is that of service to South America by helping her regain her credit, rather than to expect her, under existing conditions, to make large purchases."

SYMPHONY ADOPTS A STAGE SETTING SAXL SUGGESTED

New Scenery to Have Draft-Proof Walls and Overhead Sounding Board.

AIDS ORCHESTRA'S TONE

Fritz Kreisler, Now at War, Only Artist Who Cannot Fulfill Season's Contract.

The management of the Symphony Orchestra has decided to get a new stage setting for its concerts this season, the design for which was suggested by Dr. Ernst Saxl, former member of the Symphony Society directorate, who died suddenly a week ago.

The setting used for six years is inadequate for the present size of the orchestra, besides being considerably worn and out of repair. The new one, to correct defects found in the old one, will have draft-proof walls and an overhead sounding board, which will improve the tone of the orchestra. A system of indirect lighting, that will serve the musicians better than the present system and be pleasanter to the eyes of the audience, also will be installed.

Scenic artists are making sketches after the design suggested to Conductor Max Zach by Dr. Saxl when the two met in Vienna in July, and the new setting will be used for the first time at the opening concert of the Symphony season, Nov. 6, at the Odeon.

$18,000 for Odeon Improvements.

The Odeon itself has been practically reconstructed. The lighting, heating and ventilating systems have been rearranged, wooden floors and partitions replaced with concrete and all exposed woodwork coated with fireproof paint. Three eight-foot exits have been cut on the north side of the building, where formerly there was none. It is said the Odeon management spent about $18,000 for repairs suggested after the M. A. C. fire.

A change that will be of interest to symphony patrons is the new indirect ceiling chandeliers in place of the row of unshaded lamps over the boxes and around the edge of the ceiling, and the hooded high-power lamps where the proscenium lights with their curtain screen were last season. This system of lighting will enable the management to keep sufficient light in the auditorium for concert attendants to read the program notes in comfort and at the same time suffer no inconvenience from the glare of the full illumination

The symphony subscriptions to date total $5000, more than at the same time last year. Many of those received during the week have come from persons not yet home from their summer tours and some from Europe. Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Culyer and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Singer, who are in London waiting to sail for home, have sent subscriptions for the season through Mrs. Max A. Goldstein, a director of the Symphony Society, who sailed for home a few days ago.

Three of Orchestra in War Zone.

Three members of the orchestra who went abroad in July still are unheard from, but it is believed they will be able to get home in time for the beginning of the season. All three have their first citizenship papers, but have not completed the process of naturalization. They are Oswald Thumser, viola, last heard from in Prague; Emil Post, cello, who was visiting his old home in Northern Germany; and Andrea Casertani, bass viol, who was in Capua, Italy, when last heard from.

The American managers of all the artists engaged, with one exception, have assured the symphony managment of their ability to fulfill their contracts. The exception is Fritz Kreisler, the celebrated violinist, who is commanding his troop of Austrian cavalry against the Russians. Kreisler cannot come to America until the war is over.

"OPIUM CIGARETTE" DEN RAIDED; TRADE STOPPED

Invention of Chinese Chemist to Spread Habit Is Made Useless by Law.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The invention by a Chinese chemist of an "opium cigarette," the enactment of a Federal law making its manufacture or sale a felony, secret raids on dens where the new cigarette was being made, the indictment of seven Chinese and one white man summarizes a story revealed here today.

The invention of the chemist was discovered several months ago and the law against it was passed. The chemist escaped and plans which he had made to spread the opium habit lapsed until recently.

The den where the indicted Chinese and the white man—Emil Lehman—worked was located in this city. The raid revealed preparations to make the cigarette on a wholesale basis. There were several tins of pure opium and an assortment of herbs which were to be used in giving the cigarette the appearance of tobacco. Addresses of agents all over the country were found, and circulars instructing agents how the habit could be spread among the unwitting. A great advantage of the invention was, it was stated in the circulars, that it could be smoked in the streets. The raid was made several days ago in the greatest secrecy and the story came out today in connection with the return indictments.

FAVORS MAYOR NAMING EDUCATION BOARD

Civic League Majority Expresses View That May Be General Public Sentiment.

The first returns from the Civic League's canvass of its members for an expression of their views on the method of selecting members of the Board of Education were made public yesterday. Of the 190 members voting, 127 favored the appointment of the board members by the Mayor; 57 for the election of the members, on a nonpartisan ticket.

If it should be found that the views of the Civic League members thus expressed represent a general public sentiment in St. Louis, a movement will be started to have the Legislature next spring pass a law giving the Mayor power to appoint the board members. The members at present are elected on a bi-partisan ticket.

U. S. AIDS MAKERS OF CLAM SHELL BUTTONS IN IOWA

$150,000 STATION PUT UP

Romance, Bloodshed and Intrigue Underlie Marvelous Ten Years' Development.

MUSCATINE, Io. Sept. 19.—The recent dedication of the United States biological station at Fairport, a small hamlet eight miles above here on the Mississippi River, marks the expenditure of $150,000 by the Government in developing the pearl button industry. Besides maintaining this experiment station for the propagation of mussels from the shells of which the buttons are manufactured, the Government annually spends $25,000 in field work in furtherance of the mussel growing industry.

The pearl button industry is practically a new one. It was in 1890 that John F. Boepple, in whose memory a tablet was erected at Fairport, discovered that the fresh water mussel might be utilized in the manufacture of pearl buttons. His discovery was followed by the invention of button cutting machinery and a development of this new industry which invests in it a romance which is found in but few lines of business activity.

The scores of factories which sprang up in Muscatine and later were started in other cities brought about a depletion of the shell beds of the Mississippi and tributary streams, and with the extinction of the whole industry threatened the attention of science was drawn to the problem. The manufacturers were aggressive in searching for a method by which the mussel might be propagated and the shell beds replenished.

Important Discovery.

At the University of Missouri, George Lefevre and W. C. Curtis, professors of biology, made an important discovery. They learned that the mussel was of parasitic growth and further that it was necessary for the embryo clam to attach itself to the gills or fins of a fish for a period of 10 days before it could resume its normal development. They found, also, that the embryo mussels, or glochidia, as it is known in the scientific world, had preferences as to the variety of fish to which they would attach themselves.

An industry in which hundreds of thousands of dollars was invested and thousands of people were dependent upon for a livelihood was threatened and Uncle Sam was appealed to. It was upon the discovery made at the University of Missouri that the Bureau of Fisheries was able to act and to that department Uncle Sam assigned the problem of conserving the mussel shell and the button industry.

A congressional appropriation permitted of the institution which is now located at Fairport. The station was established by Congress in 1908, and the construction was commenced the following year. In June, 1910, the experimental work at the station was begun with a provisional equipment and in 1912 the practical work of mussel propogation was being carried on extensively and in an organized manner. This year witnessed the completion of a $40,000 permanent laboratory where the lowly mussel is cultivated and studied.

The Fairport station is under the direction of Dr. R. E. Coker, who has supervision over the resident staff of a dozen or more scientists and a number of field workers, who assist in propagation along many inland streams. The propagation is not confined to the Fairport region, for parties operate on all of the rivers which in the past have been the scene of shelling operations. These parties seine the rivers and sloughs for fish, infect them with the baby clams by the thousand and turn them loose again. One fish can carry from 10,000 to 50,000 glochidia, hence it is to be seen that if the scientific work is successful the future will see no dearth of mussel shoals.

Quick Rise of Industry.

John Boepple was a born turner in the Vaterland, and while idly walking along the banks of the Mississippi picked up a shell. In the old country he had made buttons from horn, and at once upon beholding the pearly substance realized the possibilities. He was at this time employed as a farm hand, and upon returning to the place rigged up a foot lathe and tried it on the clam shell. The button blanks turned out were excellent, and the product found a ready market. Muscatine in those days was a lively lumber town, and the old German elicited little attention when he told of his discovery.

Laughs were his return for a time, but eventually he interested a few who were willing to take a chance. The foot lathe was found to be too slow, and Boepple set about seeking to invent a modern machine. Others joined in, and soon improved cutting machines were perfected.

About this time Muscatine went button crazy. Button machines which were of simple construction and low in cost were located in scores of barns and other small structures. From the most unexpected places came the pop of the gasoline engine which drove the cutting machines which gave employment to 30 men in a ramshackle barn. The demand for shells resulted in an army of men engaging in shell fishing. The Mississippi River for miles north and south of Muscatine was dotted with the sheller's craft.

Clam Beds Mines of Wealth.

The shellers not only secured a good price for the shells, but many of them found pearls, some valued as high as $3000 and $4000, imbedded in the meat of the mussel. The territory around Muscatine became as a mining camp without staked out claims. The river was free to all. Whole towns along the river awakened to the fact that the clam beds were mines of wealth, and the finding of pearls gave a feverish fascination to the game. Possession of rich shell beds were fought for, in a manner to recall the days of '49. Bloodshed and intrigue were a part of this silent battle, but all won an easy livelihood.

Blood Destruction Stopped and Rebuilt

Worries Overcome, Evidence Brushed Away. The Skin Cleared.

S. S. S. the famous blood purifier, is man's architect. It contemplates the damage done and repairs the damage. It also looks after the possible damage and corrects all tendency to blood eruptions, decay of bones, clogging of joints and any and all of these myriad of destructive effects such as rheumatism, catarrh, swollen glands, sore throat, bronchial affections and the host of infirmities so well known as being caused by impure blood. And now, why should S. S. S. do all this? Simply because it is Nature's antidote, a remedy of searching influence. It contains a powerful, natural ingredient, that sweeps its way to the skin. And in doing this it not only annihilates destructive germs but causes them to be so converted that they are easily and harmlessly voided, expelled or destroyed and then driven out through the natural outlets of the body. Thus let S. S. S. be your safeguard in all blood troubles no matter what they are. It won't fail you. Get a bottle today of any druggist but refuse any and all substitutes.

FLOATS MADE READY

"While We Live Let Us Live," Is the Theme Carried Out.

The 21 floats in the Veiled Prophet pageant this year will interpret the Veiled Prophet's conception of the best offered this generation in food, music and dancing. The theme of the pageant, which will be seen upon St. Louis streets Tuesday night, Oct. 6, is "While we live let us live." In other words, as the title bearer's banner will announce, the subject is "Dum Vivimus, Vivamus."

At the head of the pageant the Veiled Prophet and the high priests will ride into view on a royal barge. Their craft is emerging from a grotto, surrounded by luxuriant vegetation. On guard above the grotto with blazing eyes and forked tongue clings to the rocks a gigantic sea monster. On the prow of the barge is perched a great hornet, to further protect his mysterious majesty from too near approach.

The Veiled Prophet, clad in Oriental robes, will be seated in a throne chair and hold aloft the scepter made familiar by 36 previous annual visits to St. Louis. The high priests will sit a little lower, one on each side of the massive chair. The barge is depicted as making its way among lily ponds and other aquatic plants.

Order of the Floats.

The next seven floats will be devoted to the subject of "Food" and will be in line in this order:

The Thanksgiving Dinner.
The Gourmet.
The Birthday Party.
The Student's Revel.
The Wedding Feast.
The Market Place.
Chop Suey.

The second division of the pageant will be devoted to "Music," and eight floats will pass in review in this order:

Beethoven Symphony.
Bohemian Girl.
Song.
Carmen.
Melody.
Lohengrin.
Mendelssohn Spring Song.
Oratorio (Bach).

Then will come the "Dancing" lfoats, in this order:

Salome.
The Minuet.
Tyrolean Dances.
Virginia Reel.
After Dinner Dance.

Description of the Floats.

A peep into the Veiled Prophet's den, where the floats have been made ready for His Majesty's triumphal march, disclosed what good things are in store for the thousands who will line the streets Veiled Prophet night.

Quite in accordance with the American fitness of things, the float called "The Thanksgiving Dinner" is foremost in the Veiled Prophet's conception of good food. "Uncle Sam," in gigantic proportions, with the eagle perched above the national coat of arms on the back of his chair sits at the head of the table, knife and fork raised to carve the immense turkey done to a turn. Faithful followers of the Veiled Prophet in Colonial costumes await their turns to be served. The table "groans" under the pumpkin pie, cranberry sauce and other dishes. Stands of celery are of the same glorious proportions as the American bird.

NO 16 ORATORIO

The next float is "The Gourmet." With the beatific expression of an epicure, the master of the next feast gazes upon plum pudding. The brandy is aflame on the disk and the fumes envelop the enormous mass. The Gourmet is dining well, as his menu, displayed on the front of the float, shows: Ox tail, white bait, roast beef, York ham, leg of mutton, plum pudding, walnuts and port. Followers of the Prophet, in medieval garb and armed with knives and forks are helping to serve.

On "The Birthday Party" float, the gigantic figure of a typical chef, white cap and spotless apron rises in the background. About the table are grouped the guests in holiday garb of a hundred years ago. Hors d oeuvres, consomme, filet de soie, vol-au-vent, petits pois', poulet, salade and the other courses have been served. Then comes the three-story birthday cake, much befrosted and confection-crowned, carried high with manifest pride by the chef.

"The Students' Revel."

"The Students' Revel" has an enormous boar's head, with open mouth and protruding tusks, as the conspicuous central feature of the float. In front of it is a dish of sausages and bread. Students in the fanciful university garb of other centuries lounge about and greet each other with upraised steins of generous size. The sign of the pretzel and the half-carved ham are decorations. A stein, taller than the student who stands beside it, forms the background of the boar's head.

"The Wedding Feast" is the sixth float. Masked as a gigantic bear the cook is bringing in the roast. At the head of the table are the bride and bridegroom. Down the sides are seated the guests making merry. One of them, a dainty maiden, has climbed to an elevated position and is waving a flag of the Veiled Prophet while her partner, on his feet, is offering a glass of wine. Significant of the occasion are the decorations; the heart is everywhere.

On "The Market Place," the Veiled Prophet, in profusion, assembles things to eat. Baskets and boxes piled high with vegetables and fruits are presided over by old market women. The wares are protected from sun and rain by enormous umbrellas. It is the busiest of the market hours. Gaily dressed ladies are inspecting and dickering for bargains. Men in doublets and cloaks and flowered hats are doing some buying, but more looking. The red tiled roof of the market house rises in the background.

"Chop Suey" is the title of the last float in the "Food" division. The fierce dragon looks defiance from either side of this float, while the keeper of the outdoor eating place, with celestial satisfaction, looks down upon a group of patrons. In front is a pagoda housing a large vase. The guests in Chinese costume are plying the chop sticks with vigor.

Then comes the second division, devoted to "Music." The first float in this line is "Beethoven's Symphony." A portrait of the composer ushers in the Prophet's tribute to world-wide fame. Upon a globe, the singer stands in front of a gorgeous sunburst. She holds high the torch of inspiration. Feminine lovers of classic music are acclaiming their enthusiasm. Under a tree sits the artist silent and entranced.

"Song" is the next float. Here the Prophet has created a beautiful tableau to symbolize Song. Upon a high cliff in the foreground a woman is striking the chords of a harp. She looks down upon the reclining figure of a man who is holding upon an outstretched hand a little bird prompted to sing by the occasional notes. In the center of the tableau is a pavilion in the midst of trees and flowers. In the background the sun, a great golden ball, is rising from the ocean.

The tragic scene of "Carmen" has been chosen from representation. In front is the sign of the Plaza de Toros. The poster announces "Six Bravos and Arrogantes Toros." Carmen has fallen a victim of a jealous lover's rage. From the entrance to the amphitheater, true to Spanish architecture, a bullfighter and a soldier are running to the rescue.

On "Melody," the thirteenth float, the goddess of melody is equipped with wings. Birds are perched upon the boughs of a tree in the foreground. Live birds are grouped among the flowers at the feet of the goddess.

"Lohengrin" shows the King and Queen seated upon the throne under a canopy of royal purple. The bridegroom comes in a shell-shaped boat drawn by a swan. On the steps leading down to the water is the bride, the central figure in the tableau.

For Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" the stage is gayly set. Blooms are everywhere. One of the joyful maidens is swinging. Two of them are chasing the first butterfly of the season. A fourth sits under a tree and plays a flute.

"Salome," the first float in the dance division, and the seventeenth float in the parade, shows the girl posturing before the King. She dances the weird monotonous music which two slaves produce on strange string instruments. An attendant languidly waves a great feather fan. From his raised seat underneath a canopy at the portal of the palace the King attended by his chief counselor, views the performance. On either side of the palace entrance are great mystical figures.

From Oriental posturing and stately measures the change is to something lively and hilarious. "Tyrolean Dancers" are at their best. The background of the "Tyrolean Dancers" float is an Alpine home of primitive construction, the roof held down by heavy stones. On the porch two men furnish the music from guitar and zither. A third mountaineer waves his hat and shouts encouragement while a fourth swings his laughing partner three feet from the floor. Two of the girls look on, keeping time by tapping their feet and rather impatiently waiting their turns on the floor.

Leaving the Orient, the French court and the Alps, the Prophet finds in the United States the fourth of his ideal dances. The front of a colonial mansion, such as may be seen along the James River or on the foothills of the Blue Ridge, is the setting of the float "The Virginia Reel." And the only music which properly goes with this beautiful dance is being furnished by an old fiddler. True to custom, a stately dame sits in one corner of the portico, performing the really unnecessary part of a chaperon.

Befitting the feast of the world's best foods and the entertainment of the most famous music, the pageant closes with an "After Dinner Dance." The scene is the parlor of a private residence. A grand piano furnishes all the music required. Those who do not wish to dance sit in couples at little tables and chat. The Prophet's followers are at home.

ACTRESS SUES FOR $7500

A suit for $7500 damages was filed yesterday by Nannie Lewis, an actress, against the Park Theater Co., on account of injuries received at the theater July 27. She was rehearsing for "The Red Mill" and fell from the wheel in the mill scene while being carried from the roof of the mill to the stage floor. Her left ankle was broken and she was kept away from work several weeks.

BUTTE LABOR WAR ENDS IN OPEN TOWN AFTER 36 YEARS

Martial Climax to Industrial Strife Forecasts New Era of Peace and Progress.

TROOPS RESTORE QUIET

Mines Resume Work When Soldier Rule Dispells Influence of Rioting.

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 19.—Butte's long-smouldering industrial war, brought to a martial climax by pernicious unionism and unsettled conditions due to the European war, apparently has spent itself and the situation is well in hand. For 36 years the stronghold of an unswayable labor machine that finally fell to pieces through its own operation, Butte today is an "open town"—probably more so than any other city—and the American flag flies over the city hall for the first time since it was trampled in the dust three years ago by campaigning Socialists.

Since the arrival of State troops and the establishment of martial law, peace and quiet have been restored. The copper mining companies are putting on as many workers as they can possibly handle and normal forces of miners are at work in the zinc and silver mines. An exodus of the undesirable element is plain. The half-gunman, half-reformer has suddenly absented himself. Business has renewed its trend and citizens have not felt so satisfied in years.

This sudden transformation of a city so recently in the throes of lawlessness and rioting forms the concluding chapter of an interesting history, and the opening chapter, it is hoped here, of a new era of progress and prosperity for Butte.

The clash of arms in Europe caused an immediate cessation of exports of copper. This was a serious blow to Butte, which had been providing 60 per cent of the production of the United States. Heavy curtailment was at once necessary. Further production would have been unwise. With this curtailment, persons in Butte who had never seen a vessel larger than a rowboat suddenly felt the crying need of a merchant marine.

War of Labor Against Labor.

The big smelter at Great Falls was closed, throwing 750 men out of work. Several mines were forced to close in Butte, adding to the list of unemployed. In a short time fully 50 per cent of the 10,000 miners usually active on or near Billion Dollar Hill were idle and discontent fermented.

Far-reaching as were the effects of the European outbreak, it was nothing compared to the tension caused by a war of labor against labor. The split in the Western Federation of Miners had come June 13, Miners' day, when the younger miners, dissatisfied with the handling of the union affairs and the relief money which was supposed to have gone to help the strikers in Michigan, broke from the parade, and riot and disorder ruled generally. An official of the federation was pulled from his horse, maltreated and threatened. An interfering policeman was thrown through a plate-glass window.

The serious disorder came when the insurgent miners marched to the Miners' Union Hall and demolished the interior; all the office files, furniture, fixtures, piano, radiators, doors and window sashes, came alike into the street, papers floated everywhere, records of the union for 39 years were destroyed in no time.

The Acting Mayor of Butte attempted to quiet the crowd from a narrow window ledge on the second floor, but was as gently as possible insinuated into the rubbish on the street below. The great safe of the union alone stood up against the attack of the mob.

Moyer Escapes Dynamiting.

That afternoon, with the curious, if not moral, support of the police force and Sheriff, the miners, under the leadership of one Muckie McDonald, a young leader who had sprung up in a day, took the safe to a vacant lot and blew it open—to obtain the records of the federation officials, it was said. About $1300 was found in the safe, and several men offered to carry it safely to town in an automobile. It was nearly a week before the Samaritans were located again. All this with never a word from the city and county authorities, except mild protests, which were laughed away.

June 24, Moyer, arch-disturber in labor troubles, came to town, and in the partially repaired Miners' Union Hall tried to pull the federation men together for a determined fight against the Butte Mine Workers' Union which had been organized under the ingenious Muckie McDonald and which proposed to be independent of all workings of the Western Federation of Miners.

A large crowd of insurgents gathered about the hall; the situation was tense. A federation miner attempted to attend the meeting upstairs. There was a mixup, and he was shot. The fuse was lighted and in an instant shots were being exchanged between the men in the hall and those in the street. Everyone seemed to have a gun. An innocent man was the only one killed, and he fell in the doorway of an undertaking establishment, across from the hall.

It took very little time to bring dynamite, and from shortly after 9 in the evening till 1 in the morning, shot after shot was placed in the building. Glass was broken in all the neighborhood and rocks fell in the streets, but the whole population of Butte seemed to be on the streets, silently watching the destruction, and no hand of authority raised against it all.

Moyer and his men escaped, but the hall was three-fourths demolished.

Leader Defies Authorities.

Then came the curtailment in August at the outbreak of the European war. The new union members wanted all the work for themselves. As a final resort to get complete control, the new union men marched up the hill, seized 37 members of the Federation at the shaft mouth, and marched down the hill again. In a vacant lot, near the center of the city, a trial was held, Muckie McDonald as Chief Justice.

Thirty-four, after two hours of deliberation, consented to join the new union. The other three were railroaded. Next day like scenes were enacted and more mines were closd. The new union was practically running the town. So Muckie McDonald modestly admitted in a street speech. Not a night passed without three to six holdups in saloons and on the streets.

Warrants were issued for the arrest of Muckie McDonald and others, but nothing transpired, though the warrants were in the hands of the Sheriff. Here the business men of Butte harked back to the vigilante days and formed a protective committee. Guards protected the stores at night, good citizens were expecting the worst, and a petition for militia was sent to the Governor. Immediate protests against occupancy by the militia were made by Mayor Duncan and the Mine Workers' Union, but the Governor replied: "I have neither the time nor the inclination to bandy words with Mayor Duncan; the time for that is past." The troops were entrained at Helena on the afternoon of Sept. 1.

That night Muckie McDonald mounted a soap box on the street and defied the authorities. "I heard they had a warrant out for my arrest, but they didn't serve it, did they? They are afraid to serve it. I told the Sheriff that they could serve all the papers they wanted, but the first man that laid a hand on me, I would kill him, and I would have."

Militia Brings Quick Relief.

Sept. 2 saw the whole town in a much relieved state, business made encouraging strides and there was not the uncertainty in the air any longer. The Sheriff had been relieved of his duties, and Frank Conley, Warden of the State Prison, was made Provost Marshal, and no better choice could be made, for he fears nothing that carries guns, claws or horns. He served the warrants and had order shortly.

His hardest task was to take Muckie McDonald, who had left the city at 6 a. m., bound south, via automobile, and accompanied by a few choice protectors. Various reports, all false, have come in concerning the whereabouts of McDonald, but he was caught this week.

The complete subjugation of the disturbing elements by martial law was interesting. The bottom fell out of all insurrection. Unionism had so infected everyone that it had become pernicious rather than beneficial. The miner gave two days' wages to pay a carpenter for one day's work, and a carpenter paid one and one-half day's wages to hold a plumber on the job for eight hours—and the miner works much harder than the carpenter and the plumber combined. The result was a tangled mass of unionized labor, rules and regulations, feeding off each other and profiting little, but so intricate that no point could be touched without bringing cries of anguish and righteous indignation from all the other bodies.

V. P. RIVER PARADE OCT. 11

Boats in Three Divisions in Closing Event of Week.

The river parade on the Mississippi Sunday, Oct. 11, the grand finale of Veiled Prophet week, will be in three divisions, commanded by C. C. Butler, commodore of the St. Louis Yacht Club and chairman of the River Parade Committee; Dr. Edgar M. Whitsett, commodore of the Carondelet Motor Boat Club and Otto Larson, commodore of the South Side Motor Boat Club.

Butler also announced the appointment of Nelson Thomas, secretary of the St. Louis Yacht Club, as chairman of the Designation Committee, which will work out the system by which the boats in each division of the parade shall be kept in numerical order. From 100 to 200 numbers are to be assigned to each division, Thomas stated Saturday. Each division will be allowed more numbers than it probably will need.

The officers of the United States torpedo boat Sommers will be invited to attend an informal dance Saturday night, Oct. 10, at the Century Boat Club.

SALMON PACK IN ALASKA DISTRICT BREAKS RECORDS

Many Canneries Run Short of Cans and Are Unable to Use All Fish Caught.

NEW FACTS ON BREEDING

ASTORIA, Ore., Sept. 19.—The salmon pack in the Bristol Bay district of Alaska this season broke all records, according to news brought here by the tender Akuton, which has arrived to go into winter quarters. There was a steady run of fish during the season, which lasted later than ever before, and every available can was filled.

At the Nushagak River canneries alone, there was a shortage of cans equal to 20,000 cases of fish. There was a shortage at other canneries, and when all available cans were filled the fishing was stopped. The Nushagak River canneries totalled 546,200 cases.

Scientific investigation is clearing up some of the mysteries of the salmon, refuting the idea that all die in spawning, and other fallacies.

Breeding of salmon in fresh water only is not an established scientific fact. Long continued observation indicates that the fish ordinarily seek the fresh water for spawning purposes, but it is not positively known that they do not in some instances breed in the ocean, nor is it positively known in what part of the ocean the salmon live between the time they leave their fresh water birthplace and their return to the same stream. They are found at St. Lawrence Island, Alaska, the year around, establishing it as their home center.

Pass Into Ocean.

It has long been stated as a fact that no salmon, having left salt water on their spawning tour, ever return to the sea, the belief being that they invariably die immediately after depositing their eggs. Recent observations indicate that this is not the case. On the Elk River, in Curry County, in which the spawning beds are only about three miles from the ocean, dead salmon are never found, on the other hand, the fish are very numerous during spawning time, but immediately afterward they disappear from the river and have been seen passing out into the ocean apparently none the worse for their sojourn in fresh water.

Salmon make their way up the streams very slowly; those leaving the ocean in May or June not spawning, in many instances, until late in September. At that time, if they have traveled far toward the headwaters of some tributary, jumping falls and forcing their way up swift rapids en route, the fish are physically much exhausted, and in such cases some die as soon as they have deposited their eggs. This gave rise to the assumption that all salmon leaving the ocean never return. The deaths are due to attacks of parasites and not exhaustion.

Steelhead Salmon Differ.

The so-called steelhead salmon is not really a salmon, but a trout, and does not live up to all the laws supposed to govern salmon. While many steelhead trout go to the ocean and feed there for a time, many others remain in fresh water, probably all their lives; certainly until full grown. Unlike the salmon, this variety appears to desire food at all times, and can be caught with bait while ascending the spawning streams as readily as at any other time.

Beecham's Pills Not Advanced in Price Because of the War.

The Morse International Agency, New York, has received word from Sir Joseph Beecham in England, proprietor of the Beecham's pills, that despite the European war, his concern has not increased the price of the product to dealers. The Beecham pills are known all over the world. Sir Joseph recently visited St. Louis and at that time it was said that the concern of which he is the head is the largest daily newspaper advertiser in the universe.

POLICE SEEK INTERESTED FRIENDS OF "BOSTON LIL"

Investigation Will Be Made of Witnesses' Charges of Attempted Bribery.

Police are trying to find persons who are interesting themselves in behalf of Mrs. Lillian (Boston Lil) Kerwin, in jail charged with purse-snatching, following statements of several witnesses yesterday that attempts had been made to bribe and intimidate them.

Mrs. Kerwin, who was arrested in the American Five and Ten Cent Store, Aug. 31, after it was alleged she had stolen a purse and $37.40 from Mrs. William P. Redmond of 3611 Finney avenue, was bound over to the grand jury Friday by Judge Clark. She was remanded to jail on failure to furnish bond.

Mrs. Redmond told the police that a man posing as a brother of the Rev. Father Timothy Dempsey had called on her and asked her to drop the prosecution, urging that Mrs. Kerwin did wrong only when "in her cups." Mrs. Arline Thurston of 1526 Lulu avenue, a witness, said the young man had called on her and urged her not to appear. Robert Smalley, who assisted in the arrest of the woman, told the police he had been offered a bribe to "duck," and when he refused to take it, was told "to prepare for his funeral."

AGED COUPLE AVOID SEPARATION BY DEATH

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Carl Krause, an aged couple living alone, who had been married nearly 50 years, were found dead in bed by neighbors the morning before Mrs. Krause was to have had an operation performed on her eyes. A gas jet had been left open.

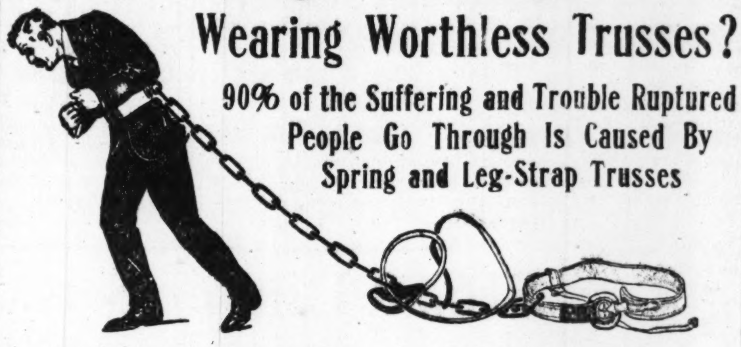
The operation on Mrs. Krause's eyes had been long delayed because the old couple, who were very devoted to each other, were afraid that on account of her weak heart the anesthetic would kill her. Their great fear throughout life had been that one would die before the other. This fear brought them to America from Germany more than 40 years ago. There were wars in Germany and when the Emperor called Krause had to go.

At last he came home wounded, a bullet near his heart, and his young wife, who said she had buried him a thousand times in her misery while he was away, suggested that they come to America, where there were no kings and no wars. He made a competence in the tailoring business and retired. The evening before the operation was to be performed they confided their fears to neighbors and said "there must be some other way out."

Sermon Will Deal With War.

"Christianity and War" will be the topic of the Rev. William C. Bitting, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, King's highway and Washington avenue, this morning. In the evening he will discuss, "Is the World Growing Worse?" Dr. Bitting returned Thursday from Europe. He was in Munich when the war started, having gone abroad to attend the Peace Conference which was indefinitely postponed because of hostilities.

Why Drag Through Life Wearing Worthless Trusses?



90% of the Suffering and Trouble Ruptured People Go Through Is Caused By Spring and Leg-Strap Trusses

Aren't you sick and tired of wearing trusses you can't make hold, which you can't feel safe in, or which hurt so they scarcely give you a minute's peace?

Don't you know that such contraptions will sooner or later let your rupture get the best of you?

Don't you know they are almost sure to cripple you up, so you won't be able to keep at work, won't be able to make a living?

Aren't you afraid they'll gradually let you get so bad that sooner or later you'll have to face a dangerous operation?

Aren't you willing to make a sixty-day-test—without having to risk a cent—and see for yourself what a relief it is to get rid of such misery-causing makeshifts?

No More Belts, Leg-Straps or Springs

We have found a way to hold any man's rupture without harmful pressure, without any belts or spring around your waist, without having to wear leg-straps.

It is our guaranteed rupture holder.

It is as big an improvement over elastic and spring trusses and so-called "appliances" as the modern locomotive is over the first steam engine ever built.

60 Days' Trial to Prove It.

We have so much faith in it—have seen what is has done for so many others—that we are willing to make one especially for your case and send it to you for sixty days' trial. Willing to give you plenty of time to see for yourself just how good it is.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way then you can send it back and it won't cost you a single penny.

It is the only thing we know of for rupture that you can get on long enough trial to make sure; because the only thing good enough to stand a long and thorough test.

All About It in Free Book.

Don't send any money. Just write for our free book—cloth bound, 20 separate articles, 96 pages—and find out everything you want to know. It is full of facts never before put in print.

It shows just why operation is nearly always a gamble with death and why those who manage to live through it often have to keep on wearing a truss.

It exposes the fakes and humbugs—puts you on guard against being fooled and against throwing money away.

And it tells all about our guaranteed rupture holder—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss. Shows how simple it is. Why it needs no belt or leg-straps. How it instantly and automatically protects you against every strain, so your rupture can't be forced out. How it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture. How it has brought complete cure in thousands of cases that seemed almost hopeless. How it is waterproof and will hold in the bath. How you can get it on 60 days' trial and how little it costs if you keep it.

Explains the care and attention we give you and why, because of our long experience and thorough knowledge of rupture, we are successful in cases that would utterly baffle your local truss fitters.

Write for the book today. That will take only a minute. But it may free you from trouble and worry for the rest of your life.

Newest "Want" Tips

In many instances Want Ads accomplish the desired results within a few hours after they are sent or telephoned to the Post-Dispatch. When advertisers have their ad reprinted next day in other papers, Post-Dispatch readers are usually there filling the want or on the way, while the other mediums are getting the order. St. Louisans know this and look to the "People's Popular Want" medium for the first and best want ad tips.

SITUATION UNCHANGED ON THE AISNE

French Capture Flag at Noyon; Repulse Violent Attacks on Rheims

Strategic Hill Taken by Allies and Retaken by Germans Three Times in Three Days

A NIGHT IN THE TRENCHES AT MONS—Sketched by FREDERIC VILLIERS

In the centre and to the right are heaps of German dead, men and horses fallen in the day's attacks. The men lying prostrate at the left are British dead. Beyond them on the left are stretcher parties bearing away the wounded. Drawn by A. Forestier from a sketch by Frederic Villieres, the famous War Artist of the Illustrated London News.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

PARIS, Sept. 19, 11:10 p. m.—An official communication issued tonight says that in a serious encounter near Craonne the allies have captured numbers of prisoners and a standard.

The Germans are reported to have gained no ground, notwithstanding their violent counter attacks.

The situation on the whole is described as unchanged.

The text of the statement is:

"On our left wing we have captured a flag south of Noyon.

"Following a rather serious engagement on the plateau of Craonne, we have made a number of prisoners belonging to the Twelfth and Fifteenth Corps and the Guard Corps. The Germans, notwithstanding attacks which were of extreme violence, were not able to gain any ground around Rheims, which they have been bombarding all day.

"The situation on the whole is unchanged.

"On the center we have made progress on the western side of the Argenne. There is nothing new on the right wing.

"The general situation remains favorable."

The center of the German line to the north is making a stand along the road between Laon and Rheims. The French and English forces have carried by assault three times a strategically placed hill, and have been driven back again three times after taking it.

For three days, including today, they have charged up this hill with infantry and light artillery under the protection of heavy artillery fire from another hill a mile and a half to the south, and each time they have gained the top, only to be driven back again by a devastating fire from the German artillery.

German cavalry charged the British and French troops repeatedly as they retreated, but each day they have stopped the German aggressive movement at the base of the hill.

The official statement given out in Paris this afternoon said:

"First—On our left wing, on the right bank of the River Oise, in the direction of Noyon, we have advanced. We hold all the heights of the right bank of the Aisne, opposite an enemy who seems to be reinforcing himself by the bringing of troops from Lorraine.

"Second—On the center, the Germans have not moved from the deep trenches constructed by them. On our right wing the army of the German Crown Prince continues its movements of retreat. Our advance in Lorraine is regular.

"Summing up, the two opposing armies, strongly entrenched, are delivering partial attacks along the entire front, without being possible to record any decisive result for one side or the other."

Germans Report Losses At Noyon

This official statement of the German headquarters was issued today:

"It is reported that a decisive attack is being made by the Thirteenth and Fourth Army Corps and parts of other German divisions south of Noyon, with loss.

"Attacks along the entire battle front are being easily repulsed.

"Many guns and prisoners have been captured, though the number is not yet available.

"The invasion of the Alpine riflemen over the Vosges into the Breisach Valley has been repulsed.

"The German Eastern army continues its operations in Suwalki Province (Poland) and is advancing against the Russian forces.

"Dispatches from Agram report that the victory over the Servians was far greater than at first believed.

"The Servians were completely routed and were driven in flight across the Save River. Many were drowned."

Main French Attack Is Directed Against Crown Prince

LONDON, Sep. 19 (9:30 p. m.)—Although no decisive result has been achieved by either of the great armies facing each other in Northern France, it would appear from the French official reports issued today that the allied forces are beginning to make continued pressure felt.

The French army, operating on the right bank of the River Oise in the region of Noyon, according to this report, has made some progress, while the Anglo-French force which a week ago crossed the River Aisne

Three-Masted Steam Schooner Francis H. Liggett Turns Turtle 60 Miles Below Mouth of Columbia River—Two Lifeboats Capsized and Other Passengers Remain on Deck, Going Down With Vessel.

By Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 19.—Between 70 and 80 men, women and children, coastwise passengers and crew on the three-masted steam schooner Francis H. Leggett, were drowned late yesterday when the Leggett was pounded to pieces in a gale 60 miles below the mouth of the Columbia River.

Two men who were picked up by passing steamers and carried to Astoria and Portland have told how the sea tore the vessel to pieces, and how the passengers were drowned, a boatload at a time, as the lifeboats put off, or met their fate a little later when the vessel turned over.

Alexander Farrell, the only survivor to reach land thus far, also recounted how, in the height of the storm, Capt. J. Jensen of San Francisco, a passenger, who lost his own ship six months ago, and for four months succeeding was marooned on an uninhabited island, came to the aid of Capt. Moro of the Leggett, took command of the passengers and controlled them until the ship sank, taking him with her.

How the quiet sailor-passenger came to assume charge Farrell could not say, nor did he make clear exactly the part played by the wireless during the storm. It remained indisputable and a matter of wonder among shipping men that the schooner, on a route alive with ships, raised but one boat, the Japanese cruiser Idzumo, with her wireless, and sank many hours before any craft reached her position.

The steamer Beaver, which caught the Idzumo's report of the Leggett's distress and brought the passenger Farrell here, said that the Idzumo gave no position for the distressed vessel. She asked for more details, but got no response from the warship.

Plunging on her course for the Columbia River, the Beaver ran upon the oil tanker Buck standing by a swirl of wreckage and timber which indicated where the Leggett had sunk. The Buck transferred Farrell to the Beaver for treatment. She remained for some time

PRESIDENT AWAITS OPPORTUNE TIME FOR PEACE EFFORT

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Efforts of the United States to bring about peace in Europe practically are at a standstill, according to White House and State Department officials.

Acting Secretary Robert Lansing said today that the message received from Ambassador Gerard giving his conversation with the Imperial Chancellor as to peace proposals had not been forwarded to any American embassies nor had the subject been discussed with the foreign Ambassadors here. While the message from Gerard recording the Chancellor's remarks suggested that the United States ought to ask peace terms of the allies, because, it was alleged, they had begun the war, the American Government does not construe that suggestion as an obligation or a duty.

President Biding His Time.

President Wilson, it is known, is endeavoring scrupulously to avoid thrusting the good offices of the United States upon any of the belligerents at an inopportune time, feeling that the spirit of resentment which possibly would result might produce unpleasant aftereffects for American policies and unnecessarily entangle the United States in the intricacies of European diplomacy.

The President is biding his time, hoping that some definite step will be taken by one of the belligerents which will enable the United States to help make peace.

Diplomats Are Pleased.

There was a feeling of satisfaction here today over the attitude of this Government among diplomatists representing the allied Powers.

Dispatches from Great Britain indicate some resentment over the talk of peace emanating from the United States.

Ambassador Herrick at Paris has arranged to transfer the American embassy to William G. Sharp, the newly appointed Ambassador, on Oct. 1.

British Regiment Kneels in Prayer, Then Takes German Position in Desperate Charge

By a Correspondent of the Associated Press.

ON THE BATTLE FRONT, Saturday, by the way of Paris, Sept. 19, 3:46 p. m.

OVERPOWERING fatigue and privations, resulting from five days of unrelenting struggle, brought about last night a temporary lull in the combat of the powerful armies that are face to face along the Rivers Oise, Aisne and Woevre.

The roar of cannon, machine guns and rifle died down early last evening and the presence of two armies, composed probably altogether of 1,000,000 or more men, within touch on an uneven line and ready to spring to a fatal grip, scarcely could be conceived, so intense was the stillness, broken only by an occasional vagrant shot. The soldiers of the allies and the Germans alike were snatching a little rest, huddled in the strong entrenchments. In some places the trenches were half filled with water, as equinoctial storms continue.

The French and British, like the Germans, have now entrenched and settled down for the stern fight, which threatens to be even longer and more sanguinary than the battle of the Marne.

Progress is being made at some points by the allies, but very slowly, and the developments of the past 24 hours are not important except that it is officially confirmed the Germans have received reinforcements from Lorraine.

There were a few isolated encounters today, but both sides appear to have abandoned the rash movements across the open which marked the early stages of the war. Obviously the deadly machine guns have taught a lesson.

ONE of the incidents of yesterday, when the fierce fighting was awful in its sacrifices, was widely recounted today. A British infantry regiment, upon receiving an order to advance and take a German position, knelt for a moment in prayer. Then the men, knowing that their charge was to be terrible in cost, sprang to their feet and, with fixed bayonets, clambered out of the shelter of the trench.

In short and rapid rushes they advanced, in wide open order, alternately lying down and then making another dash of 15 yards. From the German position came the thick hail of the machine guns. The attacking soldiers hurrahed and sang as they pressed forward. Many fell with cries of determination on their lips. Finally, those who remained of the regiment, reached and took the German position, after a desperate hand-to-hand encounter.

This was only one among many similar acts of courage and discipline on the part of the French, British and Germans alike at various points along the line.

German Prisoner Was Ready to Order a Dinner in Paris

BORDEAUX, Sept. 19.—Here is what a German officer was going to order for dinner upon the occupation of Paris—as set down by him in the fly-leaf of his pocket conversation guide:

"Give me three chickens.

"I desire two bottles of champagne and three bottles of very old Burgundy.

"Give me some of Martel's best cognac."

Then, after his repast, he was prepared to ask in dictionary French:

"Which is the nearest way to the opera? How can I reach Moulin Rouge?"

The owner of the pocket dictionary is recovering from wounds in a French hospital.

Over-Careful Censor Cut the Prime Minister's Speech

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The greatest feat of the war news censor was the editing of the Prime Minister's speech at Guild Hall. This speech was obviously intended as a manifesto to the whole world by the head of the British Government. But the censor took it in hand and cut out certain passages.

This, perhaps, was not more amazing than the action of the same functionary in holding up the official account of the Heligoland naval battle, which was carefully written by the First Lord of the Admiralty himself.

Sicily Demands That Italy Join the Allies

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Daily News correspondent in Malta says the news from Sicily shows a great ferment exists among the population in favor of Italy joining the allies.

Demonstrations daily are taking place. The authorities are not intervening while the press is arguing for the Government to abandon its present policy of neutrality as soon as possible.

New Russian Flag to Symbolize Union of Czar and His People

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Emperor Nicholas, according to a Petrograd dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Co., has authorized the adoption of a new flag symbolizing the union of His Majesty and the Russian people.

It combines the imperial arms and the national characters.

DECISIVE RESULT OF GREAT BATTLE IS NOT EXPECTED FOR SEVERAL DAYS

in the face of heavy fire from the German guns, now holds the heights to the north of that point. In the center the Germans have not moved from the trenches which they dug when they were compelled to fall back, while the Crown Prince's army, which holds the German left again has retired.

Gen. von Kluck Is Reinforced.

From this it is gathered that the main French attack is directed against the German left with the object of driving it back towards Stenay and Sedan, thus cutting its line communication to Metz. This would account for the strong reinforcements estimated at 50,000 men that have been sent to support Gen. von Kluck, who is making such a stubborn stand on the German right. As long as he can keep the allies busy there it would be impossible for them to detach forces to assist in the main attack on the Crown Prince.

It is apparent from the French accounts that the German right is in no small danger, particularly if it is true that a French turning movement is in progress from Amiens in the direction of St. Quentin. Of this there is some evidence because of the presence in that district of British airmen. The troops, however, are handicapped greatly by the heavy rains, which have caused swollen rivers and miry roads. They must fight for some days yet before a decisive result is reached.

The outcome depends largely upon which side can bring up most quickly the strongest reinforcements.

The two armies are about evenly placed. The Germans have behind them the railways stretching into Belgium and Luxemburg, and Germany itself, while the allies have all force behind them in addition to the sea which the British navy has kept open for them.

French Ready to Repair Railways.

While the French railways have suffered greatly in the German advance on Paris and the retreat from that district, the French were long ago prepared for such a contingency. Army engineers and builders who have followed the fighting men have relaid the tracks and re-constructed the bridges. The Government had in reserve material, already prepared, to duplicate every bridge likely to be destroyed by the enemy. This was taken to the appointed place in sections.

The Germans, it is stated, have received 50,000 new men for the right wing but, with the necessity of sending troops to the east, it is unlikely they are any stronger on the center and left than they were at the beginning of the battle.

The allies, with fewer men to draw from, are keeping their armies up to full strength and are probably increasing them. They soon will have many trained men from the British garrisons in Egypt, the Mediterranean stations and later from India. The battle, however, may be over before these troops reach the front, so the allies must make the fight with what they have.

In Lorraine and Alsace the situation seems unchanged. None of the reports refer to fighting there.

Blazing Line of German Guns Half-Circles Rheims

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Tht famous Cathedral of Notre Dame at Rheims has been hit eight times by German shells during the three days' bombardment of the town, according to the Evening News correspondent, who viewed the fighting from the cathedral tower on Friday.

"Directly the shells began to hit the cathedral in the morning," says the correspondent, "German wounded were brought in from the hospital, near by, and laid on straw in the nave, while Abbe Andrieux and a Red Cross nurse pluckily went up to the tower and hung out two Red Cross flags.

"I believe a shell which hit the building while I was there was a stray shot, for the German gunners could hardly miss such a huge mass, towering as it does above the town, if they really wished to reach it. But the houses close by were not so spared. Shell after shell came whistling towards us and smashed into the houses, one of them just across the cathedral square.

Hills Fringed With Big Gun Fire.

"Under the cold, drizzling rain clouds one whole semi-circle of the horizon, edged by the heights on which the German batteries were mounted three miles away, was nothing but an inferno of bursting shells. Those from the Germans landed anywhere within the space of a square mile. Sometimes it was just outside the town they fell, trying to find the French troops lying there in the trenches waiting to go forward to attack the hills when their artillery had prepared the way; sometimes it was on the wool-combing mills of an English company, whose four chimney stacks made them a conspicuous mark; sometimes it was right in the heart of the town itself.

"Once, one of them screaming abonimably, crashed through the transept roof of the other end of the cathedral. I never shall forget the note of horrified surprise and indignation that burst from the old sacristan as a shell smashed a hole in a tall house close before our eyes.

"'That's my house,' he shouted, as if for the German gunners three miles away to hear his protest. Then his voice dropped to a key of bitter grief. 'Ah! the misery of it,' was all he said, and his face remained unmoved, for none of the little group of priests and cathedral officials showed fear or emotion.

"'You must remember we have had three days of this,' said one of them.

"The Church of St. Remi, the most ancient ecclesiastical building in Rheims, received two shells and all the west rose-windows were blown out."

Civilians Are Waiting Underground.

According to this correspondent, few civilians were killed, because, virtually every one was under ground for three days. The great champagne cellars were made barracks of refuge. The correspondent visited the Coadjutor Bishop of Rheims, who met him on the cellar steps.

"You will find us under ground," he said with a smile on his whimsical good-humored face. Two chaplains were with him reading breviaries in the cellar by lamp light.

"Meanwhile," adds the correspondent, "the courtesy and good nature shown to the German wounded left in the city was astonishing. While shells were falling around the temporary hospital in the Nave, I found French officers talking to them, bringing wine and giving them every consideration. There was only one subject the Germans wanted to talk about. 'Was it not possilbe,' they asked, 'to get a bigger Red Cross flag to put on the tower?'"

Continuous Rain on Battlefield

LONDON, Sept. 19.

The official Information Bureau today gave out the following statement regarding the situation in France:

"The situation remains unchanged. A counter attack against the first division, delivered during the night, was driven back.

"The weather is bad and it is raining continuously."

Germans Said to Lack Fuel for Aeroplane Service

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Sunday Observer correspondent cables from Bordeaux: "The enemy have lost the valuable scouting service furnished by the aeroplanes, according to German prisoners who have arrived in Troyes, because of the lack of fuel. On the other hand, the French aviators do useful work, having destroyed a number of provision trains."

It is pointed out here that the crippling of Germany's aeroplane service by lack of gasoline is trifling, compared with the huge blow that would result from a shortage of this fuel in the artillery wing of the service. Here not only are large guns mounted on automobiles, but the ammunition is served from automobiles. Most of the supply and food trains are moved with gasoline.

Ambassadors From Germany and Russia in War of Words

ROME, Sept. 18, via Paris, Sept. 19.—A duel of words is being carried on between the German and Russian Ambassadors to Italy.

H. Deflotow, the German Ambassador, in a statement issued Thursday denying the intention of Germany to make peace, referred to the "war ignobly imposed upon" the German people. Today the Russian Ambassador, A. Kroupenski, made this reply:

"This passage contains as many lies as words. All the powers recognized that Germany was the aggressor and the word 'ignoble' is the only one applicable to the German procedure before and during the war."

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes [illegible] gathered by the Associated Press.

CAPT. GRENFELL, POLO PLAYER, IS KILLED IN BATTLE

Prince Paul Murat Among the Wounded

PARIS, Sept. 20.

IN the latest list of wounded is posted the name of Prince Paul Murat, son of Prince Joachim Murat, who himself is serving with the French army as a Captain of dragoons. Three other sons are Prince Joachin—Charles Alexander and Joachim—also are in the army. Two sons of Marshalk MacMahon, late President of France, also are with the colors, with the rank of Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel.

LONDON, Sept. 19.

CAPT. R. N. GRENFELL, the well-known polo player of the Buckingham Yoemanry, atatched to the Ninth Lancers, was among the officers killed in action in France.

His name appears in the list under date of Sept. 16, issued by the War Office tonight.

The list also contains the names of Capt. Lord Guernsey of the Irish guards and Capt. Lord A. V. Hay, also of the Irish guards. Col. F. R. F. Boileau of the general staff died of wounds.

The names are given of 20 officers killed, 40 wounded, one who died of wounds and one missing.

Dashing Polo Player.

Capt. R. N. Grenfell and his brother, Capt. Francis Grenfell, both of the Ninth Lancers, were members of the Hurlingham team, which was to have played the United State team for the international polo cup in 1910. An acident to Capt. Francis Grenfell, however, caused a postponement of the international match.

Later, as a member of the Ranelagh team, the brothers played that year in the tournament of the Point Judith polo club, and it was R. N. Grenfell's dashing play which won the final of the open championship tournament, in which he scored seven of the eight goals made by the English team.

Brother Rescued by Duke.

Capt. Francis Grenfell distinguished himself in battle early this month when, although suffering from three wounds, he led his men in a dash which saved two British guns, the servers of which had been killed by shrapnel. Later in the engagement he fell and was carried to safety by the Duke of Westminster, who rushed to his aid through a galling fire.

Col. Frank Ridley Farrer Boileau was the son of Col. F. W. Boileau, C. B., and had served in India and in South Africa.

Capt. Henage Greville Finch, Lord Guernsey, was the eldest son of the Earl of Aylesford.

German Prisoners Tell of Fearful Losses Among Officers.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—Wounded German officers who were taken prisoners tell of fearful losses. Some of the companies of the Imperial Guard lost all their officers and are now commanded by volunteers.

Wounded German officers who were taken prisoners, tell of fearful losses. Some of the companies of the Imperial Guard lost all their officers and are now commanded by volunteers.

One German prisoner said that the Firt Battalion (full strength 1000 men, 20 officers) of the First Regiment of German Footguards did not possess a single officer. Among the Germans killed, according to the prisoners, was Gen. von Schack. A German officer declared that all horses of the German Tenth Army Corps were killed, and added:

"Even when bivouacking our troops are not allowed to rest. Last night a French aviator dropped four bombs among us, killing a large number of men and horses."

An officer of the Prussian Guards said:

"My regiment started out with 60 officers. Only five remain, while more than 2000 men of our regiment (3000 men) have been killed or wounded."

SUBMARINE AE-1 OF AUSTRALIAN FLEET IS LOST

Warship Supposed to Have Met With Accident, but British Report No Details.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The British Admiralty announces the loss of the submarine A E-1, belonging to the Austrian fleet. No details were given in the cable from the Australian Government reporting the loss.

The British submarine A E-1 had a displacement of 810 tons, was 176 feet long and capable of making 16.10 knots an hour. She was equipped with four torpedo tubes and two 12-pound guns. According to the latest record, she was commanded by Lieutenant-Commander Thomas F. Besant, with Lieut. Charles L. Mooro second in command.

Submarine AE-1 Supposed to Have Met With Accident.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 19, via. London.—The British submarine A E-1, which had 35 officers and men aboard, is supposed to have met with an accident. She last was seen on the afternoon of Sept. 14 when returning from patrol duty.

Austrian Dreadnaught Damaged in Adriatic Fight, Escapes

LONDON, Sept. 19.—A dispatch to the Evening News from Venice says that one side of the Austrian dreadnaught Viribus Unitis was badly damaged in a fight in the Adriatic, but she escaped her pursuers.

The Viribus Unitis is one of the four largest ships of the same type in the Austrian navy. She has a displacement of 20,000 tons and carries a crew of 1030 men. Her armament consists of 12 12-inch and 12 six-inch guns, 18 12-pounders and four torpedo tubes.

ROME, Sept. 19, via Paris.—Dispatches to Rome newspapers declare the Austrian fleet still is lying in the canal behind the fortifications at Pola. No news of the Anglo-French fleet has been received since its reported bombardment of Cattaro. The navy yard at Monfalcone is engaged in hurrying completion of the armament of a cruiser and a torpedo boat.

No Thought to Put Yoke on Germany, Says London Times

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Times, commenting on a Washington dispatch defining the German attitude toward peace, says it has reason "to attribute special importance to the message." It adds:

"The allies, who are ranged against the German Kaiser, have no thought of placing any yoke, Napoleonic or other, on the people of Germany. But they are firmly and irrevocably resolved not to stay their hands until German militarism, with its causes, its effects, is destroyed, for they are determined that the institution and forces that have brought this unspeakable calamity on the world, at the instance of William of Hohenzollern, with the acquiescence of his subjects, shall be crushed beyond hope of repair.

"Not until the German people has been compelled to perceive this struggle in its true light, as a revolt of the invincible forces of civilization against the systematized ethics of barbarism, forged by German potentates and professors, can there be a prospect of lasting peace for the world. There must, indeed, be a fight to the finish.

"The humiliation of Germany is entirely beside the point, as no hostile force, or combination of forces, can inflict on Germany any greater humiliation than that she has incurred of her own choice."

PARIS DOUBTS STORIES OF GERMAN ATROCITIES

Two English Officers Tell of Being Well Cared for by German Red Cross—Saw on Bayonet Meant to Cut Wood.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1914, by Press Pub. Co.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—Stories of German atrocities are not gaining that credence in Paris they were given in Brussels. There are plenty of these stories being told, but Parisians are sufficiently fair-minded to demand proof, and there appears to be no proof.

The only brutal act towards noncombatants which has been related to me by a person who claimed to have seen it done, was the alleged stabbing of a French woman by a German lancer. An English trooper claimed he saw this in the Forest of Compeigne. He told his story convincingly, but ended by saying, "There were six of them and six of us and, though they begged for mercy, we killed them."

Englishmen Well Treated.

Stories are told by two English officers who were picked up wounded on the battlefield near Villiers, by the German Red Cross, and attended for a week. One had a badly fractured arm, but the surgeon in attendance made a plaster cast for it and saved the arm. The other was an Irish Peer, whose name I am not allowed to use. He was generous in praise of the humanitarianism of the German army toward the wounded enemy.

"My own people could not have treated me better," he said. "When I was picked up I was taken with great care to a farm house, along with German wounded, and the wound in my leg was dressed with the greatest care by the surgeon, who knew what he was about. I was treated exactly like the rest and could not have been better off in a regular hospital. I was there a whole week and then the Germans were driven back and the lot of us, Germans as well as English, had to be abandoned.

"There were also some Germans who had been torn up pretty badly in the retreat and could not be left alone, so the German doctor and two orderlies stayed with us and were captured."

Germans Care for Frenchman.

A French officer, who had also been taken care of by the German Red Cross and later abandoned in the German retreat from Verdun, told of a case of some French fusiliers who were captured. They were driven on ahead by their German captors, a small infantry detachment, he said, into the line of fire, but their captain put a stop to it as soon as he saw what was going on and ordered the French prisoners sent to the rear.

Much was made here over the discovery of a German bayonet with saw teeth on one side until it was understood that teeth had been cut to saw wood and that there were similar bayonets in each command.

70 to 80 Drown as Steamer Is Torn to Pieces in a Gale

searching for bodies afloat or for some other man, who, like Farrell, was fortunate to seize a bit of lumber and strong enough to cling to it for many hours in the icy water.

Captain Swept Overboard.

The other rescued passenger, George H. Pullman of Winnipeg, Canada, is on board the Buck, which is now lying off the Columbia bar, awaiting calmer weather before crossing in.

It is believed that Capt. Moro of the Leggett was washed overboard shortly before the ship sank, for it was Capt. Jensen, Farrell said, who was in charge of a futile attempt to launch two lifeboats, which foundered as soon as they struck the water.

Farrell, who had recovered considerably tonight from his exhaustion from being in the water more than 10 hours, said that the Leggett carried a full list of passengers, between 40 and 50, while the crew numbered about 25. Among the passengers were six women, a girl and a boy, including the captain's wife the mate's wife and the wife of Capt. Anderson of the schooner Carrie Dove.

Tells of Experiences.

In his berth on board the Beaver, Farrell told of the thrilling experiences connected with the sinking of the vessel.

"We left Gray's Harbor at 8:50 o'clock Wednesday morning," he said. "We had no trouble in crossing the bar, but later in the day the sea became rough and the waves rolled high. In the afternoon conditions became worse. The Leggett began to pound heavily and the captain gave orders to jettison the deck load. Soon after the seas swept off the hatches and the hold began to fill with water.

"I think this was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Some time before, Capt. Jensen, a passenger, but who seemed to take charge of the ship, had ordered the passengers into their cabins. Many were still there when the boat went down.

"When it was seen that there was no hope for the vessel, Capt. Jensen ordered the life boats launched. The Captain was the hero of the occasion. He commanded the men to wait until the women were in and threatened to shoot the first man that attempted to disobey his orders. In the first boat launched were 20 persons, two of whom were women. There were only six women on board.

Lifeboats Capsized.

"As soon as the life boat struck the water ti capsized. I think the occupants were drowned immediately.

"A few minutes later an attempt was made to launch the second life boat. It was almost certain death and only a few boarded it. It contained four women and their husbands. The boat met the same fate as the other. No boat could live long in that sea.

"I was standing on the bridge when the ship went down. My feet became tangled in a piece of rope and I was unable at first to free myself. I don't know how long I was under the water, but when I came to the top I was half drowned. I grabbed a railroad tie that was floating nearby and hung on. I looked around and saw the wireless operator also was hanging to the tie. I saw men and women sinking all around me, but could not hear their cries owing to the terrific gale which was raging.

Sees Three Women Go Down.

"Three women clung to a log nearby for some time, but they presently disappeared from view. The suction of the vessel when she went down was terrible and we came nearly being drawn under the second time.

"It was about 1 o'clock in the morning when the Buck picked me up.

"The wireless operator had clung to the tie with me for several hours, but finally benumbed by cold, he dropped off and I was left alone.

"There was no panic among the passengers, as Capt. Jensen handled crew and passengers in a manner that prevented anything that would be a discredit to either. No one was to blame for the wreck. The boat was unable to stand the storm."

PRUSSIA CALLED EUROPE'S ROADHOG BY LLOYD-GEORGE

Chancellor Says England Fights Idea That Treaty Is a "Scrap of Paper."

PRAISES CZAR'S THREAT

Nicholas Is Tearing "Ramshackle Empire" of Austria Apart, He Declares.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, delivered an address in Queen's Hall today on the subject of responsibility for the war.

Referring to the accusation that Great Britain had used the treaty providing for Belgian neutrality as a cloak "to veil her jealousy of a superior civilization," the Chancellor said:

"Our answer was the action we took in 1870. In that case Prince Bismarck respected Prussia's treaty obligations, but it was to the interest of Prussia to break her treaty today and she has done it. To Prussia, a treaty is just a scrap of paper.

Fighting a Doctrine.

"This doctrine of a scrap of paper goes to the root of all public law. We are fighting against barbarism, and there is only one way of putting it right. If there are nations who say they will respect treaties only when it is to their interest to do so, we must make it to their interest to do so in the future."

Referring to the German excuses, Lloyd-George remarked:

"A great nation ought to be ashamed of behaving like a fraudulent bankrupt, trying to escape his obligations." He went on to say that any nation which disregarded its national honor was doomed, and that Great Britain was bound by honorable obligations to defend the independence, liberty and integrity of Belgium.

Referring to the case of Servia, the Chancellor of the Exchequer said Emperor Nicholas had given Austria the only answer that befitted a man, when he said, "I will tear your ramshackle empire limb from limb." "And he is doing it," added the speaker.

"Road Hog of Europe."

"Prussia," said Lloyd-George, "is the road hog of Europe. Men, women and children, and nations, are ordered out of the way. Even Great Britain is ordered out of the way. If the old British spirit is still left in British health, the bully will be taken from his seat. They thought we could not beat them. It will not be easy. It will be a long job. It will be terrible. But in the end we shall march through terror to triumph."

Appealing to Welshmen to join the colors, the Chancellor continued: "This struggle is a great war for the emancipation of Europe from the thralldom of the military caste which has thrown its shadow upon two generations of men, and has now plunged the world into a welter of blood."

Lloyd-George said the German people have great qualities of head, hand and heart, but have been drilled into a false ideal of civilization. They could not comprehend the action of Great Britain in pledging its resources, the lives of its people and its very existence to protect a little nation.

Quoting from Emperor William's speeches, which he declared were "full of swagger and boastfulness," the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that when such sentiments became the policy of a great empire it was about time it should be ruthlessly put away.

Government Relief Work for Americans Nearly Finished

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The American cruiser Tennessee will start for America about Oct. 1, carrying home virtually all the army officers who came over to Europe on Government relief work. The Tennessee left New York Aug. 6, with over $5,000,000 on board, to aid stranded Americans in Europe.

Under orders from Henry S. Breckinridge, American Assistant Secretary of War, affairs here are being closed up as rapidly as possible, preparatory to ending the relief labors of the Washington Government. A resident American Relief Committee will continue, after the withdrawal of Government assistance, to assist needy Americans with committee funds. The local committee has been using its own funds since the opening of the war for the temporary assistance of penniless Americans, while the Government money has been used for the payment of steamship and railway fares and other larger amounts which could be accounted for in large vouchers.

The Government relief work, under the direction of army officers especially detailed, will end also in all the Continental capitals. Diplomatic officers will direct the work after Oct. 1. Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, and the resident committee will co-operate in London, where the embassy staff probably will be increased temporarily to look after the extra work.

American Red Cross Fund for European Relief Now $600,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Approximately $600,000 has been received for European relief work, the American Red Cross announced tonight, but much more is needed.

The organization has received an appeal from Ambassador Gerard, at Berlin, urging financial support of the American hospital just organized there to care for German wounded. The Red Cross could not meet the request because of limited funds.

Country Should Not Let Pass Opportunity to Realize Aims, Says Balkan Statesman.

Rumania Can Command 500,000 Fighting Men

RUMANIA has an army of 95,000 men on a peace footing, and reservists immediately available of 100,000.

Her war strength is estimated at 500,000 men.

The area of the country is about 53,000 square miles, and the population is 7,600,000.

(Copyright, 1914, by Press Pub. Co.)

BORDEAUX, Sept. 19.—Much importance is attached here to the resignation of the Rumanian Cabinet, which, being coincident with the sending of a mission from Rumania to Italy, lends color to the belief Rumania is waiting only for a favorable moment to join the allies.

Italy's attitude continues to be watched closely, with increasing belief in French official circles that the noncommittal policy of the Italian Foreign Minister will sooner or later be obliged to yield to public opinion.

M. Clemenceau's article today is a powerful plea for Italy's entrance without further hesitation on the side of the allies. He quotes the words of an Italian statesman in a personal conversation: "We are Austrian allies because it was our only means to avoid being compelled to make war upon her."

M. Clemenceau adds: "Never did Italy have such an opportunity for settling her just claims. Admitting, for argument, that Pan-Germanism should triumph, what would be her lot? Slavery without honor of having fought to escape it. If, on the contrary, she shows a martial spirit, she earns the right to claim her seat at the grand round table when the settling day arrives."

Rumanian Says Nation Should Not Miss Opportunity.

ROME, Sept. 19.—Rumania should not let pass any opportunity during the present war of "realizing her national aims," according to M. Diamondy, one of the Rumanian delegates now here.

M. Diamondy declared that, with the Triple Entente victorious, England France and Russia would redraw the map of Europe on national lines, whereas, with Germany and Austria triumphant, these two countries would establish a political and commercial hegemony from which Rumanians would suffer.

"We consider ourselves," said M. Diamondy, "as the co-heirs of the dual monarchy, and we must hereafter act."

M. Diamondy said he spoke "in the name of the majority of Rumanians, who, though neutral for the present, cannot let slip any moment for realizing their national aims."

Washington Hears of Possible Action by Balkan Countries.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Possibilities of Rumania entering the European conflict on the side of Russia are reported in brief official advices today from neutral observers in Bucharest. No reasons were given for the probable action of Rumania.

Bulgaria likewise is reported as showing sympathies for Russia. On the receipt of news of Russian victories in Austria a few days ago there were big demonstrations against Austria throughout Bulgaria, which had to be suppressed by the police.

FAIR WEATHER FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW

SEPT 20 14

Summer, which had fallen back in defeat after a terrific advance to the very apex of the thermometer, allied its forces yesterday and began what, it is hoped, will prove its last stand before it is finally routed.

Bulletins from the front indicate the foe has so entrenched itself in its new lines that it probably cannot be dislodged within the next 48 hours. The sun's artillery is maintaining a scorching fire. The maximum temperature yesterday was [illegible] at [illegible] p. m.

Official forecast for St. Louis and vicinity: Generally fair today and tomorrow; not much change in temperature.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE AGAINST AUSTRIAN FORTS CONTINUES WITH SUCCESS

The Gigantic German Siege Guns in Action Against Forts Invisible From Their Position

AUSTRIANS TAKING UP NEW POSITION 150 MILES LONG

Armies Will Resist Russian Advance Along Line From Przemysl to Cracow — Czar's Troops Capture Two Fortified Positions in Galicia--300 Prisoners and 22 Cannon Taken.

PARIS, Sept. 19, 10:55 P. M.—An official announcement by Russian headquarters, sent by the Petrograd correspondent of the Havas Agency, says:

"The Russian troops have captured the fortified positions of Siniava (correct) and Sambor (in Galicia. The Austrians rear guard has been thrown back beyond the Sn river, in the region of Radymno and Medyka. The Austrians destroyed the bridges on the San, in the region of Sandomir and Radomysl. The Russians captured 3000 prisoners and 22 cannon in the region of Memirov, and have taken 3000 cases of ammunition."

Seniava is 18 miles northwest of Jaroslau on the bank of the River San. Sambor is 17 miles northwest by west of Drohobycz. Sandomir, a town in Russian Poland, is 57 miles southeast of Radom on the left bank of the Vistula, and on the Gilician frontier. Radomysl, in Galicia, on the bank of the River San, is 47 miles sotuhwest by south from Lublin. Nemirov is a Russian town in the Province of Podolia, and is 35 miles east southeast of Zhmerinka.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—While today's news from the Eastern campaign has been meager, the new positions of the Russians and the Austro-German allies are indicated more clearly than they have been for several days. For the first time in the war there is a definite statement of the alignment of the Austrian armies.

According to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Vienna, via Rome, the Austrians are taking up a new defensive position, extending 150 miles, from Przemysl to Cracow, and do not intend to give up the remainder of Galicia without a struggle.

The right wing of the Austrian line, according to this dispatch, will be commanded by Gen. Bovcerigz, with his base at the Fortress of Przemysl. Twenty miles north of Przemysl is the important railway center of Jaroslaw, like Przemysl, commanding a cross of the River San. From Jaroslaw, westward for 150 miles the railroad runs almost in a straight line to Cracow, forming the base of a triangle of which the two sides are the River San and the Vistula.

In this triangle, according to Russian reports of the last 10 days, the broken Austrian army, driven westward from Lemberg and southward from Tomaszow and other points in Russian Poland, was awaiting the finishing of Russian strategy.

The Austrian center, commanded by Gen. von Auffenberg, is reported to be based at Tarnow, a railway junction half way between the River San and Cracow.

The Austrian left, commanded by Gen. Dankl, will extend as far west as Cracow, supported by the German reinforcements. German officers, according to recent advices, have taken charge of this reorganization and will direct the Austrian campaign.

"The entire Russian left wing, under command of Gen. Rusuisky and Gen. Brussiloff," says the Exchange Telegraph dispatch, "is expected momentarily to begin an attack. The intial assault is expected to be against Przemsyl."

Generals Auffenberg and Dankl led the Austrian forces that were driven back from their attempted invasion of Russian Poland.

The Russian Russky, after his sweeping victory over the Austrians before their evacuation of Lemberg, capital of Galicia, was sent into Poland to help Brussiloff, and together they precipitated the Austrian retreat from Tomaszow across the River San.

A Central News dispatch from Vienna, via Amsterdam, says inhabitants of the villages around Przemysl have been ordered by the Austrian commanders to move farther west, and that fortifications are being thrown up all around Przemysl, and the garrison of 60,000 men has been provisioned for two years. Lemberg, the capital, was supplied for a whole year, according to Russian accounts, but the Austrians evacuated the city without making any defense and left the provisions behind.

Nothing has been heard today from Gen. Rennenkampf, the Russian commander, who was reported as having defeated the German attempt to outflank him in East Prussia on Sept. 17.

The German general staff issued a Berlin statement that the German army from East Prussia continues its operations in the district around Euwalki, just across the border in Russian Poland, about 30 miles north of Lyck, East Prussia. The German general staff says that its army is approaching the Fortress at Oscurec, 30 miles southeast, on the railroad from Lyck to Bialystok, a fortress guarding the river Bober at the only point where a crossing can be effected.

A Berlin wireless message says that Gen. Partos, a Russian, ordered the shooting of all the male inhabitants and the burning of all villages in East Prussia, and has been tried by a German court martial.

A Reuter's dispatch from Petrograd says that the Austrian cavalry has disappeared completely from the campaign in Galicia, and that the Austrian rear guard, in its retreat, thus left unprotected, is being surrounded by the Russians.

The Russian offensive against Austria is developing slowly. There are great stretches of country to cover and enormous numbers of men to move. Austria, it is computed, has not more than a half million men left to guard her northern frontier against the Russian millions, but, if she can withdraw them to Cracow in some sort of order, she can rely on the help of a well-trained German corps.

It is to prevent this that Russia is bending her energy.

On the East Prussian frontier the Russians claim not only to have arrested the German advance, but to have had some successes in counter attacks.

War Shows Merciful Nature of Wounds by Modern Army Rifles

Correspondence of Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 4.

THE European war, like all the wars of the last few years, is demonstrating the merciful nature of wounds from the modern army rifles. Unless a vital part is hit, the victims recover rapidly.

A striking example of the effect of the present small projectile is given by the experience of a young German soldier, who was in the battle before Liege. His first intimation that he had been hit came when he fell. At the hospital it was found he had been shot through the shoulder, the upper, arm, three times through the thigh, one of the bullets going through both thighs, and once in the lower arm. He is recovering rapidly and will be back in the battle line in a few weeks.

Artillery fire, particularly shrapnel, brings the greatest number of fatalities. Troops on the eastern border have suffered especially from shrapnel fire, which the Russians appear to use with great precision in contrast to their rifle fire, which appears rather uncertain.

All Kaiser's Sons Except One Have Been Decorated

BERLIN, Sept. 19, via Amsterdam and London.—Denial is given the report of the death of Col. von Reuter, who was in command of the German regiment at the time of the Zabern affair. Col. von Reuter's horse was shot under him in recent fighting but it is said he was not injured.

Herr Bassermann, noted national Liberal member of the Reichstag, who is a corps captain, has been awarded the Iron Cross and promoted to the rank of Major for bravery.

Prince August William, who is serving in a minor rank, has been awarded the Iron Cross. All the sons of the German Emperor, excepting Prince Adalbert, who is in the navy, have been so decorated.

According to a high German officer, now lying wounded in a hospital at Cracow, the Austrians and Hungarians fought the Russians with a courage and pugnacity defying destruction.

"One must see them," he said, "to appreciate the gigantic tasks they have performed."

Russian Officers, but No Troops, Traversed England

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Since the official denial that any Russian troops had passed through English territory for France, issued a few days ago by the War Office, efforts have been made to ascertain the cause of the persistent reports, carried to America by tourists, that a Russian army had been moved from Archangel to the Scottish coast and thence across the channel to points in Belgium and Northern France.

According to a high Government official, these reports probably had their source in the fact that a number of Russian officers, detailed for staff and observation duty with the French and English armies in the field, passed through England, accompanied by their orderlies and servants, all in uniform. It is believed that villagers in Scotland caught sight of these Russians, in uniforms strange to the country folk, and from those arose the widespread report of a Russian troop movement in this country.

36 British Aeroplanes Crossed Channel in Combined Flight

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Little has appeared regarding the movements of the British aerial forces in the European war, but now, from a person professing to be closely connected with this branch of the service, the information is given of a remarkable channel flight, kept secret for some time, in which 36 British aeroplanes crossed to the scene of the war in a combined flight.

"This surpassed anything ever done in aviation," said the man, "but it was only part of a big movement." Other aeroplanes are stated to have been sent over for service with the expeditionary force.

GERMANS INVADED BEFORE NOTICE OF WAR, SAY FRENCH

Embassy at Washington Gives Out Letter to Show Frontier Was Crossed.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The French Embassy issued tonight a statement attacking an interview attributed to the German Ambassador, in which he is quoted as having repeated that Germany was attacked and that she conducts a defensive war.

"The fact is," the statement says, "that, to prevent any incident so long as there was the slightest hope of peace, French troops were kept 10 kilometers distant from the frontier and all the early skirmishes took place on French ground.

"Germany's haste was such that she did not even wait for the declaration of war. The following letter addressed by the German Consul at Basle to the French one shows that on the 2d of August—that is, the day before Germany herself declared war—the Germans had crossed the frontier, and an appeal was made to us for news of an officer who had been wounded on French territory. Translated word for word, the letter read.

"'Kaiserlich Deutsche Konsulat I. M.

"'Basle, Aug. 4, 1914.

"'The relations between Germany and France being interrupted for the present, I appeal to your generosity, at the request of the commander of the cavalry regiment No. 5 at Mulhausen, to have news of the condition of Lieut. Mayer, wounded day before yesterday near Delle, on French territory.

"'The German Consul,

Servia Not to Conclude Peace Alone With Austria.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The Nish (Servia) correspondent of the Havas Agency has sent the following dispatch:

"Concerning rumors that Servia and Austria-Hungary will conclude a separate peace treaty, a semi-official note says that Servia will not conclude peace alone and will not separate from the Powers in the Triple Entente."

NEW SIEGE GUN, A GERMAN SURPRISE, SHATTERS FORTS

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 4.—It is too early to base general predictions concerning war in the future on the engagements of the present great European struggle. One prediction, however, does seem fairly justified already. It is that the day of fortresses has passed. The new 42-centimeter (16.8-inch) siege gun of the German forces appears to have demonstrated its ability to demolish the strongest fortifications ever made.

Pictures of the demolition at Liege bear striking testimony to the power of this new arm. A single projectile demolished utterly walls of reinforced cement and steel, ripped open steel towers and piled the mass upon the fort's defenders.

This new siege gun has been the surprise of the war. It has been repeatedly asserted that no nation has any military secrets that are not in possession of all other important nations, but events have proved not only that the existence of this terrible weapon was not known to foreign nations, but that only a limited number of high German army officials themselves had so much as heard of it. A member of the Reichstag, whose name is not given, is quoted as follows in a German paper:

"The fact that the German army possessed such a gun was as much a surprise to the Germans as to foreigners, for its construction and nature were kept secret, as the situation demanded, so that, even in the Empire, only a limited number knew about it. When the trials were finished and all was ready to begin the construction of the new gun, the problem presented itself of making this wonderful work of war without attracting any attention.

"More than 40 officers participated in the preliminary discussion over the preparation of the military budget for the consideration of the Budget Commission of the Reichstag. When the subject of 'arms' was reached, the head of this department requested that this part of the budget be not debated at that time. At the close of the session he told me confidently that a new siege gun was in consideration. The General Staff, he said, had urgently requested that not a word be said about the matter in the Budget Commission. Not even the officers, they declared, knew of what was being done.

"The request of the General Staff was observed. Then work on the new gun began. A number of them are already at the front and others are in the arsenals. Six weeks ago, as a member of the Commission on Arms, I was in a gun factory, and was informed that any number of tubes and projectiles for the guns can be finished in a very brief time, not to mention the great supply on hand. I asked whether these guns wore themselves out quickly, and was assured by an expert that there are not enough forts in the world to wear out a single gun."

Chicagoan Said to Have Invented Big German Gun

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Louis Gathmann, a German resident of Chicago, is said to have invented the new German siege gun and shell used with such disastrous results against Belgian and French fortifications in the present war.

This invention is said to have been rejected by the United States Government except for coast defenses, after a series of tests held at Sandy Hook experiment station, in 1898.

The inventor is said to have taken his device to Germany and later to have sold it to the Krupps.

France, Germany and Austria to Respect Swiss Neutrality

PARIS, Sept. 20.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Berne says that, in reply to Switzerland's declaration of neutrality, France, Germany and Austria have affirmed their intention scrupulously to respect Swiss neutrality.

The dispatch adds that Italy, though not a signer of the act of recognition of 1815, has made a like declaration.

Returning From the Aisne With Souvenirs and Post Cards, Correspondent Calls African Fighters Best Soldiers Afield.

BY RICHARD HARDING DAVIS,

(Copyright, 1914, by the Wheeler Syndicate.)

PARIS, Sept. 15.—When on Sunday I caught up with the French army as it was fighting the Germans at Soissons, I announced that I was returning to Paris and that any letters anyone wanted posted there, I would gladly take back with me. My plan was that, before the French army had finished writing to sweethearts and wives, I would have seen much fighting.

My plan worked well, but it nearly put an end to the battle. Everybody, from Colonels to company cooks, produced pencils and post cards and seating themselves under haystacks began writing to loved ones at home. There was no one left to train the guns.

I appointed my chauffeur assistant postmaster, and he collected enough letters to fill our automobile. The chauffeur read most of the post cards, but informed me found them disappointing, for instead of messages of sentimental nature and tales of war, they ran chiefly to requests for socks and cigarettes.

In return for carrying their mail, the soldiers presented me with many souvenirs of battle. One of them is the most grewsome weapons of war I have known to be issued to a civilized army. It is a German bayonet which is half saw.

Two assistant military attaches of our embassy, Lieutenant-Colonel H. T. Allen and Capt. Frank Parker, both of the Eleventh Cavalry, have just returned from an automobile trip over the battlefield where, from the 8th of September until the night of the 11th, the French and Germans were fiercely engaged. This battle was the one which assured, for the present, the safety of Paris.

Retreat Is Splendid Strategy.

It will be remembered that during the week preceding the English and French steadily withdrew in what then was considered a retreat made necesary by superior numbers. It is now known to have been splendid strategy.

On Sept. 1 the German left and center were separated, but like the letter V were approaching each other, with Paris as their objective. Had the allies attacked at that time they would have had to divide their forces in half and so weakened, to give battle to two armies. By retreating they drew after them the two converging lines of the V, and on the eighth, when the Germans were in wedge-shaped formation, attacked them on the flank and center at Meaux and made the first attack at Sezanne.

I saw the finish of the four days' battle at Meaux, which ended with the Germans crossing the river Aisne and retreating to the hills north and west of Soissons. Allen and Parker saw the end of the battle north of Sezanne, which resulted in the retreat of the Germans to Rheims, from which point they are still falling back. The battle Allen and Parker described was as follows:

Guards to Lead March Into Paris.

On the 8th the Germans advanced from a line stretching from Epernay and Chalons, a distance of 17 miles. In this front, counting from the German right, were the Tenth, the Guards, the Ninth and Twelfth Army Corps The presence of the Guards, the corps de'elite of the German army, suggests that this was intended to be the main attack upon Paris and that the army at Meaux was to walk in the center with its bands playing.

The four combined corps numbered over 200,000. The French met them, they claim, with 190,000. The Germans advanced until their left was at Vitry-le-Francois and their right rested at Sezanne, making a column 15 miles long, headed west toward the French. The French butted the line six miles from Sezanne, in the forest of Fere Champenois. It was here that the greater part of the fight occurred. It was fighting at long distance with artillery, and from trench to trench with the bayonet.

German Decoy Successful.

During the four days in which fortune rested first on one flag and then on another, 30,000 men of both armies were entirely wiped off the map. Two miles from Sezanne, by an ambush, a French regiment was destroyed. The Germans had thrown up conspicuous trenches and with decoys sparsely filled them. From the forest in the rear the mitrailleuse was trained on the French. The French infantry charged the trench and the decoys fled, making towards the flanks, and as the French poured over the trenches the hidden guns swept them.

In another trench our attaches counted the bodies of over 900 German Guards, not one of whom had attempted to retreat. They had stood fast with their shoulders against the parapet and taken the cold steel. Everywhere the loss of life was appalling. In places the dead lay across each other three and four deep.

Senegalese Are Best Fighters.

The fiercest fighting of all seems to have been waged by the Turcos and Sengalese. In trenches taken by them from Guards and the famous Death's Head Hussars, the Germans showed no bullet wounds. In almost every attack the men from the desert had flung themselves upon the enemy, using only the butt or bayonet.

Man for man, no white man, drugged for years with meat and alcohol, is a physical match for one of these Turcos, who eat dates and drink water. They are lean as starved wolves. They move like panthers. They are muscle and nerves and they have the comforting belief that to die killing a Christian sends them straight to the seventh heaven. As Kipling says, "A man who has a sneaking desire to live has a poor chance against one who is indifferent whether he kills you or you kill him."

The French are almost invariably using these black men to lead the charges. Some think this shows they do not value their black brothers. On the contrary, they so use him because they know that, in help-yourself fighting, few white men care to face him.

Germans in French Uniforms Try to Blow Up Railway Bridge

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Dieppe correspondent of the Daily Mail has sent the following dispatch:

"On Friday a party of Germans made a daring attempt to blow up the railway bridge at Eissel, eight miles south of Rouen, and thus sever communication between Dieppe, Havre, Rouen and Paris.

"The members of the party were disguised in French officers' uniforms, taken from prisoners, and were provided with prisoners' identification papers. Their behavior, however, had excited suspicion. An attempt to stop them resulted in an exchange of revolver shots, three gendarmes being shot. The Germans got away, but afterward they were traced to the river bank near the bridge and captured before they were able to effect their purpose."

Terrific Struggle in Second Day's Fight on the Marne Shown by Field

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Telegraphing from Sezanne, in the Department of Marne, 25 miles south of Epernay, the Times correspondent says:

"The territory over which the second day's battle of the Marne was fought is now a picture of devastation, abomination and death almost too awful to describe.

"Even now many sons of the fatherland are sleeping their last sleep in the open fields and in ditches where they fell, or under hedges where they crawled after being caught by a rifle bullet or pieces of shell, or where they sought shelter from the mad rushes of the French Tireurs who have not lost their natural dexterity with the knife and who at close quarters frequently throw away their rifles and fight hand-to-hand.

The German prisoners are now being used on the battlefield in searching for and burying their dead comrades. Over the greater part of the huge battlefield, there has now been buried at least those who died in open trenches in plateaus or on the high roads.

The extensive forest area, however, has hardly been searched for bodies, although hundreds of both French and Germans must have sought refuge and died there. The difficulty of finding bodies is considerable on account of the undergrowth.

150-Yard Burial Trenches.

"Long lines of newly broken brown earth mark the graves of the victims. Some of these burial trenches are 150 yards long. The dead are placed shoulder to shoulder and often in layers. This gives some idea of the slaughter that took place in this battle.

"The peasants, who are rapidly coming back to the scene, are marking the grave trenches with crosses and planting flowers above or placing on them simple bouquets of dahlias, sunflowers and roses.

"Some of the hottest fighting of the prolonged battle took place around the beautiful old chateau of Mondement on a hill, six miles east of Sezanne. This relic of the architectural art of Louis XIV, occupied a position which both sides regarded as strategically important.

To the east it looked down into a great declivity in the shape of an immense Greek lamp with the concealed marshes of Saint Sond at the bottom. Beyond are the downs and heaths of Epernay, Rheims and Champagne, while the heights of Argonne stand out boldly in the distance. To the west is a rich agricultural country.

Hot Fights for Ridge.

"The possession of the ridge of Mondement was vital to either the attackers or the defenders. The conflict here was of furnace intensity for four days. The Germans drove the French out in a terrific assault and then the French guns were brought to bear, followed by hand-to-hand fighting on the gardens and lawns of the chateau and even through the breached walls.

The French again held the building for a few hours, only to retire before another determined German attack. On the fourth day they swept the Germans out again with shell fire, under which the walls of the chateau, although two or three feet thick, crumpled like paper."

The correspondent describes evidences on the battlefields of how magnificently the Germans are equipped in the matter of ammunition and war material. He saw pyramid after pyramid of shrapnel shells abandoned in the rout, likewise innumerable paniers for carrying such ammunition. These paniers are carefully constructed of wicker and hold three shells in exactly fitting tubes so there can be no movements.

The villages of Oyes. Villanueve, Chatillon and Soisy-Aux-Sois were bombarded and destroyed. Some fantastic capers were played by the shells, such as blowing away half a house and leaving the other half intact; going through a window and out by the back wall without damaging the interior or going a few inches through the wall and remaining fast without exploding. Villaneuve, which was retaken three times is in ruins, including its fine old church.

French Lose Heavily in Officers Who Sacrifice Themselves Willingly

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The official communications issued thus far have neglected the question of losses which, in a fight such as the battle of the Marne, covering a front of 130 miles, are almost impossible to estimate even approximately.

Some unofficial reports have placed the allies' losses at 50,000, and those of the Germans at 100,000 in the series of engagements comprised in the great clash of arms. How near these figures are to the truth no one will know until the official figures are compiled. However, the impression derived from individual accounts of wounded soldiers and from prisoners, the only unofficial sources of information at present, would indicate that these estimates are conservative.

Officers Fight to the Death.

The losses certainly are the greatest on record, and perhaps the proportion for the Germans is greater than two to one in dead at least.

If the press bureau communications are silent on this subject, the order of the day for the army gives eloquent hints of sacrifices made to gain advantage and shows how murderous is modern warfare and how regardless of personal safety are the officers and men. The latest order, given out last night, is full of deeds of the greatest heroism and at the same time indicates what the cost was of the recent successes and previous reverses.

Lieut. Naquet of the Twenty-fifth Infantry of reservists is among those mentioned for bravery. Although wounded he continued the energetic direction of his company of which all the officers in his section had been killed or wounded.

Adjt. Date of the Sixty-ninth Infantry, led his section on under the most violent fire until all his men were wounded. Then he grabbed a gun from one of his soldiers and while the section retired continued firing until he was killed by a fragment of shell.

For the great proportion of French officers killed or wounded two explanations are given—the zeal of the officers and the orders given to the German riflemen to pick them out.

Besides those already named, yesterday's order mentions Gen. Mangin, who achieved fame in the Moroccan campaign, Gen. Bataille, who was killed Sept. 8 after showing the uttermost bravery and sangfroid; Brigadier of Dragoons Voitoret, who when mortally wounded by a shell cried as he fell: "Vive la France, I die for her, I am satisfied!" and died trying to sing the Marseillaise, and Lieut. Blanc, of the staff of the Havas Agency, mentioned for brilliant conduct in battle on Aug. 29.

Former Member of German Reichstag Aiding French

BORDEAUX, Sept. 19.—Worshipers filled St. Andrews Cathedral early this morning to listen to a mass for the success of the allied forces. At the conclusion of the service, Abbot Wetterle of Alsace, formerly a member of the German Reichstag, delived a patriotic address. He said France was innocent of the crime now being committed, and that God would make the nation victorious. He was greeted with much applause.

CROWN PRINCE TOO DARING FOR KAISER

LONDON, Sept. 19.

THE Standard's correspondent, telegraphing from Geneva, says:

"The Kaiser has severely reprimanded the Crown Prince for exposing his staff uselessly to artillery fire, in order that they might obtain a better view of the battle. A report received from Basle states that several members of the Crown Prince's staff have been wounded."

German Governor Takes Steps Against Belgian Art Pillage

BERLIN, Sept. 19, by wireless via Sayville, L. I.—According to the Cologne Gazette, Japan sent a special commissioner to a German motor company during the first days of July to order 400 aeroplane motors to be delivered within the shortest limit of time. The order, however, was not carried out.

The German Governor of Belgium, Gen. von der Goltz, has appointed Privy Councillor Dr. D. von Falcke to decide upon ways and means to effect the protection of Belgian treasures of art against burglary and pillage. Dr von Falcke is now making a tour of Louvain, Namur, Huy, Nivelles and Liege, accompanied by a Belgian art expert named Orteil, and will take whatever steps to this end that may be necessary.

It is announced here that three aeroplanes are again over Paris.

The British Naval Commission has left Constantinople.

The Russian General, Partos, who ordered the shooting of all male inhabitants and the burning of all villages in East Prussia, has been tried by a German courtmartial.

MARCONI WIRELESS MUST EXPLAIN ACT OR CLOSE STATION

Secretary Daniels Demands Prompt Reply on Transfer of British Warship Message.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Unless a prompt and satisfactory explanation is forthcoming of the action of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. of America, in receiving and forwarding a message from the British cruiser Suffolk to a British Admiralty agent in New York, regarding supplies for the warship, the company's station at Siasconset, Mass., will be closed "for all communication."

This was the reply made by Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department to protests of the company against the right of the United States to establish censorship over its stations.

The warning was contained in a letter to John W. Griggs of New York, president of the company. It said in part:

"I have to advise you that the President is advised by his Attorney-General that he has full authority, in view of the extraordinary conditions now existing, to close down or operate the plant of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. My department will continue, as heretofore, to retain its censor at your plants."

RUSSIAN BOOK SAYS GERMANY REFUSED TO PREVENT WAR

Asserts Berlin Made No Effort to Have Austria Extend Ultimatum to Servia.

COMPROMISE SUGGESTED

England Reported Willing to Call Conference of Powers in London.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—There has just been received in London a copy of the Russian Orange Book, giving the Russian diplomatic correspondence from the time the Austrian ultimatum to Servia was issued to the outbreak of the war.

The dispatch in the book is from the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Belgrade to the Foreign Minister at St. Petersburg. It tells of the ultimatum and says Servia solicited the aid of Russia as the Servian Government could not accept the Austrian demands. This was on July 23.

The next day M. Sazonoff, the Foreign Minister, instructed the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Vienna to tell Count Berchtold, the Austrian Foreign Minister, that it was indispensable that the 48-hour time limit to Servia be prolonged in order to give the Powers time to smooth out the complications. The dispatch said, in as much as Austria was willing to inform the Powers of the results of the inquiry upon which the ultimatum was based, "she ought, therefore, have given them time to consider them." A refusal to prolong the term of the ultimatum would deprive of all weight the proceeding of the Austro-Hungarian Government toward the Powers and would be in contradiction with the very basis of international relations.

Tone of Berlin Newspapers.

Russian representatives in England, Germany, Italy and France were told to urge those countries to make similar representations to Vienna. The same day the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Berlin telegraphed that all the Berlin papers welcomed with great sympathy the energetic tone of Austria, while the official Lokal-Anzeiger was particularly aggressive and stigmatized as superfluous the appeals of Servia to St. Petersburg, Paris, Athens and Bucharest.

The Charge at Paris telegraphed that the German Ambassador had visited the French Foreign Minister and told him if Servia refused the ultimatum Austria would be obliged to have recourse to military measures. The Ambassador told the Minister that Germany thought the settlement of the question should be left to Austria and Servia.

July 25 the Russian Charge at Vienna telegraphed that Count Berchtold was away, but that his representative said he could predict with certainty Berchtold's categorical refusal of Russia's proposal for delay, and a few hours later his refusal formally was given by Austria.

On the same day the Charge in Berlin telegraphed that he was unable to induce Germany to bring pressure on Austria for delay. England, on the other hand, as shown by a telegram from the Ambassador in London, not only worked hard for an extension of the ultimatum, but suggested that if the time limit were not extended, the result might be secured by Austrian delay in beginning hostilities, if Servia refused the ultimatum.

Situation Considered Serious.

By this time Russia considered that situation so serious that Foreign Minister Sazanoff telegraphed to the Russian Ambassador in London on July 5:

"In case of a fresh aggravation of the situation, provoking corresponding acts on the part of the great Powers, we rely upon England not delaying to take her stand clearly with Russia and France, so as to maintain the European equilibrium, in support of which she has constantly intervened in the past and which undoubtedly would be compromised in the event of the triumph of Austria."

Ambassador Benckendorff replied: "Grey has told me that the German Ambassador declares Germany absolutely sustains the Austrian demand, asking at the same time if England would consent to act at St. Petersburg in a spirit of conciliation. Grey replied that it was absolutely impossible and England reserved for herself a complete liberty of action if Austrian mobilization compelled Russian mobilization, and thereby all the great Powers became involved."

Ambassador Benckendorff telegraphed again, later the same day:

"Grey has told the German Ambassador that, in his opinion, Austrian mobilization would involve mobilization of Russia, and that then would arise an acute danger of a general war, and that he saw only one means of pacific solution. That is, in the presence of Austrian and Russian mobilizations, Germany, France, Italy and England should abstain from immediate mobilization and tender their good offices at once. Grey told me that this plan necessitated above all, an agreement of Germany and an undertaking of that power not to mobilize. Consequently he has sent an immediate question to Berlin on this subject."

Cannot Localize Conflict.

On July 26 M. Sazonoff telegraphed the Russian Ambassador in Italy to urge an attempt to exercise his influence over Austria and to adopt an attitude strictly unfavorable to the conflict, for this latter cannot be localized. The dispatch said;

"It is desirable that you express a conviction that it is impossible for Russia not to come to the aid of Servia."

The same day Russia learned that Austrian mobilization had been ordered and that Sazanoff telegraphed the Charge in Vienna to urge the Austrian Government to authorize its Ambassador in St. Petersburg to enter into an exchange of views for mutual revision and some changes of provisions in the ultimatum to Servia. The dispatch says:

"Please explain the sense of this telegram prudently and amicably to your Minister of Foreign Affairs."

Germany was asked to advise Vienna to accept this proposition on the same day the French Minister of Foreign Affairs asked the German Ambassador in Paris if England, Germany, Italy and France could not make representations to St. Petersburg and Vienna, as the affair had at last resolved itself into a conflict between Russia and Austria. But the German Ambassador replied he could not act, as he had no instructions.

On July 27, M. Sazanoff telegraphed Ambassador Benckendorff in London: "The English Ambassador has suggested, if we think it useful, that England will take the initiative of convoking in London a conference of representatives of England, France, Germany and Italy to seek a way out of the actual situation."

Sazanoff Telegram to Benckendorff.

On July 27 M. Sazanoff telegraphed Ambassador Benckendorff in London: "The English Ambassador has suggested, if we think it useful, that England will take the initiative of convoking in London a conference of representatives of England, France. Germany and Italy, to seek a way out of the actual situation."

I answered the Ambassador that I had entered into a conversation with the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador under conditions that I hoped were favorable. However, I have not yet received a reply to the proposal that I make a revision of the note by the two Cabinets. If direct explanations by the Cabinet in Vienna cannot be realized, I am willing to accept the English proposal or any other capable of solving the problem favorably.

The compromising attitude of Germany was still more strongly shown by the telegram of the Russian Charge at Paris on July 27, which said:

"The German Ambassador has strongly insisted on the exclusion of all possibility of mediation or conference."

That same day the Russian Ambassador to France telegraphed a conversation with the French Minister of Justice in which the Minister expressed the opinion that Germany had for its evident aim the estrangement of Russia and France and in the event of war throwing the responsibility upon Russia and France.

On July 27 the Charge at Berlin telegraphed that Foreign Minister von Jagow said he could not advise Austria to yield. On that day the Czar telegraphed the Prince Regent of Servia: "Your Highness can be assured that in any case Russia will never dissever herself from the lot of Servia."

Benckendorff, telegraphing on July 27, said: "Grey has just told the German Ambassador that the Servian response to the Austrian note surpasses in moderation and conciliatory tone all that could be expected."

Key to Situation in Berlin.

Grey declared that England was sincerely disposed to collaborate with Germany for peace but, failing that, England reserved the full liberty of action July 28 Sazonoff telegraphed Benckendorff: "My interviews with the German Ambassador confirm my impression that Germany is much more irreconcilable than Austria. The cabinet in Berlin, who would have been able to stop completely the development of a crisis, do not appear to exercise any action on their ally. This German attitude is extremely alarming. The key of the situation unquestionably is to be found in Berlin."

At the same time Sazanoff, through Benckendorff, urged further mediatory action upon England, especially looking to an immediate suspension of Austrian military acts against Servia, and he assured the German Ambassador in St. Petersburg that the Russian mobilization was not directed against Germany and did not involve aggressive measures against Austria.

Sazonoff again suggested a four-power conference and said that after the Servian concessions, already made; it should be easy to find a ground for compromise on the remaining questions, always provided there was some good will on the part of Austria.

The Russian Charge at Berlin telegraphed on July that Von Jagow said it was very difficult for him to influence Vienna, especially openly, and that the Russian mobilization had made it still more difficult to deal with Austria.

The Ambassador in Paris telegraphed on July 29: "Premier Viviani has just on July 29: "Premier Viviani has just confirmed the entire resolution of the French Government to act in accord with us."

Viviani Receives Baron Schoen.

Viviani received the German Ambassador. Viviani observed that if Germany desired peace he ought to hasten to adhere to the proposal of English mediation. Baron Schoen replied that the words "conference" or "arbitration" frightened Austria. Viviani replied he was ont concerned about words and that it would be easy to find another form of mediation. He added that France sincerely desired peace, but that she was at the same time resolved to act in full harmony with her allies and her friends and that he (Schoen) "would understand this resolution had the approbation of the whole country."

Sazonoff replied: "Today the German Ambassador communicated to me his Government's resolve to mobilize if Russia did not cease her military preparations. But we have only commenced. Following on her mobilization, to which Austria has already proceeded, and in view of her evident absence of desire to accept some peaceful solution of her conflict with Servia, since we cannot accede to the wishes of Germany, it only remains for us to hasten our arrangements and to count war as probably inevitable. Please advise French Government accordingly."

The next day Sazonoff telegraphed to the Russian ambassadors of Germany, Austria, France, England and Italy: "I have given the German ambassador for immediate transmission to Berlin the following declaration:

" 'If Austria, recognizing that the Austro-Servian question has assumed the character of a European question, declares herself ready to eliminate from her ultimatum points aimed at the sovereign rights of Servia, Russia agrees to cease her military preparations.' "

Germany's reply was contained in the following dispatch from the Russian ambassador at Berlin on July 30: "I learn that the decree of her mobilization of the army of the German fleet has just been promulgated."

Germany immediately denied mobilization, but at the same time declared Germany found Russia's proposal unacceptable to Austria. Germany then asked England why she was mobilizing and Grey replied England's measures are not aggressive, but every power must be prepared.

On July 31, at the request of Grey, Sazanoff modified his declaration to Germany as follows: "If Austria consents to stop the march of her armies on Servian territory and if, recognizing that Austro-Servian conflict has assumed a character of a question of European interest, she admits that the great powers shall examine the satisfaction which Servia should accord to the Austro-Hungarian Government, without threatening her rights as a sovereign and independent state, Russia engages to preserve her attitude."

At midnight that night Germany informed Russia that unless Russia began demobilization, Germany would mobilize. The German Ambassador added that this did not necessarily constitute war, "but we are very near to it."

On Aug. 1, Beckendorff telegraphed that England had asked France and Germany to guarantee Belgian neutrality. France replied in the affirmative and Germany refused a categoric answer. The same day France ordered mobilization.

Kitchener a Man of Iron Type

War Chief Busy 14 Hours a Day

Is Much Respected, but Isn't Popular

British Secretary for War Constant Source of Wonderment to Other Members of Cabinet—Gets Along With Churchill, Who Once Criticised Him.

By JAMES M. TUOHY,

LORD KITCHNER.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Lord Kitchener as a Cabinet Minister is a constant source of wonderment to his colleagues in the Liberal Government. He arrives at the council punctually to the minute and, before the general business is opened, he says:

"Gentlemen, I have some communications to make. Perhaps we had bettter dispose of them first."

Then he proceeds to make his communications, with certain explanatory remarks for the benefit of those who do not profess to understand military technicalities. The Prime Minister finds it necessary, as a rule, to supplement the War Secretary's communications and to put them in a form less like that of a General giving orders to his staff than is conveyed by Lord Kitchener's manner of speech.

It is said that, when he announced that the Indian troops were being brought through the Suez Canal, one of his colleagues remarked in surprise: "But you can't bring troops through the canal."

Lord Kitchener, turning his strangely domineering eye upon him, asked: "And why not, sir?"

The other Minister did not say why, the fact being that he was a victim to the common error that the canal is neutralized.

Kitchener Puts in Long Day.

When the military business is finished, Lord Kitchener rises and, asking to be excused, leaves the council chamber. He is rarely there more than 15 or 20 minutes, though the council may sit for an hour and a half or two hours. He took office on the understanding that his responsibility should be confined to the conduct of the war.

At the War Office Lord Kitchener is very much respected and feared, but is not popular. He arrives there punctually at 9 in the morning, and, except for a Cabinet council, a special consultation with the Prime Minister or the King, he does not leave it until 7:30 for dinner. He returns at 9 and works on until 12 or 1 in the morning. He expects his staff to keep the same hours. They do not kick at that, but they do feel that a little encouragement at times would be welcome. From Lord Kitchener they get none, but any shortcoming is severely criticised. He has already changed his military secretary once and no one feels any security. Lord Kitchener of Khartoum expects every man to do his duty—and the doing of it must be its own reward. The time is one that demands a man of the iron type and, since he has been at the War Office, everyone in that large building has worked like a galley slave.

Gets Along With Churchill.

There was a good deal of speculation as to how Lord Kitchener of Khartoum at the War Office would hit it off with Winston Churchill at the Admiralty. Churchill, in his "River War," the Khartoum campaign, when he was out as a war correspondent, severely criticised Lord Kitchener's conduct of that business in every aspect. There was an impact of two self-centered personalities and the result was unpleasant.

At the time Churchill, still in the twenties, had no doubt that he could have conducted the operations far more successfully than the then Col, Kitchener. Kitchener, on his side, expressed the opinion that Churchill was an unlicked cub, and cut him off from official facilities. Churchill is not exactly popular even now, but at that time he was what his fellow correspondents described as "a nauseating young bounder."

One of them asked him one day why he was so unmindful of the feelings of everybody and he is reported to have answered quite frankly: "I must go ahead quickly if I am to do anything in life, because I come of a short-lived stock. I have no time to be thinking of people's susceptibilities."

Two Capable Workers.

No wonder that the contact of Kitchener and Churchill in the Cabinet, controlling the allied services, was watched with curiosity. But nothing happened. They discuss their business together and Churchill is quite as able in the management of his department as Kitchener is in his.

There was one moment when it looked as if there would be trouble. Lord Kitchener wished to consult Churchill on some urgent matter and sent for him. The First Lord of the Admiralty came across to the War Office, but, when leaving, gave the Minister for War to understand that, on the next occasion, the consultation would be at the Admiralty, and so on, alternately, at each office. The usual procedure in such cases is for the Minister desiring a consultation to fix a time when he can see his colleague at that colleague's convenience. But this is not a moment to stand upon ceremany and Churchill knows it.

Aeolian Built Player-Piano

Only a very limited number of these magnificent new mahogany Player-Pianos of Aeolian manufacture were available for this great sale. The supply will hardly last the week out. If you have any thought of buying a player-piano, hasten to take advantage of this truly golden opportunity.

The instrument is of massive design, thoroughly according with the latest ideas in piano and player construction. As a piano it will appeal to every musician, because the tone is rich, sweet and sonorous, and the action exceedingly responsive. It is a marvelous production, only possible through a great organization such as that of the Aeolian Company.

Instruments of far inferior musical possibilities are sold in ordinary piano stores for from $600 upwards. The importance of this offer cannot be too strongly emphasized. The time is short—hasten or you may be too late.

As a player-piano this instrument is excelled only by the Pianola. It not only plays full scale 88-note music rolls but is provided with a Soloist device by which the melody can be brought out clearly—with an Artist Sustaining device by which the pedaling effects of the most artistic hand playing are automatically reproduced—with a very flexible tempo control and many other features of vital importance. It is impossible to duplicate these features in any player-piano not of Aeolian construction, no matter how much you pay.

Sale of Used Pianos and Player-Pianos

Here at Aeolian Hall we are constantly receiving splendid used instruments as part payment on Pianola Pianos. These used instruments are invariably from homes of culture, where they have been well cared for. Before being offered for sale our rebuilding shops put them in perfect playing condition. RUSSIAN BOOK SAYS GERMANY REFUSED TO PREVENT WAR

Asserts Berlin Made No Effort to Have Austria Extend Ultimatum to Servia.

COMPROMISE SUGGESTED

England Reported Willing to Call Conference of Powers in London.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—There has just been received in London a copy of the Russian Orange Book, giving the Russian diplomatic correspondence from the time the Austrian ultimatum to Servia was issued to the outbreak of the war.

The dispatch in the book is from the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Belgrade to the Foreign Minister at St. Petersburg. It tells of the ultimatum and says Servia solicited the aid of Russia as the Servian Government could not accept the Austrian demands. This was on July 23.

The next day M. Sazonoff, the Foreign Minister, instructed the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Vienna to tell Count Berchtold, the Austrian Foreign Minister, that it was indispensable that the 48-hour time limit to Servia be prolonged in order to give the Powers time to smooth out the complications. The dispatch said, in as much as Austria was willing to inform the Powers of the results of the inquiry upon which the ultimatum was based, "she ought, therefore, have given them time to consider them." A refusal to prolong the term of the ultimatum would deprive of all weight the proceeding of the Austro-Hungarian Government toward the Powers and would be in contradiction with the very basis of international relations.

Tone of Berlin Newspapers.

Russian representatives in England, Germany, Italy and France were told to urge those countries to make similar representations to Vienna. The same day the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Berlin telegraphed that all the Berlin papers welcomed with great sympathy the energetic tone of Austria, while the official Lokal-Anzeiger was particularly aggressive and stigmatized as superfluous the appeals of Servia to St. Petersburg, Paris, Athens and Bucharest.

The Charge at Paris telegraphed that the German Ambassador had visited the French Foreign Minister and told him if Servia refused the ultimatum Austria would be obliged to have recourse to military measures. The Ambassador told the Minister that Germany thought the settlement of the question should be left to Austria and Servia.

July 25 the Russian Charge at Vienna telegraphed that Count Berchtold was away, but that his representative said he could predict with certainty Berchtold's categorical refusal of Russia's proposal for delay, and a few hours later his refusal formally was given by Austria.

On the same day the Charge in Berlin telegraphed that he was unable to induce Germany to bring pressure on Austria for delay. England, on the other hand, as shown by a telegram from the Ambassador in London, not only worked hard for an extension of the ultimatum, but suggested that if the time limit were not extended, the result might be secured by Austrian delay in beginning hostilities, if Servia refused the ultimatum.

Situation Considered Serious.

By this time Russia considered that situation so serious that Foreign Minister Sazanoff telegraphed to the Russian Ambassador in London on July 5:

"In case of a fresh aggravation of the situation, provoking corresponding acts on the part of the great Powers, we rely upon England not delaying to take her stand clearly with Russia and France, so as to maintain the European equilibrium, in support of which she has constantly intervened in the past and which undoubtedly would be compromised in the event of the triumph of Austria."

Ambassador Benckendorff replied:

"Grey has told me that the German Ambassador declares Germany absolutely sustains the Austrian demand, asking at the same time if England would consent to act at St. Petersburg in a spirit of conciliation. Grey replied that it was absolutely impossible and England reserved for herself a complete liberty of action if Austrian mobilization compelled Russian mobilization, and thereby all the great Powers became involved."

Ambassador Benckendorff telegraphed again, later the same day:

"Grey has told the German Ambassador that, in his opinion, Austrian mobilization would involve mobilization of Russia, and that then would arise an acute danger of a general war, and that he saw only one means of pacific solution. That is, in the presence of Austrian and Russian mobilizations, Germany, France, Italy and England should abstain from immediate mobilization and tender their good offices at once. Grey told me that this plan necessitated above all, an agreement of Germany and an undertaking of that power not to mobilize. Consequently he has sent an immediate question to Berlin on this subject."

Cannot Localize Conflict.

On July 26 M. Sazonoff telegraphed the Russian Ambassador in Italy to urge an attempt to exercise his influence over Austria and to adopt an attitude strictly unfavorable to the conflict, for this latter cannot be localized. The dispatch said;

"It is desirable that you express a conviction that it is impossible for Russia not to come to the aid of Servia."

The same day Russia learned that Austrian mobilization had been ordered and that Sazanoff telegraphed the Charge in Vienna to urge the Austrian Government to authorize its Ambassador in St. Petersburg to enter into an exchange of views for mutual revision and some changes of provisions in the ultimatum to Servia. The dispatch says:

"Please explain the sense of this telegram prudently and amicably to your Minister of Foreign Affairs."

Germany was asked to advise Vienna to accept this proposition on the same day the French Minister of Foreign Affairs asked the German Ambassador in Paris if England, Germany, Italy and France could not make representations to St. Petersburg and Vienna, as the affair had at last resolved itself into a conflict between Russia and Austria. But the German Ambassador replied he could not act, as he had no instructions.

On July 27, M. Sazanoff telegraphed Ambassador Benckendorff in London:

"The English Ambassador has suggested, if we think it useful, that England will take the initiative of convoking in London a conference of representatives of England, France, Germany and Italy to seek a way out of the actual situation."

Sazanoff Telegram to Benckendorff.

On July 27 M. Sazanoff telegraphed Ambassador Benckendorff in London: "The English Ambassador has suggested, if we think it useful, that England will take the initiative of convoking in London a conference of representatives of England, France, Germany and Italy, to seek a way out of the actual situation."

I answered the Ambassador that I had entered into a conversation with the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador under conditions that I hoped were favorable. However, I have not yet received a reply to the proposal that I make a revision of the note by the two Cabinets. If direct explanations by the Cabinet in Vienna cannot be realized, I am willing to accept the English proposal or any other capable of solving the problem favorably.

The compromising attitude of Germany was still more strongly shown by the telegram of the Russian Charge at Paris on July 27, which said:

"The German Ambassador has strongly insisted on the exclusion of all possibility of mediation or conference."

That same day the Russian Ambassador to France telegraphed a conversation with the French Minister of Justice in which the Minister expressed the opinion that Germany had for its evident aim the estrangement of Russia and France and in the event of war throwing the responsibility upon Russia and France.

On July 27 the Charge at Berlin telegraphed that Foreign Minister von Jagow said he could not advise Austria to yield. On that day the Czar telegraphed the Prince Regent of Servia: "Your Highness can be assured that in any case Russia will never dissever herself from the lot of Servia."

Benckendorff, telegraphing on July 27, said: "Grey has just told the German Ambassador that the Servian response to the Austrian note surpasses in moderation and conciliatory tone all that could be expected."

Key to Situation in Berlin.

Grey declared that England was sincerely disposed to collaborate with Germany for peace but, failing that, England reserved the full liberty of action July 28 Sazonoff telegraphed Benckendorff: "My interviews with the German Ambassador confirm my impression that Germany is much more irreconcilable than Austria. The cabinet in Berlin, who would have been able to stop completely the development of a crisis, do not appear to exercise any action on their ally. This German attitude is extremely alarming. The key of the situation unquestionably is to be found in Berlin."

At the same time Sazanoff, through Benckendorff, urged further mediatory action upon England, especially looking to an immediate suspension of Austrian military acts against Servia, and he assured the German Ambassador in St. Petersburg that the Russian mobilization was not directed against Germany and did not involve aggressive measures against Austria.

Sazonoff again suggested a four-power conference and said that after the Servian concessions, already made; it should be easy to find a ground for compromise on the remaining questions, always provided there was some good will on the part of Austria.

The Russian Charge at Berlin telegraphed on July that Von Jagow said it was very difficult for him to influence Vienna, especially openly, and that the Russian mobilization had made it still more difficult to deal with Austria.

The Ambassador in Paris telegraphed on July 29: "Premier Viviani has just on July 29: "Premier Viviani has just confirmed the entire resolution of the French Government to act in accord with us."

Viviani Receives Baron Schoen.

Viviani received the German Ambassador. Viviani observed that if Germany desired peace he ought to hasten to adhere to the proposal of English mediation. Baron Schoen replied that the words "conference" or "arbitration" frightened Austria. Viviani replied he was ont concerned about words and that it would be easy to find another form of mediation. He added that France sincerely desired peace, but that she was at the same time resolved to act in full harmony with her allies and her friends and that he (Schoen) "would understand this resolution had the approbation of the whole country."

Sazonoff replied: "Today the German Ambassador communicated to me his Government's resolve to mobilize if Russia did not cease her military preparations. But we have only commenced. Following on her mobilization, to which Austria has already proceeded, and in view of her evident absence of desire to accept some peaceful solution of her conflict with Servia, since we cannot accede to the wishes of Germany, it only remains for us to hasten our arrangements and to count war as probably inevitable. Please advise French Government accordingly."

The next day Sazonoff telegraphed to the Russian ambassadors of Germany, Austria, France, England and Italy: "I have given the German ambassador for immediate transmission to Berlin the following declaration:

"'If Austria, recognizing that the Austro-Servian question has assumed the character of a European question, declares herself ready to eliminate from her ultimatum points aimed at the sovereign rights of Servia, Russia agrees to cease her military preparations.'"

Germany's reply was contained in the following dispatch from the Russian ambassador at Berlin on July 30: "I learn that the decree of her mobilization of the army of the German fleet has just been promulgated."

Germany immediately denied mobilization, but at the same time declared Germany found Russia's proposal unacceptable to Austria. Germany then asked England why she was mobilizing and Grey replied England's measures are not aggressive, but every power must be prepared.

On July 31, at the request of Grey, Sazanoff modified his declaration to Germany as follows: "If Austria consents to stop the march of her armies on Servian territory and if, recognizing that Austro-Servian conflict has assumed a character of a question of European interest, she admits that the great powers shall examine the satisfaction which Servia should accord to the Austro-Hungarian Government, without threatening her rights as a sovereign and independent state, Russia engages to preserve her attitude."

At midnight that night Germany informed Russia that unless Russia began demobilization, Germany would mobilize. The German Ambassador added that this did not necessarily constitute war, "but we are very near to it."

On Aug. 1, Beckendorff telegraphed that England had asked France and Germany to guarantee Belgian neutrality. France replied in the affirmative and Germany refused a categoric answer. The same day France ordered mobilization.

Kitchener a Man of Iron Type

War Chief Busy 14 Hours a Day

Is Much Respected, but Isn't Popular

British Secretary for War Constant Source of Wonderment to Other Members of Cabinet — Gets Along With Churchill, Who Once Criticised Him.

By JAMES M. TUOHY,

LORD KITCHNER.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Lord Kitchener as a Cabinet Minister is a constant source of wonderment to his colleagues in the Liberal Government. He arrives at the council punctually to the minute and, before the general business is opened, he says:

"Gentlemen, I have some communications to make. Perhaps we had bettter dispose of them first."

Then he proceeds to make his communications, with certain explanatory remarks for the benefit of those who do not profess to understand military technicalities. The Prime Minister finds it necessary, as a rule, to supplement the War Secretary's communications and to put them in a form less like that of a General giving orders to his staff than is conveyed by Lord Kitchener's manner of speech.

It is said that, when he announced that the Indian troops were being brought through the Suez Canal, one of his colleagues remarked in surprise: "But you can't bring troops through the canal."

Lord Kitchener, turning his strangely domineering eye upon him, asked: "And why not, sir?"

The other Minister did not say why, the fact being that he was a victim to the common error that the canal is neutralized.

Kitchener Puts in Long Day.

When the military business is finished, Lord Kitchener rises and, asking to be excused, leaves the council chamber. He is rarely there more than 15 or 20 minutes, though the council may sit for an hour and a half or two hours. He took office on the understanding that his responsibility should be confined to the conduct of the war.

At the War Office Lord Kitchener is very much respected and feared, but is not popular. He arrives there punctually at 9 in the morning, and, except for a Cabinet council, a special consultation with the Prime Minister or the King, he does not leave it until 7:30 for dinner. He returns at 9 and works on until 12 or 1 in the morning. He expects his staff to keep the same hours. They do not kick at that, but they do feel that a little encouragement at times would be welcome. From Lord Kitchener they get none, but any shortcoming is severely criticised. He has already changed his military secretary once and no one feels any security. Lord Kitchener of Khartoum expects every man to do his duty—and the doing of it must be its own reward. The time is one that demands a man of the iron type and, since he has been at the War Office, everyone in that large building has worked like a galley slave.

Gets Along With Churchill.

There was a good deal of speculation as to how Lord Kitchener of Khartoum at the War Office would hit it off with Winston Churchill at the Admiralty. Churchill, in his "River War," the Khartoum campaign, when he was out as a war correspondent, severely criticised Lord Kitchener's conduct of that business in every aspect. There was an impact of two self-centered personalities and the result was unpleasant.

At the time Churchill, still in the twenties, had no doubt that he could have conducted the operations far more successfully than the then Col. Kitchener. Kitchener, on his side, expressed the opinion that Churchill was an unlicked cub, and cut him off from official facilities. Churchill is not exactly popular even now, but at that time he was what his fellow correspondents described as "a nauseating young bounder."

One of them asked him one day why he was so unmindful of the feelings of everybody and he is reported to have answered quite frankly: "I must go ahead quickly if I am to do anything in life, because I come of a short-lived stock. I have no time to be thinking of people's susceptibilities."

Two Capable Workers.

No wonder that the contact of Kitchener and Churchill in the Cabinet, controlling the allied services, was watched with curiosity. But nothing happened. They discuss their business together and Churchill is quite as able in the management of his department as Kitchener is in his.

There was one moment when it looked as if there would be trouble. Lord Kitchener wished to consult Churchill on some urgent matter and sent for him. The First Lord of the Admiralty came across to the War Office, but, when leaving, gave the Minister for War to understand that, on the next occasion, the consultation would be at the Admiralty, and so on, alternately, at each office. The usual procedure in such cases is for the Minister desiring a consultation to fix a time when he can see his colleague at that colleague's convenience. But this is not a moment to stand upon ceremany and Churchill knows it.

Beer, Wine, Gasoline, Parlor Car Tickets, Insurance and Business Papers on Levy List.

REPUBLICANS TO FIGHT

Emergency Measure Will Be Reported to House Monday—Contest to Come in Senate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—An emergency revenue bill to provide $105,000,000 taxing beer, wines, gasoline, sleeping and parlor car tickets, insurance, telegraph and telephone messages, amusements and a variety of documents, was agreed upon late today by the Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee. It will be introduced by Democratic Leader Underwood next Monday.

The Republicans of the committee will be called in Tuesday to vote on it and the House will begin considering it next Thursday.

Republicans of both House and Senate already have gone on record in opposition to any war tax measure. The Democrats hope to rush the bill through the House. The big fight against it is expected to develop in the Senate.

Many items of the bill are adopted verbatim from the Spanish War tax bill of 1898, including the administrative features.

The committee increased the internal revenue tax on beer by 50 cents a barrel, making the new tax total $1.50. Domestic wines are to be taxed 20 cents a gallon on sweet wines and 12 cents a gallon on dry wines. Gasoline is to be taxed 2 cents a gallon.

Continue Until Dec. 31, 1915.

Stamp tax provisions of the bill and the tax on tobacco dealers, brokers, bankers and amusements are carried in schedule A, which will continue in effect until Dec. 31, 1915. The remainder of the bill will be in force until repealed.

Bankers are to be taxed $2 on each $1000 of capital, surplus and undivided profits, brokers will pay $50 each, pawn brokers $20, commercial brokers $20, customs house brokers $10. Proprietors of theaters, museums and concert halls in cities of 15,000 population or over are to pay $100 each. Circus proprietors are to pay $100 a year, proprietors of other exhibitions $10 and proprietors of bowling alleys and billiard rooms $5 for each alley or table.

Tobacco dealers and manufacturers are to be taxed the same as in 1898, except that in the largest class "tobacco dealers not specifically provided for," the tax is to be $4.80 each. In 1898 there was a $12 tax on tobacco dealers having annual sales of 50,000 pounds or more.

Bonds and certificates of indebtedness are taxed 5 cents each for each $100 involved and freight and express receipts 1 cent each, with a mandatory provision that the shippers must pay this tax. Telephone messages are to be taxed 1 cent on all tolls of 15 cents or more and telegrams 1 cent a message.

The bill carries taxes of 50 cents on each indemnity bond, 2 cents on each certificate of profits, 25 cents on each certificate of damage and 10 cents for each certificate not especially provided for.

Tax on Life Insurance.

Life insurance policies are to be taxed 8 cents each on each $100 and fire, marine, casualty, fidelity and guaranty insurance policies ½ cent on each dollar as in 1898. Goods withdrawn from custom house will pay a stamp tax of 50 cents as in 1898, but the 25 cent tax on each warehouse receipt imposed in 1898 is omitted. The 1898 tax of 25 cents to $1 for entry of goods at custom houses, according to values, is renewed.

For each seat in a palace or parlor car and for each berth in a sleeping car the tax is now to be 2 cents, against the 1 cent war tax of 1898.

Passage tickets, which are tickets from a United States port to a foreign port, will be taxed from $1 to $5 each, according to the value of the ticket, as in 1898.

Other provisions are: Brokers' contracts 10 cents; deeds and other conveyances, 50 cents, when not exceeding $500 in amount and 50 cents for each additional $500; mortgages 25 cents for each $1500; power of attorney to vote, 10 cents; power of attorney to sell, 25 cents; protest of a note, bill of acceptance, etc., 25 cents.

Because of constitutional questions the committee eliminated altogether foreign bills of exchange, charter agreements, manifests and foreign bills of lading and also struck out all references to stamp tax on checks, bills of exchange, drafts and deposit certificates and postoffice money orders and on leases.

TRUCE IS GRANTED IN FILIBUSTER ON THE RIVERS BILL

Senate Democrats Agree to Recess to Patch Up Compromise After 30 Hours' Session.

MEASURE TO BE TRIMMED

President Said to Favor Reduction in Proposed $34,000,000 Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Democratic champions of the $34,000,000 rivers and harbors appropriation bill gave up the fight to break down the filibuster of Senators Burton and Kenyon at 5:30 this afternoon, after a session which had been continuous since Friday morning.

Having failed to wear out the physical endurance of the Senator from Ohio and his Iowa colleague and, learning of reinforcements coming for the filibusterers, the Democrats agreed to a recess until Monday morning.

In the meantime, conferences of Democratic Senators are to be held which may further trim the bill or possibly reach a compromise with the opposition.

One force which influenced the Democrats to give up their entrenched position against the filibuster was declared tonight to be the attitude of the President, who has advocated strict economy of Government expenditures in view of the financial stringency and the forthcoming war tax.

Early in the day Democratic leaders were considerably perturbed over a report that the President had let it be known that he favored substituting for the bill a joint resolution appropriating from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 for the continuation of existing projects. Later it was stated the President had urged as careful a pruning of the bill as possible.

The committee substitute for section 1 of the bill, cutting $18,000,000 from the original $53,000,000, was introduced today, after which Senator Burton offered an amendment reducing the total to about $28,000,000. This, it is said, will form the basis for the compromise.

Senator Borah will return to Washington in time to aid the Republicans Monday. Senator Burton talked all night Friday, but remained at his post and relieved Senator Kenyon at 10 o'clock this morning. He rested until 2 o'clock while the bill was being read, then again took up the struggle until the recess was agreed upon.

SPINK CONCERNS SUED FOR AN ACCOUNTING

A. H. Spink filed suit in the Circuit Court yesterday against the St. Louis Athletic Club, the Sporting News Publishing Co., J. G. Taylor Spink, Marie Taylor Spink and the copartnership of C. C. Spink & Sons, for an accounting of these concerns for a period covering the last 18 years. He also asks an injunction restraining those at present in charge of the Sporting News Publishing Co. from drawing out any of its funds during the litigation.

Spink says that in August, 1896, he entered into an agreement with his brother, Charles C. Spink, by which the latter was to manage the companies for 15 years, at the end of which he was to make an accounting. Charles C. Spink died April 21.

A. H. Spink is acting as his own attorney in the suit. He filed a similar suit in 1913, which was decided in favor of the defendant, C. C. Spink, according to John D. Johnson, attorney for Mrs. Marie Taylor Spink, widow of C. C. Spink. At that time, Johnson said, C. C. Spink made a voluntary gift of $500 to his brother.

ADVANCE FREIGHT RATE CASE TO BE REOPENED

Eastern Railroads May Present New Matters Arising Since Original Hearing.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Reopening of the advance freight rate case under the specific limitation that consideration be given only to new matters which Eastern railroads contend have arisen since the original case was decided, was granted today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Hearings will begin in Washington one month from today, the roads renewing their plea for a general 5 per cent increase in rates in Eastern territory, which the commission denied in its July decision. Shippers' organizations have indicated that they will oppose any advance.

4 HAZERS ARRESTED AT MISSOURI UNIVERSITY

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 19.—Four Missouri University sophomores were arrested here today at the request of President Hill, and fined on charges of disturbance of the peace, to which they pleaded guilty. When apprehended the four boys were at the State farm, guarding 40 freshmen students, who had been penned in a concrete silo and were being guarded to keep them from participating in the class fight this afternoon.

They are Asbury Roberts of Columbia, J. P. Vawter of Joplin, C. R. Hurst of Metropolis and C. R. Griser of Forest City.

The action taken by President Hill is a result of his determination to stop all forms of hazing among the student body at the University.

POLAR WAVE CO. WON'T PAY ANNUAL DIVIDEND

$25,000 Fine in Anti-Trust Case Partly Responsible, J. C. Muckermann Says.

It became known in financial circles yesterday that the Polar Wave Ice and Fuel Co. passed its annual 6 per cent dividend Aug. 19, and that the holders of its $1,800,000 of stock would receive no return this year on their investment. The annual dividend amounts to $108,000. The stock is said to be held by about 40 persons.

J. C. Muckermann, vice-president of the company, said last night that the passing of the dividend was partly due to the fine of $25,000 recently paid by the company to the State in the anti-trust proceedings brought by the Attorney-General. The Supreme Court at first fixed the fine at $50,000, but later reduced it to $25,000.

"The passing of the dividend is due to a combination of circumstances," Muckermann said. "The company has expended a large amount for new buildings and improvements. We had made provision for that, however. Then there came labor troubles last summer, and then came the $25,000 fine."

Records of the anti-trust proceeding showed the company had a surplus of $1,000,000, and that it had paid a 6 per cent dividend for several years.

BROWNS DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER WITH NATIONALS

After Losing First, 4—1, Rickey's Men Win Second After Two Are Out in 8th.

HOWARD BREAKS IT UP

By W. J. O'Connor.

At 6:15 last night a report reached the press box at Sportsman's Park that the Browns had won the second game, 3—2, from Washington, thereby breaking even on the day. In the dim distance, athletes were seen scurrying hither and yon and altogether there seemed to be some confusion. However, it was too dark to accurately distinguish what really was happening.

Subsequent developments, though, proved the report was true. It was verified, in fact, by Umpire Bill Evans, who permitted a censored report to reach the correspondents. We quote Bill:

"In the last half of the eighth inning, after two were out, Del Pratt singled to right. Gus Williams relieved Pratt as a runner. Gus was picked off first base, but beat Gandil's bad throw to McBride. C. Walker, who had gone hitless all afternoon, purposely was passed, to get Ivan Howard, who owned a batting average of .666. Ivan combed his third single, scoring Williams with the winning run, 3—2. It was then so dark that I demanded a cessation of hostilities and called it a day."

Sheridan Has a Birthday.

It was some day, Bill, a day filled with weirder sounds than Macbeth heard on the night he killed Duncan. It was almost a field day for the fans—fully 3000 of whom were met for the obsequies—and had their favorite fun with the umps, especially Mr. John Sheridan, who has often been familiarly mentioned as "Blind Jack." Sheridan made more bum decisions yesterday than Byron, Eason and Hart have all season, which is a record.

There was another game played earlier in the afternoon. The Browns lost it, 4—1, even though the enemy collected only five hits off the combined efforts of Leverenz and Baumgardner. A series of wild pitches by Leverenz, imposed upon the Browns at precisely the wrong time, lost this game.

All the excitement was crowded into the second game, long after the sun was set. The Browns got a flying start of one run in the first frame on Shotton's walk, his steal, Ainsmith's wild throw and Ivan Howard's single. Doc Ayres was opposed to Wellman in this game and the Browns held their slight advantage until the third when, with one bird dead, Ayres singled and stopped at second on Old Mike Mitchell's infield slam. Foster forced Mitchell, Lavan to Wares, Ayres taking third, whence he scored on Milan's single.

Howard Starts Rally.

This deadlock was maintained until the seventh. From the first to the sixth inclusive the Browns got only one hit off Ayres, that a single by I. Howard. And it was Howard who, in the seventh with one gone, started a rally with another single. He moved up on Wares' out and scored on Lavan's single.

The Browns carried their advantage well for just one inning. In the Nationals' half of the eighth, after two were out, Milan beat out a bounder to Wares, who has an effeminate arm. He went to third on Gandil's prodigious high fly to center that fell for a single. Then, like proverbial thunder from an equally proverbial clear sky, Bill Evans called a balk on Wellman. Bill said that Carl really made three balks, one towards first, one towards home and one towards third. It did seem that Carl went through peculiar gyrations unusual in a well-regulated southpaw.

But when Evans waved Milan home with the tieing run and sent Gandil to second there was large "diddings." Rickey galloped out from the bench and Wellman danced in from the box. They all crowded around Evans and Wellman acted for the world like a man who wanted to fight. Rickey pushed the big southpaw away and Evans finished the job by sending Carl to a cool shower. It was one of the few times that Evans has banished a player.

(Even as you and I).
He told his wife of a business date
(A stag affair, he assured his mate),
And he found it hard to articulate

Oh, the wasted words and the wasted breath,
And the wonderful tale he planned,
Belong to the man who got in Dutch
(And now he knows that he talked too much),
For she seemed to understand.

He put a hand to his aching crown

And told at length how a man named Brown,
A customer, suddenly blew in town;
But he found that the story would not go down
(Even as you and I).

Oh, it isn't the tears and it isn't the jeers,
Or the scolding that gets your goat;
It's the thought of getting the glassy stare
From a rag and a bone and a hank of hair,
As a "golden thread" she removes with care
From the shoulder of your coat.

CARDS LOSE TWO; ALEXANDER SETS SEASON'S RECORD

Quaker Pitching Star Wins Twenty-fifth Game at Expense of St. Louis.

PERRITT LOSES SECOND

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—Huggins' Cardinals kept up their losing streak today when they lost a double-header to the Phillies, the scores being 7 to 0 and 7 to 6. The opening event was very one-sided, but the second was a battle all the way.

The visitors had a great chance in the ninth round of the wind-up contest. With two runs needed to tie the score and one out, Beck singled and Griner doubled. Dolan's long fly to Becker scored Beck, but C. Miller, who ran for Griner, was doubled up at third, Becker to Lobert.

Alexander put another distinguishing mark opposite his name in the first game, when he won his twenty-fifth victory of the season. He is the first Major League twirler to reach the quarter century mark this season. He held the Cardinals to two hits. Only 28 batsmen faced Alexander, of whom 11 were struck out.

The only men who reached first base were Cruise, who singled in the third, and Wilson, who doubled in the fifth. Cruise was left on second base, but Wilson was caught going to third on Wingo's grounder. Thus in eight out of the nine innings the Cardinals went out in order.

Wild Pitch Scores Martin.

There was nothing doing in the scoring line in the first game until the fifth inning. Then Martin beat out a grounder to Huggins, took second on Killifer's sacrifice, reached third when Miller threw Alexander out and scored on a wild pitch. Lobert singled, took third on Becker's single and the former scored by working a double steal with Becker, who went on to third when Wingo threw wild to second. S. Magee walked, and when he made a delayed steal of second, Miller threw wild to the plate and Becker scored Cravath's single scored S. Miller.

Lee Magee kicked until he was put out of the game, in the seventh inning, following his being called out on strikes, Dressen going to first base. In this session the Phillies got two more runs on Alexander's single, Lobert's sacrifice, Becker's safe bunt, S. Magee's single and Cravath's fly to Dolan.

Luderus, who drew a pass in the eighth, when Williams and Roche became the St. Louis battery, got around to the scoring station on Martin's single, Killefer's sacrifice and Alexander's out, Huggins to Dresser. Huggins sent in Derringer and Betzel as pinch hitters in the ninth and Alexander fanned them.

S. Magee Knocks Homer.

S. Magee's home-run drive into the left field bleachers put the Phillies in the lead in the first inning of the second contest. The Cardinals, however, went to the front in the third session by scoring three runs on doubles by Beck and Dolan, safe bunts by Huggins and Butler and Miller's single.

Oeschger took Rixey's place in the fourth. Dooin's team pushed five runs over the plate in this period. The bases were filled on Becker's single and S. Magee and Cravath being hit. Byrne's single sent in one run and three more came in on Luderus' safety and an error by Snyder. Luderus took third on the play and scored on Martin's sacrifice bunt. When Perritt gave Burns a pass, Griner went to the rubber and stopped the slaughter.

Dolan opened the fifth with a terrific home-run drive into the left field bleachers. Magee brought in a tally for Philadelphia in the same inning. He singled, worked a delayed steal of second and kept on home when Miller threw the ball into left field.

The Cardinals came back with a run in the sixth. Wilson making the circuit on a pass, a steal of second, a single by Cruise, who took Riggert's place and Beck's sacrifice fly.

A heady play was pulled off in this inning. After Luderus singled, Wingo permitted Martin's pop fly to drop safe, Wingo then threw the ball to Miller, who touched out Luderus and then stepped on the bag and doubled Martin.

The Cardinals scored in the ninth, but were stopped by the double play when Dolan flied to Becker.

Eastern Woman Beats Chicagoan for Golf Title

GLENCOVE, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Mrs. Arnold Jackson of Boston won the woman's national golf title here today by one up from Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Chicago in 18 holes.

This is the second time that Mrs. Jackson has won the national title. The first was in 1908 at Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C., when she was Miss Kate Harley. She also hold the women's eastern golf association championship.

Miss Rosenthal first played in a national tournament only last year. Considering her inexperience, she put up a game fight. She was three down at one stage of the game, but by plucky golf managed to pull this down to one hole at the fourteenth. At the sixteenth Mrs. Jackson was lucky to maintain her lead, as her ball ran through a trap and got a good position on the green, enabling her to halve in four. The seventeenth and eighteenth holes were halved. At both Miss Rosenthal was bunkered with her second shot. She made good recoveries, but Mrs. Jackson was always able to hold her own. The cards:

COZY DOLAN AND MILLER ARRESTED BEFORE GAME

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—Jack Miller, shortstop, and Albert Dolan, left-fielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, were arrested at their hotel here today and later were held under bail for further appearance on the charge of assault and battery preferred by William Gasper of Pittsburg.

Manager Huggins of the Cards was much worried when he learned that two of his best players had been locked up, but he hurried around and got both Miller and Dolan out in time for them to play in their double-header with the Phillies.

Peers, Kling, Cunliffe, Marsh and Foote were among the old grads who opposed the 1914 aggregation. The scrimmage was held on the Soldan campus. Coach Kelly switched his men about from time to time, merely working with the idea to see what brand of material he had out. Forty candidates reported.

Central and McKinley squads held long signal drills on their respective campuses. About 30 gridders turned out at each workout. Kicking, passing, running down punts and falling on the ball also received places on the day's program.

Manual Training School will open practice tomorrow afternoon on the school campus, under the direction of Coach Homer Thomas. Manual opened school last Monday but was unable to give the call for the gridders owing to scholastic duties. Almost an entirely new team will have to be made up owing to the large number of last year's men who graduated.

School starts at Smith tomorrow, and it is thought that the call for football players will be issued in the middle of the week. Smith also suffered from the June graduation.

Terrier Pitchers Hammered Hard by Oakes' Men

Pittsfeds Get to Watson and Groom for 13 Hits and Win, 10—3.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 19.—The St. Louis Federals made their first appearance here under the leadership of Fielder Jones today, and demonstrated that it takes a team to make a good manager by losing to the tail-enders, 10 to 3, in a game featured by weak pitching on the part of the visiting twirling force and also failure to follow up advantages granted them by Knetzer, the home pitcher, who walked seven of the Sloufeds.

Watson started to work on the mound for the St. Louis team, and inasmuch as he was hard to beat when with the Chifeds, some surprise was manifested by the fans when the Rebs got gay with his portside delivery in the second inning and nicked him for four hits and three runs. Jack Lewis took the heart out of him when he hit the ball to the center field fence for a homer, then followed hits by Berry Delehanty and Savage that produced three runs.

He got through the next inning all right, but gave way for a pinch hitter in the fourth, when Bob Groom took up the task of keeping the Rebels from scoring. He succeeded in shutting them out without a hit for three innings, but in the seventh the beans were spilled and when the smoke of battle had cleared away the Oakes bunch had garnered five more tallies on six hits, and Groom vanished. BRAVES FAIL TO SHAKE GIANTS AS RACE NEARS END

Both Teams Victorious Yesterday, "No-Hit" Davis and Tesreau Pitching Successfully.

YESTERDAY'S National League results, with Boston and the Giants winning, while the Cards frittered away what remote pennant chances might have remained to them, make it practically certain that either the Braves or the Giants will win the flag.

Only the complete collapse of the two leaders could encourage even the wildest of hopes on the part of the two Western clubs. History contains no instances of leading clubs suffering a breakdown of such consequence so near to the finish.

New York's hopes are still strong, though the club is today three games behind the leaders, with only 19 more games to play. The Braves far from weakening, have grown stronger.

For New York Tesreau and Matty are going well, Fromme pitched great ball, recently, and McGraw believes Marquard and Demaree are fit for a fighting finish.

During the coming week Boston has a comparatively easy time, facing the broken Pirates, the hopeless Reds and weakening Chicago Cubs. The Giants face the Cubs and Pirates, but also get the Cardinals, who may cause McGraw trouble.

At present the Braves are showing the best spirit and the best baseball in the League. Odds of 3 to 2 are offered in some quarters that the Braves win the flag. World's series wagers of 11 to 6 on the Athletics to beat Boston, if the Braves capture the National flag, are in evidence.

Gov. Tener Sees Braves.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 19.—Gov. John K. Tener of Pennsylvania, president of the National League, was one of the nearly 20,000 spectators who came out to see the Braves mix it with the Pittsburg Pirates today. Boston won an easy victory by a score of 9 to 3, making seven of its runs on Cooper and Conzelman in the sixth inning.

At that time the Pirates were leading, 3 to 1, and a gain of a full game for the Braves seemed imminent. Never was a dream more rudely shattered.

George Davis, Stallings' latest sensation, who pitched a no-hit game last week, took the mound for the Boston crew and was fairly effective, although Pittsburg got him for three runs in the second round. He was benched to make a way for a pinch hitter in that terrible sixth, and Lefty Tyler held the enemy at bay for the rest of the afternoon.

Wagner Starts Rally.

The Pirates got busy in the second, after Viox walked and Konetchy had flied out. Old man Wagner lined a single to left. McCarthy flied to Whitted, then Coleman walked, filling the bases. Cooper beat out an infield hit to Smith, and Viox scored. Two more came across the plate when Carey's Texas leaguer bounced away from Whitted.

The Braves got one back in their half when Collins dropped Maranville's short right-field fly and the latter tallied on Gowdy's single over third.

After Whitted was out in the sixth, Schmidt bounced one at Viox and beat the throw to first. Smith and Maranville walked. Hank Gowdy, who is pasting the pill like a wild man these days, lined one to the left-field embankment, scoring two. Dugey batting for Davis, shot a single over second, scoring Gowdy. Conselman then went in and got Moran on a fly to Kelly. Evers' single, however, put Dugey on third, and Joe Connolly stepped to the plate in place of Cather. He doubled to right, scoring Dugey, Evers taking third. Whitted's single scored the other two runs and the latter went out in an attempt to steal second.

Hank Gowdy's third hit, a single, scored another run in the eighth.

They're Still at It.

VETERAN ATHLETES AT J. E. SULLIVAN'S FUNERAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—James E. Sullivan, for more than a decade the dominant figure of American athletics, was buried in Calvary Cemetery, Brooklyn, this afternoon. The funeral services were held in St. Aloysius Church, Manhattan. Hundreds of men and boys in every walk of life attended.

Along the mile the funeral train traversed from the Sullivan home to the church the streets were lined with school boys. Fifty medal winners in public school athletic events marched before the hearse, carrying an American flag, draped with black. Twenty-eight honorary pallbearers, all of them notable in the field of athletics, marched behind the hearse.

Many veterans of the athletic field with whom Mr. Sullivan competed in his prime more than 20 years ago were in the cortege.

Braves Sign a Southpaw.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—Manager Stallings of the Boston Nationals last night announced that Pitcher Burke, a left-hander from the semi-professional ranks in Philadelphia, had been signed for next season.

WESTERN N. L. TEAMS WIN ONE OUT OF 19

IN the intersectional series now being fought in the National League, the Western teams are making the most miserable showing of the season. Out of 20 games played they have succeeded in winning one and tieing another. The Cubs rescued from a complete calcimine bath by winning a 10-inning game from Brooklyn Friday. Jim Vaughan pitched it.

The Cards came close when Bill Doak held the Braves to three hits and gained a tie, 1—1, in 12 innings.

This is considerable upset. The Phillies now have won seven straight and may yet dislodge the Cardinals from first division. Cincinnati has lost 14 straight.

20,000 See Giants Win.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—More than 20,000 fans saw the Giants beat the Cubs here this afternoon, score 5 to 4. The Giants made seven errors, but Tesreau saved the day by holding the Cubs to four hits. Tesreau was a bit unsteady in the first inning, the Cubs scoring three runs on two bases on balls, a two-bagger by Zimmerman, an out and an error by Fletcher.

The New Yorks also made three runs in their half of this inning by bunching two doubles, a base on balls and a single off Pitcher Hageman.

McGraw's men took the lead in the third inning with Hageman still in the box by scoring twice on a base on balls, a single, a hit batsman, a force, a steal, a wild pitch and a single.

In the ninth inning, with two out, Saier hammered the ball into the grandstand for a home run, his eighteenth this season.

They Scent That Bonus.

Nine St. Louis Golfers Have Sent In Entries to State Golf Event

St. Louis will be well represented in the Missouri State golf championship tournament to be held at the St. Joseph (Mo.) Country Club, between Sept. 30 and Oct. 3. Nine local golfers have already entered, but according to Bonner Miller, there will be some 18 or 20 St. Louisans who will play in the tourney.

Those who have already sent in their entries are T. B. Boyd, C. J. Harbaugh, Jesse L. Carleton, Christian Kenney, Glen Echo; Bonner Miller, Andrew McCreery, Eddie Limberg, Sid Overall, Triple A, and Albert Bond Lambert Country Club. It is expected that the Stickneys, Edmunds, Potter, Rosen and other members of the local trust will also be on hand.

Besides competing in the individual play, players representing Triple A, Country Club and Glen Echo will play in the team competition. Each team is composed of four men.

Local golfers are looking forward to a big year at the State meet. Eddie Limberg is the local favorite. Limberg is the present city champion. Chris Kenney, who will also make the trip, won State honors in 1909 and 1910. Raymond Thorne of Kansas City is the present champion.

BROWNS DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER WITH NATIONALS

After Losing First, 4—1, Rickey's Men Win Second After Two Are Out in 8th.

HOWARD BREAKS IT UP

By W. J. O'Connor.

At 6:15 last night a report reached the press box at Sportsman's Park that the Browns had won the second game, 3—2, from Washington, thereby breaking even on the day. In the dim distance, athletes were seen scurrying hither and yon and altogether there seemed to be some confusion. However, it was too dark to accurately distinguish what really was happening.

Subsequent developments, though, proved the report was true. It was verified, in fact, by Umpire Bill Evans, who permitted a censored report to reach the correspondents. We quote Bill:

"In the last half of the eighth inning, after two were out, Del Pratt singled to right. Gus Williams relieved Pratt as a runner. Gus was picked off first base, but beat Gandil's bad throw to McBride. C. Walker, who had gone hitless all afternoon, purposely was passed, to get Ivan Howard, who owned a batting average of .666. Ivan combed his third single, scoring Williams with the winning run, 3—2. It was then so dark that I demanded a cessation of hostilities and called it a day."

Sheridan Has a Birthday.

It was some day, Bill, a day filled with weirder sounds than Macbeth heard on the night he killed Duncan. It was almost a field day for the fans—fully 3000 of whom were met for the obsequies—and had their favorite fun with the umps, especially Mr. John Sheridan, who has often been familiarly mentioned as "Blind Jack." Sheridan made more bum decisions yesterday than Byron, Eason and Hart have all season, which is a record.

There was another game played earlier in the afternoon. The Browns lost it, 4—1, even though the enemy collected only five hits off the combined efforts of Leverenz and Baumgardner. A series of wild pitches by Leverenz, imposed upon the Browns at precisely the wrong time, lost this game.

All the excitement was crowded into the second game, long after the sun was set. The Browns got a flying start of one run in the first frame on Shotton's walk, his steal, Ainsmith's wild throw and Ivan Howard's single. Doc Ayres was opposed to Wellman in this game and the Browns held their slight advantage until the third when, with one bird dead, Ayres singled and stopped at second on Old Mike Mitchell's infield slam. Foster forced Mitchell, Lavan to Wares, Ayres taking third, whence he scored on Milan's single.

Howard Starts Rally.

This deadlock was maintained until the seventh. From the first to the sixth inclusive the Browns got only one hit off Ayres, that a single by I. Howard. And it was Howard who, in the seventh with one gone, started a rally with another single. He moved up on Wares' out and scored on Lavan's single.

The Browns carried their advantage well for just one inning. In the Nationals' half of the eighth, after two were out, Milan beat out a bounder to Wares, who has an effeminate arm. He went to third on Gandil's prodigious high fly to center that fell for a single. Then, like proverbial thunder from an equally proverbial clear sky, Bill Evans called a balk on Wellman. Bill said that Carl really made three balks, one towards first, one towards home and one towards third. It did seem that Carl went through peculiar gyrations unusual in a well-regulated southpaw.

But when Evans waved Milan home with the tieing run and sent Gandil to second there was large "diddings." Rickey galloped out from the bench and Wellman danced in from the box. They all crowded around Evans and Wellman acted for the world like a man who wanted to fight. Rickey pushed the big southpaw away and Evans finished the job by sending Carl to a cool shower. It was one of the few times that Evans has banished a player.

SPORT SALAD BY L. C. DAVIS

Even as You and I.

A FOOL there was and he stayed out late
(Even as you and I).
He told his wife of a business date
(A stag affair, he assured his mate),
And he found it hard to articulate
(Even as you and I).

Oh, the wasted words and the wasted breath,
And the wonderful tale he planned,
Belong to the man who got in Dutch
(And now he knows that he talked too much),
For she seemed to understand.

He put a hand to his aching crown
(Even as you and I),
And told at length how a man named Brown,
A customer, suddenly blew in town;
But he found that the story would not go down
(Even as you and I).

Oh, it isn't the tears and it isn't the jeers,
Or the scolding that gets your goat;
It's the thought of getting the glassy stare
From a rag and a bone and a hank of hair,
As a "golden thread" she removes with care
From the shoulder of your coat.

CARDS LOSE TWO; ALEXANDER SETS SEASON'S RECORD

Quaker Pitching Star Wins Twenty-fifth Game at Expense of St. Louis.

PERRITT LOSES SECOND

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—Huggins' Cardinals kept up their losing streak today when they lost a double-header to the Phillies, the scores being 7 to 0 and 7 to 6. The opening event was very one-sided, but the second was a battle all the way.

The visitors had a great chance in the ninth round of the wind-up contest. With two runs needed to tie the score and one out, Beck singled and Griner doubled. Dolan's long fly to Becker scored Beck, but C. Miller, who ran for Griner, was doubled up at third, Becker to Lobert.

Alexander put another distinguishing mark opposite his name in the first game, when he won his twenty-fifth victory of the season. He is the first Major League twirler to reach the quarter century mark this season. He held the Cardinals to two hits. Only 28 batsmen faced Alexander, of whom 11 were struck out.

The only men who reached first base were Cruise, who singled in the third, and Wilson, who doubled in the fifth. Cruise was left on second base, but Wilson was caught going to third on Wingo's grounder. Thus in eight out of the nine innings the Cardinals went out in order.

Wild Pitch Scores Martin.

There was nothing doing in the scoring line in the first game until the fifth inning. Then Martin beat out a grounder to Huggins, took second on Killifer's sacrifice, reached third when Miller threw Alexander out and scored on a wild pitch. Lobert singled, took third on Becker's single and the former scored by working a double steal with Becker, who went on to third when Wingo threw wild to second. S. Magee walked, and when he made a delayed steal of second, Miller threw wild to the plate and Becker scored Cravath's single scored S. Miller.

Lee Magee kicked until he was put out of the game, in the seventh inning, following his being called out on strikes, Dressen going to first base. In this session the Phillies got two more runs on Alexander's single, Lobert's sacrifice, Becker's safe bunt, S. Magee's single and Cravath's fly to Dolan.

Luderus, who drew a pass in the eighth, when Williams and Roche became the St. Louis battery, got around to the scoring station on Martin's single, Killefer's sacrifice and Alexander's out, Huggins to Dresser. Huggins sent in Derringer and Betzel as pinch hitters in the ninth and Alexander fanned them.

S. Magee Knocks Homer.

S. Magee's home-run drive into the left field bleachers put the Phillies in the lead in the first inning of the second contest. The Cardinals, however, went to the front in the third session by scoring three runs on doubles by Beck and Dolan, safe bunts by Huggins and Butler and Miller's single.

Oeschger took Rixey's place in the fourth. Dooin's team pushed five runs over the plate in this period. The bases were filled on Becker's single and S. Magee and Cravath being hit. Byrne's single sent in one run and three more came in on Luderus' safety and an error by Snyder. Luderus took third on the play and scored on Martin's sacrifice bunt. When Perritt gave Burns a pass, Griner went to the rubber and stopped the slaughter.

Dolan opened the fifth with a terrific home-run drive into the left field bleachers. Magee brought in a tally for Philadelphia in the same inning. He singled, worked a delayed steal of second and kept on home when Miller threw the ball into left field.

The Cardinals came back with a run in the sixth. Wilson making the circuit on a pass, a steal of second, a single by Cruise, who took Riggert's place and Beck's sacrifice fly.

A heady play was pulled off in this inning. After Luderus singled, Wingo permitted Martin's pop fly to drop safe, Wingo then threw the ball to Miller, who touched out Luderus and then stepped on the bag and doubled Martin.

The Cardinals scored in the ninth, but were stopped by the double play when Dolan flied to Becker.

Eastern Woman Beats Chicagoan for Golf Title

GLENCOVE, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Mrs. Arnold Jackson of Boston won the woman's national golf title here today by one up from Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Chicago in 18 holes.

This is the second time that Mrs. Jackson has won the national title. The first was in 1908 at Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C., when she was Miss Kate Harley. She also hold the women's eastern golf association championship.

Miss Rosenthal first played in a national tournament only last year. Considering her inexperience, she put up a game fight. She was three down at one stage of the game, but by plucky golf managed to pull this down to one hole at the fourteenth. At the sixteenth Mrs. Jackson was lucky to maintain her lead, as her ball ran through a trap and got a good position on the green, enabling her to halve in four. The seventeenth and eighteenth holes were halved. At both Miss Rosenthal was bunkered with her second shot. She made good recoveries, but Mrs. Jackson was always able to hold her own. The cards:

COZY DOLAN AND MILLER ARRESTED BEFORE GAME

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—Jack Miller, shortstop, and Albert Dolan, left-fielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, were arrested at their hotel here today and later were held under bail for further appearance on the charge of assault and battery preferred by William Gasper of Pittsburg.

Manager Huggins of the Cards was much worried when he learned that two of his best players had been locked up, but he hurried around and got both Miller and Dolan out in time for them to play in their double-header with the Phillies.

Peers, Kling, Cunliffe, Marsh and Foote were among the old grads who opposed the 1914 aggregation. The scrimmage was held on the Soldan campus. Coach Kelly switched his men about from time to time, merely working with the idea to see what brand of material he had out. Forty candidates reported.

Central and McKinley squads held long signal drills on their respective campuses. About 30 gridders turned out at each workout. Kicking, passing, running down punts and falling on the ball also received places on the day's program.

Manual Training School will open practice tomorrow afternoon on the school campus, under the direction of Coach Homer Thomas. Manual opened school last Monday but was unable to give the call for the gridders owing to scholastic duties. Almost an entirely new team will have to be made up owing to the large number of last year's men who graduated.

School starts at Smith tomorrow, and it is thought that the call for football players will be issued in the middle of the week. Smith also suffered from the June graduation.

Pittsfeds Get to Watson and Groom for 13 Hits and Win, 10—3.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 19.—The St. Louis Federals made their first appearance here under the leadership of Fielder Jones today, and demonstrated that it takes a team to make a good manager by losing to the tail-enders, 10 to 3, in a game featured by weak pitching on the part of the visiting twirling force and also failure to follow up advantages granted them by Knetzer, the home pitcher, who walked seven of the Sloufeds.

Watson started to work on the mound for the St. Louis team, and inasmuch as he was hard to beat when with the Chifeds, some surprise was manifested by the fans when the Rebs got gay with his portside delivery in the second inning and nicked him for four hits and three runs. Jack Lewis took the heart out of him when he hit the ball to the center field fence for a homer, then followed hits by Berry Delehanty and Savage that produced three runs.

He got through the next inning all right, but gave way for a pinch hitter in the fourth, when Bob Groom took up the task of keeping the Rebels from scoring. He succeeded in shutting them out without a hit for three innings, but in the seventh the beans were spilled and when the smoke of battle had cleared away the Oakes bunch had garnered five more tallies on six hits, and Groom vanished. BRAVES FAIL TO SHAKE GIANTS AS RACE NEARS END

Both Teams Victorious Yesterday, "No-Hit" Davis and Tesreau Pitching Successfully.

YESTERDAY'S National League results, with Boston and the Giants winning, while the Cards frittered away what remote pennant chances might have remained to them, make it practically certain that either the Braves or the Giants will win the flag.

Only the complete collapse of the two leaders could encourage even the wildest of hopes on the part of the two Western clubs. History contains no instances of leading clubs suffering a breakdown of such consequence so near to the finish.

New York's hopes are still strong, though the club is today three games behind the leaders, with only 19 more games to play. The Braves far from weakening, have grown stronger.

During the coming week Boston has a comparatively easy time, facing the broken Pirates, the hopeless Reds and weakening Chicago Cubs. The Giants face the Cubs and Pirates, but also get the Cardinals, who may cause McGraw trouble.

At present the Braves are showing the best spirit and the best baseball in the League. Odds of 3 to 2 are offered in some quarters that the Braves win the flag. World's series wagers of 11 to 6 on the Athletics to beat Boston, if the Braves capture the National flag, are in evidence.

Gov. Tener Sees Braves.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 19.—Gov. John K. Tener of Pennsylvania, president of the National League, was one of the nearly 20,000 spectators who came out to see the Braves mix it with the Pittsburg Pirates today. Boston won an easy victory by a score of 9 to 3, making seven of its runs on Cooper and Conzelman in the sixth inning.

At that time the Pirates were leading, 3 to 1, and a gain of a full game for the Braves seemed imminent. Never was a dream more rudely shattered.

George Davis, Stallings' latest sensation, who pitched a no-hit game last week, took the mound for the Boston crew and was fairly effective, although Pittsburg got him for three runs in the second round. He was benched to make a way for a pinch hitter in that terrible sixth, and Lefty Tyler held the enemy at bay for the rest of the afternoon.

Wagner Starts Rally.

The Pirates got busy in the second, after Viox walked and Konetchy had flied out. Old man Wagner lined a single to left. McCarthy flied to Whitted, then Coleman walked, filling the bases. Cooper beat out an infield hit to Smith, and Viox scored. Two more came across the plate when Carey's Texas leaguer bounced away from Whitted.

The Braves got one back in their half when Collins dropped Maranville's short right-field fly and the latter tallied on Gowdy's single over third.

After Whitted was out in the sixth, Schmidt bounced one at Viox and beat the throw to first. Smith and Maranville walked. Hank Gowdy, who is pasting the pill like a wild man these days, lined one to the left-field embankment, scoring two. Dugey batting for Davis, shot a single over second, scoring Gowdy. Conselman then went in and got Moran on a fly to Kelly. Evers' single, however, put Dugey on third, and Joe Connolly stepped to the plate in place of Cather. He doubled to right, scoring Dugey, Evers taking third. Whitted's single scored the other two runs and the latter went out in an attempt to steal second.

Hank Gowdy's third hit, a single, scored another run in the eighth.

They're Still at It.

VETERAN ATHLETES AT J. E. SULLIVAN'S FUNERAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—James E. Sullivan, for more than a decade the dominant figure of American athletics, was buried in Calvary Cemetery, Brooklyn, this afternoon. The funeral services were held in St. Aloysius Church, Manhattan. Hundreds of men and boys in every walk of life attended.

Along the mile the funeral train traversed from the Sullivan home to the church the streets were lined with school boys. Fifty medal winners in public school athletic events marched before the hearse, carrying an American flag, draped with black. Twenty-eight honorary pallbearers, all of them notable in the field of athletics, marched behind the hearse.

Many veterans of the athletic field with whom Mr. Sullivan competed in his prime more than 20 years ago were in the cortege.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—Manager Stallings of the Boston Nationals last night announced that Pitcher Burke, a left-hander from the semi-professional ranks in Philadelphia, had been signed for next season.

WESTERN N. L. TEAMS WIN ONE OUT OF 19

IN the intersectional series now being fought in the National League, the Western teams are making the most miserable showing of the season. Out of 20 games played they have succeeded in winning one and tieing another. The Cubs rescued from a complete calcimine bath by winning a 10-inning game from Brooklyn Friday. Jim Vaughan pitched it.

The Cards came close when Bill Doak held the Braves to three hits and gained a tie, 1—1, in 12 innings.

This is considerable upset. The Phillies now have won seven straight and may yet dislodge the Cardinals from first division. Cincinnati has lost 14 straight.

20,000 See Giants Win.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—More than 20,000 fans saw the Giants beat the Cubs here this afternoon, score 5 to 4. The Giants made seven errors, but Tesreau saved the day by holding the Cubs to four hits. Tesreau was a bit unsteady in the first inning, the Cubs scoring three runs on two bases on balls, a two-bagger by Zimmerman, an out and an error by Fletcher.

The New Yorks also made three runs in their half of this inning by bunching two doubles, a base on balls and a single off Pitcher Hageman.

McGraw's men took the lead in the third inning with Hageman still in the box by scoring twice on a base on balls, a single, a hit batsman, a force, a steal, a wild pitch and a single.

In the ninth inning, with two out, Saier hammered the ball into the grandstand for a home run, his eighteenth this season.

Nine St. Louis Golfers Have Sent In Entries to State Golf Event

St. Louis will be well represented in the Missouri State golf championship tournament to be held at the St. Joseph (Mo.) Country Club, between Sept. 30 and Oct. 3. Nine local golfers have already entered, but according to Bonner Miller, there will be some 18 or 20 St. Louisans who will play in the tourney.

Those who have already sent in their entries are T. B. Boyd, C. J. Harbaugh, Jesse L. Carleton, Christian Kenney, Glen Echo; Bonner Miller, Andrew McCreery, Eddie Limberg, Sid Overall, Triple A, and Albert Bond Lambert Country Club. It is expected that the Stickneys, Edmunds, Potter, Rosen and other members of the local trust will also be on hand.

Besides competing in the individual play, players representing Triple A, Country Club and Glen Echo will play in the team competition. Each team is composed of four men.

Local golfers are looking forward to a big year at the State meet. Eddie Limberg is the local favorite. Limberg is the present city champion. Chris Kenney, who will also make the trip, won State honors in 1909 and 1910. Raymond Thorne of Kansas City is the present champion.

LOCAL FOOTBALL SQUADS SWELTER IN SUMMER HEAT

PIKEWAY SQUAD STRONG

Although the mercury floated around the 80 mark yesterday, and the weather was more fit for baseball than football, local gridiron squads did not let up in their daily training routine. St. Louis and Washington held double sessions, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, while Christian Brothers College held but an afternoon practice, but made up for lost ground by holding a lengthy scrimmage. Local high school squads also utilized the off-day to a good advantage.

Washington's main workout came in the morning, some 32 candidates turning out for the a. m. session. Punting, passing, falling on the ball, besides a long signal drill was in order, Coach Edmunds driving his men hard. Assistant Coaches Krause and Thomas were also on hand. Thomas had charge of the scrubs while Krause took some of the linemen in tow. The afternoon workout did not have quite as large an attendance as several of the members of the squad had to take exams. It was merely a repetition of the morning practice. Several freshmen turned out and immediately reported to Assistant Coach Thomas. Edmunds expects quite a large number of the first-year men Monday. The first scrimmage will be held then.

Edmunds Likes His Prospects.

The Pikeway squad has not been at practice for one week, the opening workout coming last Monday. Edmunds has seen his charges long enough to know what they are worth He is elated at the prospects of a winning eleven. When questioned as to his opinion of the squad, he said:

"There are a number of good men in training, enough to turn out a team that Washington may be proud of. Compare this year's squad with that of 1913. Last year at no time did I have more than 16 eligible men. Most of the time it was 12 or 13. Now I have 30 and expect 40. The heaviest eleven that I could put in the field last year averaged 154 pounds. One that I have in mind right now tips the beam at 168. Some difference.

"My backfield? Yes, I do think a great deal of it. Milford at [illegible] was at full, with Potthoff and Martin as halves, then I have a number of first-rate subs. Last year I did not have a line, this year a surplus of material. Here are a few of the men: Gray, McRoberts, Wright, tackles; Graham, Kammerer, Woernner, guards; Wetzel and Jehle, centers; Metlage and Berry, two last year ends, will be back Monday. Wright, Graham, Kammerer and Woernner weigh around 180. The others are also heavy. Washington may not be the greatest team in the West, but it will be an improvement over last year and it will take care of its schedule."

Busy Day at C. B. C.

Although four of Coach Ward's best looking gridders were out of the lineup yesterday, because of injuries suffered in scrimmage Friday, the purple and gold squad put in one of its best afternoon's work since it returned from Glencoe. The scrimmage was fiercely fought and the linemen especially showed up well. The first squad lined up with the second and proved to be entirely to strong for the scrubs.

The hospital list at C. B. C. is now six strong. Shea, Willett, Diver, Brenton, McCarty and Hart are the regulars on the shelf. Shea suffered a slight injury to the spine in Thursday's workout, but will be back Monday. Diver, while making one of his diving tackles, was kicked in the ribs, but will also get back next next week. Willett sprained his hand in practice Friday and may be out for a few days. Brenton, the big lineman is out with a torn ligament; Hart is suffering with a dislocated shoulder, and McCarty is just recovering from recent illness. So it may be seen that Coach Ward's kickers are well bruised up.

Ward Picks Regular Team.

Patterson, the slight halfback, has been the big show behind the line of late, while Walter Essman and Ahlstrom have been the defensive demons. From the way the men have shown in practice to date the probable lineup against Illinois, Oct. 3, will be as follows: Diver and Hart, ends; Shenk and W. Essman, tackles; Ahlstrom and Brenton, guards; C. Essman, center; Gallagher, quarter; Shea and Collins, halves; Rodgers, full.

No more morning practice sessions will be staged at the college, as the faculty claims that it interferes with tent. In fact, it was stated that this was the last year of the A. M. workouts. Coach Ward will scrimmage with his men the next two weeks, as he does not care to schedule a game before the Illinois contest in order to go up to Champaign with an unknown team.

Billiken Squad Still Coming.

Twenty-two men worked out under Coach Koegan at St. Louis U. campus yesterday morning, while about ten came out for the afternoon practice. Signal drill and some practice at the fundamentals were in order. Scrimmage will be taken up Monday and continued throughout the week until the Freshmen eleven is played next Saturday. The freshies are in charge of Johnny Maguire.

Keogan expects quite a bunch to reinforce the squad this week. The dental school opens Oct. 1 and should boost the Billiken stock. Kelley, the 175-pound halfback from Detroit University, will arrive today and be on the campus tomorrow. Morris, the 215-pound guard, Snobe, last year's 220-pound center; Donnelly, a 165-pound lineman; Stanislav, 180-pound tackle, and Nugell, another husky tackle, will also be on the job Monday. Keogon expects to have a heavy line with a light and fast backfield. Joe Schloemer is his coaching assistant, while Captain Nyquist and Thomas, two of last year's vets, are also helping to break the newcomers.

Avery Brundage Wins All Around Athletic Title

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 19.—Avery Brundage, Chicago, won the national all-around amateur athletic championship here today, with a total of 6999 points. Gilbert Ritchie, Birmingham, was second, with 6743½ points, and Patrick O'Connor, New York, third, with 5729 points. SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 19.—Bob Burman broke the world's record today at the Illinois State Fair when he traveled 20 miles in 17:10 3-5 and 25 miles in 21:17 3-5. These records for a circular track were formerly held by Louis Disbrow, who made 20 miles in 17:57 at San Jose, Cal., and by Barnes, who did 25 miles in 22:07 at Portland, Ore. Burman also broke the one-mile track record, making the mile in 40 4-5s.

CORBETT TO TOUR WORLD; DROPS HIS RING HONORS

No Longer Does He Bill Himself as "Ex-Heavyweight World's Champion."

By Harry S. Sharpe.

James J. Corbett who, 22 years ago the seventh day of this month, became champion of the world by his defeat of the then reigning monarch of the ring, John L. Sullivan, has grown weary of discussing past and present champions of the squared circle. Everywhere he goes the same old question is shot at him and then appears the same old interview he has been giving out for years, different in wording, of course, but in substance the same.

"The public has been told so often what I think in this particular that it has ceased to be good reading, I imagine," said the man who is no longer billed as "Ex-Heavyweight Champion of the World," but unostentationsly as "James J. Corbett."

Corbett, who at 48 looks as young and symmetrical in form as when 10 or more years younger, is now on tour of the world. He goes to Australia, thence to India and perhaps through the war zone of Europe, if the fighting is done by next July, when he expects to reach there on his return.

When informed that the Post-Dispatch did not want any of the time-worn stories that have grown frazzled and uninteresting, Corbett settled down to a recital of some of the "inside stuff" of his own career and, in doing so, corrected some impressions created by stories that had but little foundation in fact.

Corbett Kills Sandow Yarn.

"Take, for instance," said Corbett, "the story of some years ago that I had boxed Sandow, the strong man, in private and made a dunce of him. That story was printed in the East as having happened on a roof garden in New York City. As a matter of fact, the incident upon which it was based took place right here in St. Louis.

"Soon after I had won the championship from Sullivan I came to this city to keep an engagement at one of the local theaters. Sandow was in town the same week and an interview with him contained the statement that, while he (Sandow) had no notion of posing as a fighter, still, if he was of the mind, he could lay me across his knee and spank me to death. Can you imagine that? Me with a newly acquired title of 'Champion of the World,' and in the same town with a man who said he could spank me across his knee, and some people more than half willing to believe he could do it!

"One evening I was told that Sandow was taking supper with a party of friends on the upper floor of a popular St. Louis cafe. I went there and sent word that I would like to see him downstairs. Instead, his manager came down and tried to explain away the incident. This didn't suit me at all and I told him to tell Sandow that if he would come downstairs and deny that he had said what was attributed to him, there would be no fight; but if he didn't I was going to wait outside and take a wallop at him.

Handshake, Not a Fight.

"Upon my promise not to hit him, Sandow came down and, after many denials and apologies on his part, we shook hands, and that was the end of it. Someone who had been a witness to what had taken place must have told the story and added something to it, and that is how the tale originated that I had given Sandow a beating with the gloves.

"Another yarn easily exploded is the story that when I met Bob Fitzsimmons and his manager, Martin Julian, in New York City to sign articles for our championship fight, I appeared dressed in a sweater and fighting shoes because I wanted to be prepared to take care of myself, in case there should be trouble. Nothing of the sort. While I may have been expecting trouble, I didn't dress for it.

"Now that story originated in the natural belief that there would be trouble when Fitz and I met because for a year many newspaper writers had been attributing remarks made by both of us reflecting upon the other. I remember seeing in big headlines, 'Fitz Threatens to Thrash Corbett on Sight.' And this was followed by another one: 'Corbett Vows He Will Tweak Fitzsimmons' Nose.'

How Trouble May Start.

"I don't know whether Fitzsimmons said his, but I DIDN'T say mine. Anyhow, this and a lot of other things were printed that were stirring us to anger more and more all the time, until at last I guess we were each fighting mad at the other.

"One day we met in Philadelphia. Theatrical dates conflicted and we found ourselves showing at rival playhouses in the same town for a week. I was stopping at one hotel and Fitz at another. One evening in the latter part of the week I was approached in the cafe of the hotel where I was stopping by a friend who whispered somewhat excitedly that Fitzsimmons was at the office and about to register as a guest.

"To me that was a challenge—the 'call to battle.' That he should have the nerve to come where I was stopping looked to me like seeking trouble.

"All my life I have been of aggressive temperament, and in time of fight I believe in beating the other fellow to it. That first punch, you know, often takes the confidence out of a man; and then, if he has no real courage to back up his confidence, you have him licked. So nothing more natural than that I should head at once for the hotel office.

Bring On the Constables!

"Walking straight to where Fitzsimmons stood, I said to the clerk:

"'Why don't you register for him? He can't write.

"Until that moment Fitzsimmons didn't know I was standing there and when he looked up, my presence was so unexpected that he stepped back several paces, and then began pouring out a torrent of abuse. I followed in quickly and gave his nose a good pull. He came right back at me for a pull at mine. Then we were separated and kept apart. It is laughable now, but it created a lot of excitement then.

"Shortly after this incident Martin Julian, on behalf of Fitzsimmons, challenged me to battle for the championship and the largest purse obtainable, $10,000 to be deposited by each side to bind the match and the same to stand as a side bet.

"I agreed to these terms and we met in New York City to sign articles of agreement. Now here is some 'inside info' that the public didn't have and will, no doubt, be surprised to hear now: All that Fitzsimmons and Julian had of the $10,000 they were supposed to bring was $1000. I could have blocked the match right then and there, if I had cared to; but I was anxious to make it and agreed to place my $10,000 against their $1000 and make the match, so that Fitzsimmons could go out upon the theatrical circuit with added prestige and earn the necessary $9000 to make good his side bet. I was confident of my ability to beat him, and was never so desperately anxious to whip any man in my life. We fought at Carson City, Nev., on March 17, 1897, and I lost. Over-anxiety cost me that fight and the title. Fighting spirit superseded the calm and deliberate judgment of science and in the fourteenth round I threw caution aside and tore in to finish him. Then I received the one fatal punch, and the title changed hands."

Jack Johnson Still Is American Citizen, His Russian Passport Shows

LONDON, Sept. 19.

GIVING the lie to stories that he has taken out French naturalization papers, Jack Johnson visited the embassy today and said he was a citizen of the United States. He received a passport to travel in Russia.

Johnson was cross-examined severely, but he persisted that he had never dreamed of expatriating himself. He denounced as a newspaper invention the statement that he was a Frenchman. He showed a passport obtained from American Minister Herrick in Paris six months ago which now has expired. He was in Russia a few weeks ago, then in Berlin and Paris, whence he came to London.

Johnson drove up to the embassy in a big limousine. He was accompanied by his white wife, her maid and his managers and trainers. He is going to Russia to fulfill theatrical engagements which he entered upon long ago. His wife will accompany him. Her diamonds so dazzled the clerk he scarcely could see to write the passports.

Oldfield After Three Records at Today's Meet

Woman Driver Will Also Try to Lower Auto Record at Maxwellton Track.

St. Louis will be placed on the world's sporting map more strongly than ever today, if Barney Oldfield succeeds in his only official attempt this year to regain the world's one-two and five-mile dirt track records, which were made recently by Louis Disbrow at Maxwelton track. Barney will send his 300 horsepower Christie front-drive car after the mark today at Maxwelton, in conjunction with the St. Louis mile track championship events which were postponed from Labor day. There are 10 regular racing events on the program, with 18 cars entered in the various classes.

Lincoln Beachey, one of the most famous aviators now flying, will also give four exhibition flights in addition to racing against Oldfield. Beachey will destroy a large imitation battleship by dropping bombs on it. He will loop the loop in his aircraft and fly upside down.

Graham to Defend Title.

A 25-mile free-for-all race is the feature speed event for St. Louis cars and drivers. Seven cars will face the starter in this race. Fred Grinham will pilot his Packard car and defend the St. Louis championship title which he won recently.

Mrs. Harry G. Johansen will drive her Stutz racing car against time for a woman's world's record for one mile. She also will drive in two three-mile races against Miss Ethel Dawson in a National speed car.

The electrical timing device from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway was brought to St. Louis yesterday by T. E. Myers and installed at the track to catch the time on today's events. The races will start at 2:30 o'clock.

AMERICAN LEAGUE BATTING STRENGTH SEEMS OVER-RATED

National League Cast-Offs Bat Among the Leaders in Johnson Circuit.

One of the queer things about the batting figures of the American League of recent weeks has been the fact that Hoblitzell and Mitchell, formerly National League players, were able to hit up there with the first 10 slugers of the race.

In the National, Hoblitzell and Mitchell were not hitting a lick and were considered so undesirable that they were waived by the entire League. Since joining the American, Hoblitzell has been slugging the ball around .350 for several weeks, while Mitchell has been doing better than .300 for the same period.

Some critics take this to mean that the hitting and pitching in the American League have been overrated in efficiency.

The averages this week show 11 hitters in the .300 class. They are Cobb, Detroit, .375; E. Collins, Philadelphia, .348; Jackson, Cleveland, .347; Hoblitzell, Boston, .347; Speaker, Boston, .328; Cree, New York, .327; Crawford, Detroit, .321; Baker, Philadelphia, .319; McInnis, Philadelphia, .316; C. Walker, St. Louis, .307; M. Mitchell, Washington, .306.

Athletics Hitting Hard.

Philadelphia and Detroit continue to lead the League in club batting with figures of .270 and .255.

The home run honors remain with Baker, Philadelphia, who has nine. Maisel of New York leads in base stealing with 62, while E. Collins of Philadelphia is pressing him with 55.

The National League leading hitters are Ralton, Brooklyn, .328; Daubert, Brooklyn, .324; Becker, Philadelphia, .321; Wheat, Brooklyn; S. Magee, Philadelphia, and Connolly, Boston, tied with .311; C. Miller, St. Louis, .308; Stengel, Brooklyn, .305; Phelan, Chicago and Wingo, St. Louis, tied, with .304; Grant, New York, .302, and G. Burns, New York, .300.

Saier Hits 17 "Homers."

Vic Saier, Chicago, leads as the home run king with 17, while the honors for base stealing go to G. Burns of New York, who has 52.

American League pitchers who lead their League are: Bender, Philadelphia, with 15 and 3; Leonard, Boston, 19 and 5; Plank, Philadelphia, 15 and 6.

The Boston club of the National League has the leading pitcher. He is James, with 24 and 6. Rudolph, his teammate, has 22 and 8; Doak of St. Louis is 19 and 6.

Manager Bill Hinchman of Columbus, who goes to Pittsburg, remains at the head of the batters in the American Association with .364, closely followed by Kirke of Cleveland with .349. Then come Titus, Kansas City, with .345; Killifer, Minneapolis, .344; Altizer, Minneapolis, .343; Griffith, Indianapolis, .338; Rath, Kansas City, .332; Lake, Minneapolis, .330; V. Clemons, Louisville, .328; while Sereveid of Louisville and Livingstone of Indianapolis are tied with .322.

Felch Slugs the Ball.

Felch, Milwaukee, leads in homers with 17 to his credit. The leading base stealer is Compton of Kansas City, who has 51. The three leading pitchers are Northrop, Louisville, 23 games won and 9 lost; La Roy of Indianapolis, 12 won and 5 lost; Gallia, Kansas City, 23 won and 10 lost; Minneapolis leads in club batting with .278, with Kansas City next with .273.

Kauf Is Feds' Wonder.

Bennie Kauff of Indianapolis is the daredevil of the Federal League in both batting and basestealing. He leads the batters with .369, with Evans of Brooklyn pushing him hard, one point behind. Kauff's basestealing mark is 61 Following the topnotchers are Rousch of Indianapolis with .343, Easterly, Kansas City, and Chase, Buffalo, tied with .342; Lennox, Pittsburg, .331; Bradley, Pittsburg, .324; Shaw, Brooklyn, Crandall, St. Louis, and Campbell, Indianapolis, tied with .317.

Home run honors go to Zwilling, Chicago, with 13 circuit drives. Indianapolis leads the club in batting with .285.

The leading pitchers are Hendrix, Chicago, with 26 won and 9 lost; Ford, Buffalo, 17 and 6; Kaiserling, Indianapolis, 15 and 8; Seaton, Brooklyn, 22 and 12.

CENTURY CLUB REGATTA LAST OF LOCAL SEASON

The regatta will close the local rowing season with the exception of the barge race, which is to be held on the Mississippi River during Veiled Prophet's week under the auspices of the Fall Festivities Association. The Century Boat Club on that day will enter the winning crew at today's regatta.

Buffeds Win Again.

WRAY'S COLUMN

About This "Class" Thing.

SEVERAL weeks ago, when the Boston Braves were in the midst of their dash toward the pennant, almost every player and club manager among the contending teams snickered a little whenever the Boston team's prospects were mentioned. "The team LACKS CLASS," was the follow-up literature on the giggle.

"Class" is an Americanism that has developed in the thoroughbred barns of the country. Paraphrased, the term means "high class." And further than this it means, when applied to any performer, animal or man, ability of the designated one to do his, her or its best under pressure; and to do it a little better then than at any other time. CONSISTENCY is the foundation rock of class.

The "Dope" on the Braves.

ACCORDING to this view, the Boston club certainly HAS the class. Since it "found" itself it has performed regularly to its top notch. When challenged it has responded a little better than at other times. It has, in two critical series, looked the three-time winners of the league—the Giants—right in the eye and has backed down the enemy. Three times this season, since both clubs became pennant factors, the Cardinals have challenged the Braves when victory for the St. Louisans meant the setting back of the Boston hopes, and three times the Hubites have utterly overwhelmed the Cards.

McGraw a False Prophet.

CONTRARY to the advance judgment of John McGraw, instead of flinching under fire they tightened their defense and added a punch to their attack.

The best evidence of their consistency is the fact that they have won about 20 one-run victories in the last two and one-half months and have come through from behind on many occasions.

In short, the team instead of lacking class, has come through with every requirement of gameness.

Were it not for the fact that the National League has been so discredited, the team would now be hailed as a real rival of that remarkable team, the Athletics, and a worthy one.

As it is, the Braves are still being quoted at about 2 to 1 against, in the advance booking on the world's series, contingent on Boston and Philadelphia victories in their respective leagues.

Will It Be a Walkaway?

ANOTHER thing: In order to admit that the Athletics are going to run over the Braves, one must admit the hopeless weakness of the National League, by comparison.

Even then the superiority of the Athletics must be considered conservatively. For, since finding themselves, the Braves have run over the National opponents as if they were standing still, playing for their third month, now, at the remarkable rate of .775 for the entire period.

How much better than that could the Athletics do? The best spurt of the Athletics this year was a streak of 40 games, during which the team won about 34—a truly remarkable record. But it was not sustained. The club has been vulnerable, as shown in the consistent beatings it has suffered at the hands of the Red Sox.

All in all, it's a bit dangerous to count the Braves out, as a world's series championship possibility, even while admitting the superiority of the Athletics in that essential of game-winning, base-hit making.

Tough on Those Giants.

IF the Giants come through in the National League, as now seems probable, there'll be one large pall hanging over the Polo Grounds, about the close of the season. The reason is found in the semi-official announcement that THERE WILL BE NO FALL SERIES IN NEW YORK.

There is no doubt that some of the players on the Giants' string were stanch in times of Federal temptations, owing to an expectation of participating in another world's series slice. Failing in this, a city championship share for a New York series would amount to a pretty sweet plum, under ordinary conditions.

Deprived of both, the players may have to mortgage a few six-cylinder machines to linger through the winter. For there is no doubt that some of the men gambled on futures and spent more freely of their earnings, in expectation of cashing at least a loser's end in the big series.

Our Own Fall Series.

THE best home series that has been played in many years, in point of interest, should materialize when the Cards meet the Browns this fall. The followers of "class" figure that a sixth or seventh place club in the American League is as strong as a second place team in the National— which is going some, for expertness.

On this basis the Browns are being made favorites to win from the Cardinals. As a matter of fact, it is believed, along more conservative lines, that if the Browns win it will be due to some very high-class left-hand pitching which Hamilton, Weilman and Leverenz are expected to deliver.

No Consistency Here.

HERE are two teams WHICH HAVE THIS SEASON SHOWN THAT THEY DO LACK "CLASS." The Cards have chucked it every time the situation was ripe for them to do something toward clinching a real pennant position. The Browns have fluctuated from good to bad and worse, and then back again, with unguessable irregularity.

The pitching of both clubs SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN OVERRATED. And a man-for-man comparison yields nothing but doubt. This is one series that is safe from prognosticators—it is impossible to hazard more than a guess at its finish.

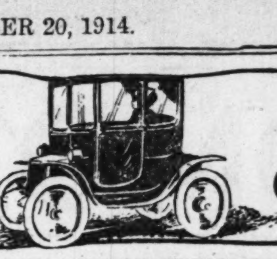
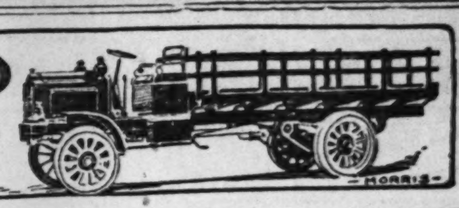
AUTOMOBILE NEWS.





TO TAKE MOVIES OF AUTO SHOW AT HIGHLANDS

Plans for First Exhibit of 1915 Models in St. Louis Include Many Novelties.

The Show Committee of the St. Louis Automibile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association, which is putting on its eighth annual automibile show, has made arrangements for a series of motion pictures of the show. These pictures will not only advertise the show, but the marvelous growth of the automobile industry in St. Louis and the enthusiasm of the public. The great crowds of modishly and elegantly gowned women and well groomed men attending the show, will speak volumes for the prosperity of the city.

The St. Louis automobile show is the only al fresco show in the world and is the largest automibile show given by an association of manufacturers and dealers. It is second only to the national show held in New York and Chicago—in which the exhibits are by the manufacturers. The rapid and substantial growth of the automobile industry in St. Louis is due to the co-operation of the principal dealers and manufacturers who form the association. It is through this united effort that the St. Louis autumn show has always been a tremendous success.

This splendid co-operative spirit made it possible for the St. Louis manufacturers and dealers for the past four years to display the new models three months in advance of the New York show. This advance showing of the new models each year has been an important factor in the development of the St. Louis automobile industry. The large Eastern manufacturers recognizing that the open fall and winter season of the great Southwest and South—the natural trade territory of St. Louis—made a long motoring season possible, have made special efforts to get their new models ready for the St. Louis show.

Unusual Accessory Exhibit.

The increased demand for space in the accessories department indicates that this display will far surpass all previous shows. Several of the local dealers have induced the manufacturers to make displays of their special lines. The accessories department will be located in the long pavilion leading from the main entrance to the cottage. One of the attractive features of this display will be a complete line of automobile clothing and motoring toggery, attractively displayed on manikins. This will be an innovation in the automobile shows, as it will be the first time that such an exhibit has ever been made.

While the exhibitors of automobiles are very secretive as to what they will show, it is rumored that there will be several surprises in automobile construction. One rumor has it that there will be an 8-cylinder automobile, manufactured by one of the leading manufacturers of the country, which is said to be novel in its construction.

To Show Many Delivery Cars.

The commercial car exhibit, which will be in the open and in the concession booths, will include 35 different makes of light and heavy trucks, fancy delivery wagons with panel bodies.

The signs for each exhibitor are arbitrarily uniform but artistic. It is a shield, the field of a deep cream, with letters of green, and the design in colors which harmonize with the foliage decorations of the show. The signs are mounted on lattice work, which will be ontwined with Southern smilax.

Owing to conflicting dates, the exhibitors' ball has been changed. The ball was scheduled to take place Thursday evening, October 8, but the show committee waived this date in favor of the big public ball, which will be given at the Coliseum on that date, and the exhibitors' ball will take place Friday evening, October 9, in the big ball room of the Hihglands. Admission by card only. The hours will be from 10:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. Arrangements will be made for special car service.

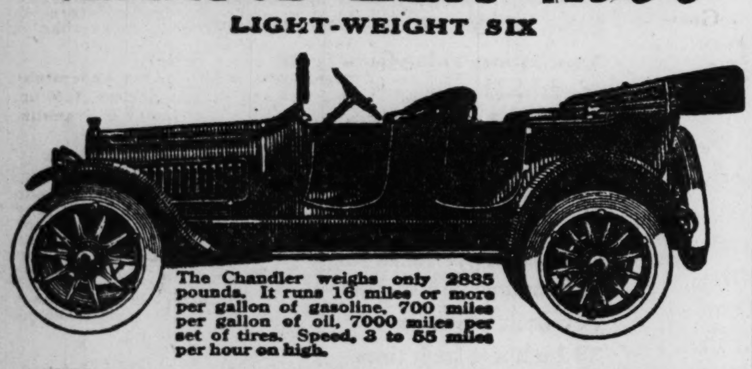
Light Weight With Extreme Strength

CHANDLER $1595

LIGHT-WEIGHT SIX



The Chandler weighs only 2885 pounds. It runs 16 miles or more per gallon of gasoline, 700 miles per gallon of oil, 7000 miles per set of tires. Speed, 3 to 55 miles per hour on high.

YOU hear a great deal of talk from certain interested quarters about the "danger" of sacrificing strength in building light-weight cars.

Well, they have to talk about something.

Now, what's the truth about this question? Is it really necessary—as some would have you think—that a car of average size, 120-inch wheel base, should weigh two tons or more?

Is it really necessary to use heavy cast iron parts when the very best engineering practice proves that aluminum or pressed steel serve better and with much less weight?

No, it is not necessary!

The Chandler Light-Weight Six has proved that greatest strength, greatest safety, can go hand in hand with light weight.

Modern engineering has accomplished this.

The Chandler has gone to a production of thousands without the development of a single mechanical weakness.

Chandler owners all over the country have proved that extreme strength and the very maximum of safety are built into the Chandler. Still it weighs only 2885 pounds, fully equipped.

The Chandler offers you light weight backed up by the broadest experience in six-cylinder construction. It offers you everything in smooth-flowing flexible power and in comfort and in beauty of design that the highest priced sixes can offer, but without the expense of unnecessary weight.

Come in and study the Chandler carefully. Come see the "MARVELOUS CHANDLER MOTOR," the EXCLUSIVE Chandler Motor. Come drive this Six. You will thrill with the STRENGTH that is in it. The profit-sharing price for the new 1915 models, touring car or roadster, is $1595.

OLDFIELD TO TRY TO LOWER RECORDS IN ST. LOUIS TODAY

Eleven years ago, when "a mile a minute" was deemed almost as impossible as flying with a heavier than air machine, a California youth hurtled through space around a mile dirt track at the dizzy space of 59 seconds a mile in an automobile.

Eleven years ago the public predicted that this same youth eventually would shake dice with death once too often in his time-annihilating flight and pay the penalty for his lust for speed.

Eleven years ago Barney Oldfield cut down the mile-a-minute speed limit one second in the Winton Bullet, a motor car, which has since been famous wherever motor racing has been known. Despite the prediction that Oldfield soon would meet his death by constantly tempting Fate, Barney still lives and has succeeded in clipping 13 more seconds from his original Winton Bullet record.

Today, at Maxwelton track, this same Barney Oldfield will make an effort to lower the present mile track record of 46 1-5 seconds, made at Maxwelton recently by Disbrow. Oldfield declares that Maxwelton track is the fastest dirt mile course in the world, and that if a motorcycle can turn the track in 45 seconds he can send one of his monster motors around the circuit in 44 seconds.

Oldfield has brought his Flat Cyclone car, specially built for mile track speed work, to St. Louis and will, if possible, establish new records for the one, two and five-mile distances.

In order to make these record trials official, the St. Louis Auto Racing Association has obtained the Warner Horograph from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. This is an electrical automatic timing device which records time down to one, one-hundredth part of a second and is the only official timing apparatus recognized and approved by the contest board of the American Automobile Association.

"I have been informed," said Barney yesterday on his arrival, "that the Maxwelton mile track is faster than any other circuit of the kind in the world. If the track is in proper condition tomorrow, I will set a world's mark for one, two and five miles that any other driver in the world never will touch until faster cars than those of the present age have been built."

Oldfield is sincere in this as he would not agree to come to St. Louis until the timing instrument was obtained. In addition to Oldfield's appearance in his record drives Sunday, the 10 automobile races scheduled for Labor day, but postponed, will be run off, including a woman's world's championship drive for the one-mile record by Mrs. Harry G. Johansen of St. Louis in her special Stutz racing car.

Lincoln Beachey, the aviator who first succeeded in looping the loop and flying upside down in an aeroplane in America, will be the feature of the Sunday's program. Beachey will make three flights in addition to driving a race against Oldfield and destroying a battleship with bombs dropped from his aircraft. The program will start at 2:30 o'clock.

HUDSON PRODUCES 100 CARS A DAY

During the week ending September 5, the Hudson Motor Car Co. built and shipped exactly 600 cars. This was an average of just 100 per day for the six working days. None of the men worked overtime. There was no rush, and no attempt at making a record. It was just the normal, regular output.

The record for August, which was over 1700 cars, promises to be smashed in September. The factory plans to ship from 2700 to 3000 cars before October 1.

This tremendous output is necessitated by the flood of orders which has poured into the factory in an unceasing stream since the 1915 model was announced two months ago. And still there are thousands of unfilled orders in dealers' hands.

Mr. J. H. Phillips, the local Hudson distributer, characterized this as a most optimistic sign of the confidence of the American public in the stability of prosperity There seems no disposition on the part of any buyers to become panicky over war conditions. Things move along as serenely as though the entire world was at peace. This feeling of security grows more marked day by day.

INTEREST IN ST. LOUIS SHO

F. W. A. Vesper of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., just returned from several days spent in Kansas City, where he went to arrange for the exhibit the Buick company will make at the Missouri State Fair, to be held next week at Sedalia.

Much interest in fairs is reported, and automobile exhibits are on the increase, for as a general thing, the bulk of the fall buying is done by the farmer who has completed his year's work, and is receiving some of the returns on his crops.

The Buick Co. will also have a big exhibit at the Illinois State Fair at Springfield, as well as to be represented in a large space at the St. Louis Auto Show on the theater stage.

Mr. Vesper reports a great deal of interest in the St. Louis show by the Kansas City dealers, a number of whom will pay the show a visit, for it is the first of the shows where all the 1915 models will be on view.

IOWA MAN BOUGHT CAR ON MISSOURI PLAN

Although many motor car dealers claim that the day of the demonstration is over in selling automobiles, the "show me" spirit still prevails to a great extent west of the Mississippi.

A letter to the Lewis Automobile Co. of St. Louis says that Peter Stillmucker, wealthy business man of Dubuque, Io., recently visited Cedar Rapids in the same State, to see some old friends, among them John Moore, Chandler dealer in that city. Stillmucker is no novice at motoring, having owned several cars, but he exhibited keen interest in Moore's statement that he could drive the hilly 74-mile stretch between Cedar Rapids and Dubuque withoue once changing out of high gear.

"I don't need a new car," replied Mr. Stillmucker, "but if you will drive this or any other machine to Dubuque on high gear, I'll buy it the moment we arrive there, regardless of the amount of gasoline used. It can't be done."

Moore accepted the proposition and the start for Dubuque was made immediately. Dubuque County hills have a more than local reputation, and Mr. Stillmucker withheld his opinion until the last hill was negotiated and the car rolled up the main thoroughfare of Dubuque.

The Chandler Six made the 74-mile stretch in two hours and 50 minutes, without once changing out of high gear. Mr. Stillmucksr immediately bought the car and drove it back to Cedar Rapids himself, without changing from high gear. During the round trip the car traveled 148 miles and consumed eight gallons of gasoline at a total cost of 98 cents.

TO RUN 100 MILES IN LOW GEAR ONLY

Accompanied by two official observers, a Franklin air-cooled touring car is to be made to do an unprecedented stunt next Thursday. The car will be driven by Joseph B. Dryer of the Franklin Automobile Co. of St. Louis and he will keep it in low gear for 100 miles. In addition to this the motor will not be stopped at any time during the test.

The start will be from the Automobile Club at 8 a. m. and the finish at whatever point the car reaches at the finish of 100 miles.

Every Franklin dealer in the United States will make the same test on Thursday to demonstrate to the public the efficiency of the air-cooled motor, the claim being made that it will run cooler at low speed than in high.

WORLD DEMAND TURNS TO AMERICAN GOODS

"Should these times alter our advertising policies?" "Yes," says R. D. Chapin, president of the Hudson Motor Car Co.

"We think so. We have, in the face of the largest business we have ever done and with a greater quantity of orders on hand than we ever had, increased our advertising appropriation for September from $22,000 to $54,000. Our October appropriation has been increased to $60,000. We have notified all our dealers that we will share with them one-half of whatever amount of newspaper advertising they care to do.

"America is the only manufacturing nation in the world not at war. The United States is the only nation at peace in the world with a supply of food on hand in excess of her own requirements. Our crops are more bountiful than ever before. Our factories have never participated largely in world-wide commerce. We have helped to feed and clothe the world, but we have never been large factors in supplying the world with manufactured goods. What we have taken from the nations now at war has been our luxuries, not our necessities.

"Our wheat has been shipped to Europe to be ground by European mills into flour which in turn has been shipped to other countries for consumption. American cotton has been shipped to England and Germany, there to be spun into textiles that were returned to America and shipped to other countries. The copper from our mines has been shipped to Europe, there to be made into wire and into electrical machinery, which is then shipped to the Orient, South America and other places where we have secured no place in the world trade.

"Aside from a few specialties such as typewriters, adding machines, cash registers, etc., we are producers and dealers, so far as the world is concerned, in raw products.

"Custom in the use of any article makes it difficu to establish new goods. For that reason America has not been able to get even a fair snare of South America's trade. Now that competition is unable to deliver the goods needed in these foreign markets, those who formerly would not consider our wares are begging us to supply them

"No matter how soon war may be terminated, damages have been done to the scheme of manufacture and distribution that cannot be repaired until after America will have had an opportunity to change the buying habits of nations that have given us slight consideration in the past.

"If advertising means planting the seed for new and greater business, then now is the time to do it, when the timid, through being less aggressive, make your advertising more productive, and when the keenness of the public for news increases the value of the advertising pages."

WILLYS TO BUY A BALE OF COTTON FOR DEALERS

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 19.—In an effort to further the national campaign recently started to better business conditions in the cotton belt of the South. John N. Willys, president of the Willys Overland Co. has purchased a bale of cotton for each of the 400 Overland dealers in that section of the country. Mr. Willys has also declared his intention of buying an additional bale of cotton for each Overland car purchased during the two months ending Nov. 17 and also trying to persuade all of the prominent concerns in the Rice "Leaders of the World" Association to forms some similar plan.

Armour & Co. have purchased 700 cotton bales for their southern agents. The Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Co. and many others concerns of national prominence have bought a bale for each of their southern agencies.

The plan is to have every American who can afford it purchase a bale of cotton at 10 cents a pound, says Mr. Willys in explanation of the idea. "This amounts to $50 a bale, which gives the growers a small profit. If these bales were sold at the present market price, they would go for much less. The South is simply making a straightforward business proposition in which the business men of the entire country are asked to co-operate.

$930,000 Per Week Paid for Hudson Cars

$235,600 in One Day

By Individual Buyers

The day before this is written—September 15—the sales made to users on the HUDSON Six-40 were 152 cars. That is, yesterday buyers of new cars paid out for HUDSONS $235,600.

The average for the past four weeks is $930,000 per week—because that is the limit of output. We are building and selling 100 per day. That is five times as many—five times, mark you—as we sold at this season last year.

And we had no war then—no talk of war's depression. Our average sales have more than trebled since this war began.

That Means That Hudsons Rule This Field Today

But in July—when we brought out this new model—we trebled our output to cope with demand. Yet on August 1—despite our best efforts—we were 4000 cars oversold.

We shipped by express nearly 1000 cars to minimize delays. That's an unprecedented act. But thousands of men waited weeks for this car, when every rival had cars in plenty. Nothing else could satisfy a man who once saw this new-model HUDSON Six-40.

Five-Fold Increase an Amazing Thing

Consider this fact: The HUDSON has long been a leading car. Every model has for years been designed by Howard E. Coffin.

In the HUDSON car Mr. Coffin has brought out all his new advances. And the demand for his models—long before the advent of this HUDSON Six-40—gave HUDSONS the lead in this field. The first HUDSON Six, inside of one year, became the largest-selling Six in the world.

Think what a car this must be—this new HUDSON Six-40—to multiply that popularity by five in one year. And to do it at a time like this. Think how far it must outrank all the cars that compete with it. Think what tremendous appeal it must make to car buyers.

Think what a car it must be when, in times of slow sales, men pay $930,000 per week for it. And they would pay more if we had the cars to deliver. They yesterday bought at the rate of 50 per cent more cars because 152 cars arrived.

See the Car That Did It Howard E. Coffin's Best

Come now and see this model—the car whose record is unapproached in the annals of this line. You will see a quality car sold at a price which is winning men by the thousands from lower-grade cars.

You will see a class car—in many respects the finest car of the day—which is sold at one-third what class cars used to cost.

You will see how clever designing and costly materials have saved about 1000 pounds in weight. And in this light car—the lightest of its size—you will see one of the sturdiest cars ever built. You will see a new-type motor which has cut down operative cost about 30 per cent.

You will see new beauties, new ideas in equipment. You will see new comforts, new conveniences—scores of attractions you have never seen before.

They are all in this masterpiece of Howard E. Coffin, who has long been the leading American designer. This is his finished ideal of a car—of the man who is conceded to be final authority.

Mr. Coffin has worked for four years on this model. And the whole HUDSON corps has worked with him—47 able engineers. Part by part, every detail of this car has been brought to its final refinement.

This is the coming type. This lightness, this beauty, this economy, this price are new-day standards which men are demanding. And this quality—Howard E. Coffin's level best—is the least that men who know will take.

Come This Week—Sure Now's the Time to Choose

This is the time to pick out your new car. Next year's models are out now. You have seen what the field has to offer.

If you buy a class car, this new HUDSON Six-40 is the car you'll want. The exclusive features which have won such an avalanche of favor are bound to appeal to you.

Come now, because the best touring months are before you. Don't miss the bright, cool Indian Summer days. Get your new car and enjoy them.

We won't keep you waiting. We will see that you get the car when you want it if we have to ship by express.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

NEW CADILLAC'S MOTOR TO CARRY EIGHT CYLINDERS

An official announcement to the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis from the Cadillac factory at Detroit, sets at rest all rumors as to the 1915 production of that company. The next Cadillac car is to have eight cylinders, set V shape, and it will have other unusual features. This is the first eight-cylinder automobile ever produced in this country, except experimentally, and the Cadillac company has tested it and claims it is as near perfection as an automobile can be on Sept. 20, 1914. Here is a quoted statement from the company:

"Building and experimenting in turn, with every type from the single cylinder to the six, and from the poppet to the rotary and to the sliding valve, we have been carried forward to the highest form of frequent impulse motor—the V-type eight-cylinder.

"The principal advantage of the eight-cylinder engine is, of course, its continuous torque, and continuous uniform generation of power. There is no pause or lapse between power impulses, of which there are eight in each complete cycle of the engine, four to every revolution of the crankshaft, or one every quarter turn. The firing alternates from side to side. The continuous torque produces an almost utter absence of vibration, at both high and low speeds."

"The cylinder dimensions of the new Cadillac engine are comparatively small—3⅛ inches bore and 5⅛ inches stroke—yet in repeated tests by dynamometer an excess of 60 horsepower has been registered.

"The cylinders are cast in two blocks of four cylinders each, with water jackets, combustion chambers and intake manifold integral. The cylinder blocks are mounted on the crank case at an angle of 90 degrees to each other, from whence the designation, "V-type."

"The cylinders are of the L head type, with all valves on the same side of the cylinder blocks.

"There is but one crankshaft, the conecting rods of the cylinders opposite each other being jointly attached. One camshaft with eight cams is employed, positioned directly above the crankshaft, driven by a silent chain from the crankshaft and operating the valves through a series of rocker arms provided with hardened steel rollers. The exhaust valves are flat head type, made of Tungsten steel, and the inlet valves are tulip shape to facilitate the intake of gas.

"The crankshaft is 1⅞ inches in diameter, of special chrome nickel alloy steel, supported by reinforced bronze, babbit lined bearings of liberal proportions. Its length is but 26 1-6 inches between the outer ends of the forward and rear bearings, thus overcoming the periodic vibration or thrashing almost sure to result where a long crankshaft is used.

"A multiple disc clutch is employed and the motor and transmission are mounted as a unit, the two rear points being bolted to the frame and the forward joint taken care of by a ball and socket joint.

"Details of the car include left drive and center location of the gear change and hand brake levers, wide doors, lighting and ignition switches located conveniently on the cowl board and a pedal button in the floor for bringing the electric device into action.

"The advent of the new car naturally has created extraordinary excitement all over the country and the feeling in the trade echoes in a large measure the expression of W. C. Leland, general manager of the Cadillac company, quoted as saying: "'We believe the eight-cylinder is destined to change completely the current of motor car design and manufacture.'"

GOOD AVERAGE IN COLE

As the automobile increases in efficiency each year a better average mileage each hour is made over the roads by tourists. The improved condition of the highways throughout the country also plays an important part. Recently a 1913 seven-passenger Cole six-cylinder touring car made a run of 35 miles from St. Louis to Allentown, Mo., in one hour and 15 minutes. This is an average speed of slightly more than 28 miles an hour. The return trip was made in practically the same time. According to the driver the car made a perfect showing on the trip.

BUILT MILLION HORSE VEHICLES LAST YEAR

The forty-second annual convention of the Carriage Builders' National Association will be held in Atlantic City, N. J., September 28 to October 2. More than 1200 persons will be in attendance, comprising carriage and wagon manufacturers from every section of the United States and Canada, as well as a large number engaged in the making of the different parts and materials, such as bodies, axles, springs, leather, varnish, etc., used in the construction of carriages and wagons.

It may be surprising to some of our readers, in view of the great popularity of automobiles, to know that the production of buggies and carriages in 1913 exceeded 1,000,000, and that this figure does not include business or farm wagons.

There are at least $35,000,000 invested in the buggy and carriage business in this country and the retail value of last year's production was somewhere in the neighborhood of $60,000,000. Notwithstanding the automobile there is still room for a great deal of optimism in the vehicle industry, and it will be an enthusiastic body of manufacturers that will meet in Atlantic City during the last few days of September.

MOTOR CAR TWELFTH AS CAUSE OF FATALITIES

"Neither this country nor any other nation in history has ever lost in any period of war one-half as many killed and wounded per annum as our present loss of life from accidents in time of peace," says the Coroner of Chicago, Peter M. Hoffman. Referring to automobile accidents, which he credits with having aroused the public safety movement, he observes:

"The number of automobile fatalities is but little more than the deaths which for years have been caused by horse vehicles, less than half the number killed by street cars, one-fourth the steam railway fatalities, one-sixth the number of suicides and one-fifty-fourth of the premature deaths from all causes in Cook County in 1912.

"Automobile accidents occupy tenth place in both 1912 and 1913, and this, in connection with the fact that there are but 12.6 accidents to every 5,000,000 miles of travel as against 26.55 accidents to every 5,000,000 miles that horse vehicles travel, should aid the public in drawing their conclusions as a more accurate basis than has been the custom in the past."

WILL SHOW NEW LINES

The St. Louis automobile manufacturers will be well represented at the Automobile Show of St. Louis. Among the exhibits will be one which is most interesting owing, say the builders, to it being the only automobile which is completely manufactured in the City of St. Louis.

This exhibit will be that of the Dorris Motor Car Co., which has one of the largest and most up-to-date automobile manufacturing plants west of the Mississippi River and the only one in which both pleasure and commercial cars are manufactured.

The Dorris Co. has exhibited at every automobile show since the first one held at the Jai Alai Building in 1908, and each year has shown a marked improvement in product.

A very large new addition has been added to the Dorris Co.'s plant to take care of the larger demand for their cars and the success of its commercial cars has also required larger space for the manufacture of big trucks.

A complete exhibit of both pleasure and commercial cars will be held at the St. Louis Automobile Show and some cars of particular interest will be shown.

TIRE MEN MEET AT AKRON

The third week in October will bring with it another of the annual sales conventions of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. Over 250 men will be called in from the firing line, which extends from coast to coast and into many foreign countries. It is expected that a number of the foreign representatives will be at the convention.

Since the company has completed their large, new factory in 1910 there has not been a time when additions were not under construction. The visiting representatives will be pleased to find that the same is true this year, 95,000 square feet additional floor space having been added since last October. It will be gratifying to them to know that the expansion is due largely to their valiant work in the field.

MANY SEEK AGENCY

"In the first nine days of Septembor we received 898 separate requests for sales rights from dealers," says George C. Hubbs, assistant general sales manager of Dodge Brothers, Detroit. "This brings the total number received up to 7652, representing a good proportion of the entire number of dealers in America."

Careful tabulation kept of the dealers' requests show that Ohio leads, with 654 letters; Michigan next, with 58 missives, and the following in order; Pennsylvania, 462; New York, 442; Illinois, 348; Indiana, 324; Texas, 241; California, 231. Over 200 dealers' requests from Canada and 175 foreign applications have been received.

ALL-WINTER AUTOMOBILES

Though the Studebaker line includes no closed models, dealers are being furnished with coupe bodies, which can be mounted on almost any chassis, thus providing an opportunity for a year-round outfit for any owner desiring it.

MOTOR ROLLS THE TOP

New inventions for the comfort and convenience of the owner and driver of the motor car keep coming with great regularity, and Indianapolis is not without some honor along these lines. Now there comes to the front a young man with an idea for a mechanically controlled, rolled top for the automobile. Here will be luxury, for the one bane of the motorists life, outside of repairing a puncture, is to be compelled to get out and put up the top in the rain.

For two years William Kootz has been working on this idea of the motor controlled top and last April he obtained a patent on his product. Kootz is a German and has been in the United States but a few years, coming in December 1910. He was technically trained abroad and has had much practical experience.

Mr. Koots purchased a Cole Little Six recently for use in demonstrating his top. In explaining his purchase he said that he had worked on Cole cars and found the Northway motor to be well fitted for his purposes. He also asserted that Secretary Morrison of the Cole company had made it possible for him to work on his idea when he loaned a 4-G Cole body to the inventor for experimental purposes.

WANTS UNIFORMITY OF CITY TRAFFIC SIGNALS

Uniform traffic and speed regulations in cities throughout the country will be urged by motor car manufacturers at the next convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, if there is no miscarriage of a plan being promoted by Henry H. Hower of the F. B. Stearn company.

Hower started the new movement when Louis Rich, composer of "Elektra," was arrested in Boston for speeding 22 miles an hour and was chased by police from Broadway, New York, for traveling only two miles an hour.

A touring motorist encounters any number of difficulties and hazards unlimited arrests through the irregularity of speed and traffic regulations in various cities.

In Cleveland, O., and Louisville, Ky., motorists must listen for the shrill whistle of the traffic policeman before crossing some streets, and other corners are regulated by colored light signals.

In Detroit, white lines running six feet from street car tracks mark a safety zone where passengers get on and off. Motor cars dare not encroach on the space. Chicago traffic is controlled by shrill whistles of traffic police.

"A motorist will break traffic ordinances in nearly every city he visits," says Hower. "With uniform regulations it would afford proper protection to both pedestrians and motorists."

CYCLE CAR BUILDERS FORM ASSOCIATION

Active organization work has been inaugurated by the Cyclecar Manufacturers' National Association. At a meeting held in Detroit, July 5, at the time of the International Cyclecar and light car race meet, F. Ed Spooner was elected secretary and instructed to open an office at 903 Free Press Building, Detroit, and to secure an adequate office force to carry out the work. Organized last January at Chicago, the manufacturers' association has been quiescent during the development stages of the industry and the makers, feeling the necessity of concerted action, reached their decision to push the combined interests of the industry through the organization, with unanimity and the utmost enthusiasm. Two vacancies in the board of directors were filled by the election of W. Irving Twombly of the Twombly Motor Corporation of New York and W. C. Lumb of the Flagler Cyclecar Co. of Sheboygan, Mich. The appointment of a contest committee to confer with representatives of the Contest Board of the Cyclecar Association of America, consisting of Malcolm Jones of the Malcolm Cyclecar Co. of Plymouth, Mich.; W. Irving Twombly of the Twombly Motor Corporation of New York and W. C. Lumb of the Flagler Cyclecar Co. of Sheboygan, Mich., was another step taken.

INCREASE 100 PER CENT

An increase of 100 per cent in actual shipments of Moon cars in September, over September of last year, is predicted in a statement issued by Stewart McDonald, vice-president of the Moon Motor Car Co. McDonald bases his statement on the shipment of the first two weeks in the month and the orders that have already come in to be filled in the remainder of the month.

"We ascribe this great September rush largely to the addition of the four-38 and six-40 to the 1915 Moon line. These two cars have found a ready-made market in the light car field. The six-50 continued from last year is also making gains. The early start in getting out our demonstrators this year has also been responsible for the early increase.

TRAIN LOAD OF RUBBER

The largest quantity of high-grade crude rubber ever received in New York, and then shipped in train load to any one firm, left New York Wednesday over the B. & O., its destination being the factory of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., at Akron, O. Forty cars were in the train, and before leaving Staten Island, where the train was made up, the cars were decorated with banners bearing this inscription: "Finest Grade Crude Rubber, for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, O."

The Minnehaha, sailing from London, which brought much of this crude rubber, carried the largest rubber cargo in the history of the industry.

TO SELL PARTIN-PALMER

C. G. and H. L. Harrington of St. Louis have taken the agency for this city and territory for the Partin-Palmer car, built by the Partin Mfg. Co. of Chicago. They are located for the present at 7278 Ann av., Maplewood. The Partin-Palmer touring car, 6-passenger, sells for $975, or with starter for $1075, and a special roadster is built to sell at $495, with $75 added for starter.

HAD HEARD OF DODGE; COME TO SEE PLANT

An incident taking place during the big G. A. R. convention just closed in Detroit, affords a striking example of the value of "word of mouth" publicity. R. L. Stoddard, a salesman for a Detroit printing concern, was driving his car up Woodward avenue, when he was approached by an aged Civil War veteran with an inquiry as to the location of Dodge brothers big plant.

"Down in Massachusetts, everyone's talking of the new car that Dodge brothers are going to bring out this fall," said the veteran, who gave his name as S. H. Gardner of Brocton, Mass. "I'm going to buy a car next spring and I want to see the plant where Dodge brothers are going to produce their new car." Mr. Stoddard called up Dodge brothers general offices and a motor car was sent for Mr. Gardner, who in company with his wife, spent several hours inspecting the big factory.

It is said that Dodge Bros. agency has been placed in St. Louis and that Frank R. Tate will head the company that handles it.

TO SHOW BY INVITATION

Because of the number of applications that are far in excess of the available space at the national automobile shows in New York and Chicago, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has voted that the exhibitions in January shall be invitation affairs to which will be invited such concerns in the motor car and accesory industry as can be cared for properly.

Allotment of space will be confined to members of the N. A. C. C. and subject to the rules of that organization, to members of the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers, the Motor Cycle Manufacturers' Association and the Electric Vehicle Manufacturers' Association and to such other persons and companies as may be formally invited by the management to participate.

The fifteenth annual shows will be held in New York at Grand Central Palace, Jan. 2 to 9 inclusive, and in the Coliseum and First Regiment Armory at Chicago, Jan. 23 to 30.

COEY WON FIRST HONORS

America's first light car reliability run, which was held on Sept. 5, 6 and 7, from Newark, N. J., to Atlantic City, via Philadelphia and return, a distance of 350 miles, evolved four perfect score winners out of 19 entries.

The winning drivers and cars were: C. A. Coey of Chicago in a Coey Bear; G. A. McLaren of Newark, in a Twombly; E. H. Riopel of Ridgewood, N. J., in a Zip, and H. Sewars, in a Twombly.

The first day of the run eliminated 12 of the cars, so rough were the roads, and the second day at Atlantic City found but four cars with a perfect score. In addition to the perfect score prizes, Coey won the perfect tire prize offered by the Batavia Rubber Co., going through the trip without tire trouble. He also won the cup offered by the Herroline Co. of Chicago for the smallest gasoline consumption, averaging 35 miles to the gallon.

FORD'S ARMY OF PEACE

The fact that the factory is more than 20,000 cars behind orders for immediate delivery offers another striking proof that the Ford Motor Co., like other great purely American institutions, is not feeling the effects of the great war, so far as the American market is concerned.

However, war news is being followed with tremendous interest in the huge shops at Highland Park. There is a very human reason for this, as the following interesting figures will demonstrate:

In the enormous army of Ford employes the Triple Alliance is represented by 606 Germans, 269 Hungarians, 750 Rumanians, 888 Austrians and 830 Syrians. There are also 81 Turks and 690 Italians and Sicilians. The Triple Entente, on the other hand, has among the Ford workmen 380 English, 133 Scotch, 148 Irish, 226 Canadians, 3 Australians, 2016 Russians, 2677 Poles, 73 Lithuanians, 13 Croatians, 55 Frenchmen, 21 Danes, 6 Belgians, 26 Hollanders, 3 Japanese and 210 Servians.

REPAIR BILL NOMINAL

W. F. Smiley of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has driven his 1912 Kissel Kar 30,400 miles before he had occasion to have a single repair made. Last week Mr. Smiley visited the shops of the Northwest Kissel Kar branch at Minneapolis for a minor adjustment to the shift lever. He declared that he considered his car good for another 10 years.

Of Interest to all Who Plan to Spend $1000 to $2000 for an Automobile

We know that you want to get the best possible car for your money. No man consciously buys a cheap car.

So this advertisement is written to give you a few facts to keep in mind when investigating the merits of different cars.

For seven years Chalmers cars have ranked first among the medium-priced cars in America. For two years Chalmers "Sixes" have led all medium-priced Sixes in volume of sales. Over 40,000 Chalmers cars are now in service.

The Chalmers Company is recognized as one of the strongest companies financially in the industry. Chalmers cars have probably to a greater degree than any other make always influenced the trend of automobile building in the medium-priced class.

Certainly these facts entitle this advertisement to a careful reading.

We expect you to investigate carefully every statement we make here and we urge you also to study all cars which sell between $1000 and $2000, confident that if you do, we will get our share of the business.

In the first place, we ask you to see the Chalmers "Light Six." Don't simply look at it and listen to the story of an enthusiastic Chalmers salesman; and then go look at another car and listen to the story of another equally enthusiastic salesman. You are not buying conversation.

But ask any Chalmers dealer to stand the Chalmers "Light Six" alongside any Light Six selling at anywhere near its price—$1650. Study the cars yourself.

First—Looks. How do other cars compare with the Chalmers "Light Six" in style? The Chalmers has a real streamline body. The flat or merely crown fenders of the other cars have not the grace of the Chalmers molded oval fenders. Chalmers doors are wide and flush fitting. Chalmers running boards are clear.

And don't under-estimate this matter of looks. Half the pleasure of motoring is being proud of your car, and good looks really mean high quality.

Second—See which car is most substantially built. Thump on the body with your knuckles. The metal in the Chalmers body is heavy. It will never sound tin-panny. It is rigid. And because of these qualities its finish wears better.

Test the weight and solidity of the fenders. You can sit on the Chalmers fender and not injure it. It does not vibrate, and after months of strenuous use it does not rattle.

Looks and stability are two of the big reasons why we have been behind on orders for the 1915 "Light Six" ever since is was announced.

Sit in the front seat. Take hold of the gear shift lever and the emergency brake lever. They feel strong and dependable.

And while you are in the front seat test the comfort of the driver. You sit in a natural, easy position. The clutch and brake pedals are easy to reach. Your hands rest comfortably on the steering wheel. Put your foot on the accelerator. You do not have to assume a cramped position, but can operate it easily. The Chalmers accelerator is provided with a footrest. Hundreds of owners of other cars have told us that this detail alone is worth $100 extra cost in a season's driving. Now sit in the back seat. Test its roominess and comfort.

In comfort, the Chalmers "Light Six" is the equal of any car of its size at any price. Many former owners of higher-priced cars now drive Chalmers "Light Sixes"—and they all say comfort was a big factor in their selection of the Chalmers.

Remember, you are buying a car to ride in. You are not always going to drive on asphalt pavement. You are not going to use your car simply for thirty minutes or for five miles. But you are going to ride practically every day for two or three or possibly five years in the car you buy. You are going to travel thousands of miles and over all kinds of roads.

So don't take a mere "demonstration" in any car. Demand a test. Any Chalmers dealer will be glad to take you for a twenty-five or thirty mile trip in the country. He will give you a real test lasting two or three hours—or a day if you choose. Demand this same test of any other car.

And compare what the salesman tells you while you are riding with your own experience. Think about the comfort of the car. Ask yourself if you would be willing to ride twenty thousand miles in that car.

Note how the Chalmers "Light Six" clings to the road. Preferably drive it yourself.

The Chalmers "Light Six" has a big substantial steering wheel. The steering connections are heavy, free moving forgings. The front steering spindles are equipped with Timken bearings. It is free from side sway and easy to steer.

Many "Light Six" owners tell us this 1915 Chalmers "handles" easier than any car on the market. That feature alone has sold hundreds.

And notice too the sound of the motor as you ride along. Notice when you start that the first speed gears don't shriek out the fact that you are in motion.

Ask the demonstrator to drive twenty miles an hour on second speed. Note that both motor and gears are quiet. Pick out some hill and ask the Chalmers "Light Six" and any other car in its price class to go up that hill at fifteen miles an hour.

That long, strong pull of the Chalmers motor has proved one of its most popular features with the motorwise.

On a rough stretch of road notice that the Chalmers feels firm and dependable beneath you and is free of rattles.

The Chalmers medium weight makes it ride like a Pullman car on all ordinary roads. When you drive a Chalmers "Light Six" you feel that your car has the strength to be safe in any emergency. Your own ease of body and mind tells you that its medium weight gives it a comfort that cannot be found in a lighter or flimsy car.

We could build the Chalmers "Light Six" lighter in weight. And if our service to you ended with delivering a car and taking your money, we could make a greater profit by building our cars lighter. For every additional pound of fine steel we put into the Chalmers "Light Six" increases its manufacturing cost.

You hear a lot of talk about flexibility, but very few cars really have it. The real test of flexibility is to start from a standstill in high speed without jerking or jolting; to crawl along at two miles an hour on high; to travel through congested traffic without gear shifting.

All these things you can do in a Chalmers "Light Six."

Look at the rear axle. The Chalmers has a full floating rear axle with heavy pressed steel housing. It is big and strong. Look at the Chalmers torque tube. It is securely bolted to the big, heavy frame on one end and the rear axle on the other end. It takes up all the strains of driving. When you were out on the country road you probably noticed that the Chalmers "Light Six" did not sway from side to side. That is because the torque tube held it rigidly in place.

Look at the wheels. The wheels of the Chalmers "Light Six" have spokes 1¾ inches in diameter. They are built of the best hickory. The spokes are securely bolted. They look strong and they are strong.

Notice the length and width of the Chalmers springs. The main leaf is of Vanadium steel. Note their flexibility—remember how they cradled the car over the bumps when you were riding on the heavy country roads.

Look at the front axle. You will see that the Chalmers "Light Six" has a heavy drop forged front axle that shows its strength at a glance.

Lift the bonnet and look at the motor. It is shipshape, finely finished, compact and business-like in appearance. Raise the floor boards and examine the inside works that you don't usually see in a motor car. You will find the Chalmers "Light Six" simple in every detail, but big and strong to stand the hard knocks of constant service.

Now for the details—the refinements which make motoring a real pleasure or a constant irritation.

To start the Chalmers "Light Six" you throw a single switch. There is no grinding of gears, no noise. You throw the switch and the next thing you hear is the motor purring along under its own power.

Note, too, that the Chalmers starter is always connected with the motor when the car is running. Suppose you accidentally shut off the gas; your Chalmers motor doesn't stall. The starter is always "on the job." There is no interruption of motor service. No levers, buttons or adjustments to fuss with.

You sit behind the wheel of the Chalmers "Light Six" and everything necessary for the control of the car is right in front of you. There is a dash adjustment for the carburetor. There is a simple electric light switch, not a row of buttons to be remembered and to be operated separately; simply a single switch that controls all of your lights. There is the battery index to keep you always informed on the condition of your storage battery. There is the oil pressure gauge that tells if your motor needs oil. There is the primer for starting in cold weather. There is the gasoline gauge always informing you without fuss of the amount of fuel in the tank.

And speaking of gasoline tanks—notice that the tank in the Chalmers "Light Six" is of very heavy gauge steel. And that it holds 18 gallons where most cars carry 10 or 12.

The perfect convenience of the "Light Six" is one big reason this is the fastest selling Chalmers model—with women as well as with men.

Notice the adjustment of the windshield. The one-man top, the quick acting storm curtains, the fine and inconspicuous door handles.

And now you are ready to hear a talk on "econoomy." Some salesman will probably tell you that his car is lighter than the Chalmers "Light Six"—that it doesn't burn as much gasoline; that it is easier on tires.

A part of what he says is true. But only a part; for a lot of this talk on gasoline consumption is just "conversation." Don't test your gasoline consumption for 1 mile or 10 miles—don't test it on the boulevard or with special gasoline. Try it out for 50 or 60 miles and over all kinds of roads.

The Chalmers "Light Six" may cost you $10 or $15 more for gasoline in 10,000 miles of driving than a too light, flimsy car, but it will cost you a lot less in repairs, in personal discomfort, in nerve irritation. You will find that the extra weight of the Chalmers "Light Six" will save you in comfort and repair bills many times the slight additional cost of the gasoline you burn.

What the other salesman tells you about tire mileage is probably greatly exaggerated because of his own ignorance. You will notice that the Chalmers "Light Six" has 4 1-2 inch tires with "Nobby" treads on the rear wheels, where most other Light Sixes in its price class have 4 inch tires.

We have never had a complaint on tire service from a Chalmers "Light Six" owner.

You'll also hear something about prices. You'll be told that you don't need to pay $1650 to get a "light six."

Well, you don't. But if you pay less than the Chalmers price, you must expect to get less quality.

Divide the first cost of your car by five.

Automobiles that are properly built should last at least five years. That is, they should "stay put"—run well and give good service for that time. So when you examine a car in the future and are told how much less it costs than a Chalmers "Light Six," ask yourself, "Will it last me five years?"

Figuring any car you are considering on a five-year basis, see if the facts above don't prove the Chalmers "Light Six" the lowest priced car, quality considered, on the market.

Yes, you are right—we want to sell you a Chalmers. But we don't ask you to buy until you have proved all the claims we make in this advertisement. The only way for you to get such proofs is to see the car itself. You will be under no obligations if you go to see the 1915 "Light Six" and try it out, and you owe it to yourself to know all about this car before you buy any. All we ask is that you give your local Chalmers dealers the opportunity to demonstrate in detail the points of superiority of the Chalmers "Light Six" that we have told you about here.

AUTO ELOPEMENT ENDS IN THE DIVORCE COURT

A suit for divorce, filed in the Circuit Court, Friday, by Mrs. Gladys Smith Heman, daughter of Charles H. Smith, wealthy lumberman, against Alonzo G. Heman, son of August Heman, Mayor of University City, disclosed the wreck of an automobile elopement, which occurred in June last year.

Heman, then 22 years old and a law student at Washington University, was walking from his home at 6261 Washington avenue with his books under his arm, when Miss Smith edged up to the curb in her motor car and invited him to ride. They drove to Clayton and were married. After a trip to Chicago they went to housekeeping at 5900 McPherson avenue.

The bridegroom's mother objected vigorously to the marriage, declaring her son had promised her not to wed until he was 30. Later she forgave the elopers.

The petition alleges Heman was morose and taciturn, and discourteous to guests. He left his wife at home and went out alone to seek amusement, she asserts. He was separated from her last Wednesday, according to her allegation. Her father was formerly Surveyor of the Port of St. Louis.

312 CLIENTS OF STEVENS LOOK UP PROPERTY TITLES

2 APPRAISERS NAMED

Judge Wurdeman, at Clayton, Appoints Men to Determine Value of Assets.

Since the tangled condition of the business affairs of Beverly C. Stevens of 5280 Washington boulevard, real estate dealer in St. Louis County, who was arrested Friday on a charge of embezzlement, became publicly known through the Post-Dispatch last Sunday, 312 persons who have had dealings with him have made inquiries to determine the value of titles to their property.

Two title companies have been employed to make completed abstracts of the title to all the real estate these persons have had in Stevens' hands.

Owing to the extent of the business done by Stevens and the large number of his clients, nearly all of whom visited Clayton last week to inquire about their property, the examination into Stevens' affairs has progressed slowly. It has been shown that in Carondelet township alone, he had handled mortgages totaling $152,000. Of this, $100,000 has been found to be not well secured.

Circuit Judge Wudreman, at Clayton yesterday, appointed Christ Ruehl and Frank Tegethoff as appraisers of the Stevens estate. The appointment of appraisers was requested in a petition filed by the Trust Co. of St. Louis County.

Finds $500 Mortgage on Property.

Another irregularity was discovered yesterday when P. W. Gluck of Gumbo, St. Louis County, went to Clayton to investigate a mortgage of $500 on his property. The mortgage is held by Leonard Zeiss of Sappington St. Louis County. Gluck said he borrowed $1200 from the Stevens firm in 1903, but had paid back the loan within two years. He said he had not known of the mortgage.

Stevens, in an interview last Tuesday, said a great part of his financial difficulties were due to unfortunate conditions of the De Soto Coal Mining & Development Co. of Birmingham, Ala, the greater part of the stock of which he owns.

He said the property was extravagantly managed by Dan Dosenbach, the son of a former sheriff of St. Louis County and that his troubles were brought on by his desire to cover up the errors of other persons.

Company in Receiver's Hands.

Dispatches from Birmingham state that the De Soto company has been in the hands of a receiver since last December and that it soon will be sold by the receiver. It is capitalized for $200,000, of which Stevens owns $180,000 and Dan Dosenbach $20,000. The property consists of 3120 acres of land at Indio, 26 miles north of Birmingham and includes a well-equipped mine.

Involved in the bankruptcy proceedings is litigation over the validity of $69,000 of bonds. Efforts are being made to have the bond issue annulled. In addition to the bonds the company has indebtedness of $30,000. The property has been appraised at $175,000 and the referee in bankruptcy has said that he would not consider any offer to buy at less than $125,000.

Stevens Out on Bond.

Stevens was permitted by county officials to accept service of the warrant for his arrest in the office of the Trust Company of St. Louis County. He furnished a $5000 bond in the trust company's office and was released.

The bond was signed by Sam Arky, a St. Louis professional bondsman, and Mrs. Sarah A. Massey of 5948 Maple avenue, Stevens' mother-in-law. While Mrs. Massey was in Clayton signing the bond her home was entered by burglars who took jewelry valued at $50 and two pairs of men's shoes. The burglars left their shoes in the house.

Former Judge Remained in France a Month to Assist American Relief Committee.

Former Judge Henry S. Priest and Mrs. Priest of 4320 Westminster place, returned to St. Louis yesterday from Paris, where they remained a month after the French army was ordered mobilized, and where he was a member of the American Relief Committee organized by Ambassador Herrick.

Judge Priest said he believed the enormous slaughter of the European war would cause it to be of short duration, and he hoped its final result would be universal disarmament. Like other members of the committee he remained in Paris until all Americans who desired to leave France were supplied with money and transportation home.

He and his wife sailed from Havre Sept. 6 on the steamer La France.

ST. LOUISAN TELLS OF WAR SCENES AS AN EYE WITNESS

Dr. S. A. Weintraub, Home After Year, Had Charge of Royal Hospital in Koenigsberg.

Dr. S. A. Weintraub of 5788 Westminster place, who returned home Friday night after spending a year in Germany, yesterday told of his having been in charge, from Aug. 1 to Aug. 24, of a war hospital in Koenigsberg, the first objective of the Russian invasion of East Prussia. He related stories of heroism and suffering which came under his eye in the eastern theater of the European war. He left Koenigsberg when advised by the American Consul that it was no longer safe to remain.

When war was declared Dr. Weintraub was in the clinic of the Royal University at Koenigsberg, doing graduate research work. As soon as the mobilization order was received all native physicians joined the colors, leaving Dr. Weintraub for two days the only doctor in the clinic, which was at once declared a war hospital by the Government. Dr. Weintraub was placed in charge and physicians of the city who were past the age of military service volunteered to fill out the staff.

Within a week wounded began to arrive. Among the first were two men and a boy, who said they and their families had fled from the Russians, who burned their homes near Gumbinnen and fired on them as they ran. The wives of the two men and the daughter of one were shot down, they said. The boy's right arm was shattered. One man was shot in the thigh and the other in the ankle. Thus wounded, they fled 20 miles until they reached the German lines.

Russian Surrenders, Shoots Captor.

Dr. Weintraub told of a wounded German officer who said he was shot in the hip by a Russian soldier who had surrendered. His command, he said, surrounded a party of Russians, who threw down their swords and raised their hands in token of surrender. One Russian held an unnoticed revolver in his hand and while his hands were still uplifted, the officer said, fired down at him. The officer told Dr. Weintraub he was so enraged he seized a rifle and shot down several of the surrendered Russians before he himself fell.

Another German soldier came to the hospital with a painful wound in his leg. Dr. Weintraub said the daily dressing of this wound caused his patient intense agony and that at times he seemed on the verge of hysteria from the pain. "Then I would tell him," Dr. Weintraub said, "that in a few days he would be well enough to return to the front to fight the Russians. This would calm him, and in many other cases I found this was the most cheering thing I could say to a patient. Many were so anxious to get back in the fight that they insisted on leaving the hospital before they fully recovered."

Dr. Weintraub said he was much surprised at the consideration shown the wounded Russians by the German nurses and doctors. He said they were treated as tenderly and carefully by the nurses and with the same attention by the physicians as were the wounded German soldiers. They often were placed in beds by the side of wounded Germans, but he said they never spoke to one another, or betrayed any sign of recognition. The wounded Russians, he said, at all times maintained a stolid silence.

No Evidences of "Dumdum" Bullets.

German marksmanship, Dr. Weintraub said, is better than that of the Russians, as shown by the character of wounds received by the soldiers. The Russians, he said, were nearly all wounded in the body, while most of the Germans were wounded in the legs and feet. A larger percentage of the Russians, he said, died from their wounds because of their more dangerous nature. Dr. Weintraub said he found no evidences of the use of "dumdum" bullets. Many soldiers came in, he said, with sabre and bayonet wounds received in hand-to-hand conflicts.

Among the nurses in the hospital, he said, were many of the most prominent society women of the city. One was the daughter of the Burgomaster and another was the daughter of a German General. A German Baron, whose name Dr. Weintraub did not remember, came to the hospital to learn to nurse, because he was physically disabled for army service.

There were 200 beds in the hospital and these were full all the time. Those slightly wounded left after a few days' treatment.

A daily sight in Koenigsberg, following the declaration of war, was a German squad marching Russian civilians, arrested as spies, to prison. The day following the opening of hostilities, he said, 100 Russians were arrested, and persons who inquired about the disposition of them were told, "They went away." The Russian Consul at Koenigsberg and his wife, were arrested and the German officers claimed they found papers of great value to the Russian Government in their possession. The Consul and his wife were buried and it was said they committed suicide.

The inhabitants of Koenigsberg were in daily fear of the Russians. As night came on, Dr. Weintraub said, the women and children would congregate in the streets and scan the horizon. Suddenly they would hear the whir of a Zeppelin as it encircled the city on the lookout for Russian aeroplanes and they felt safer. Throughout the night powerful searchlights pierced the heavens as a guard against night attacks from Russian aeroplanes and gave an added feeling of security to the inhabitants. Dr. Weintraub said these lights were removed to new positions daily and they are of such size that they have to be take apart and the pieces hauled separately. Four horses were required to haul the batteries for one light.

Dr. Weintraub said one day he treated three German soldiers for heat prostrations. They belonged to regiments in which each soldier carried an ax, a shovel and a saw, in addition to his guns and other equipment.

The pitiful condition of the noncombatants was impressed on Dr. Weintraub when he left Koenigsberg for Berlin, he said. The train of 40 coaches was packed with destitute women and children fleeing from the border provinces. At every stop, he said, the train was met by women with coffee and sandwiches for the sufferers.

He remained only a short time in Berlin, but while there he said he noticed excellent care was being given to all wounded, Germans and the enemy alike. The hospitals, he said, are well equipped and the very best physicians and surgeons are giving their services to relieve the suffering.

MONEY COMBINES OF HIGH ECONOMIC VALUE, T. R. SAYS

WICHITA, Sept. 19.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, upon arriving here from St. Louis today, delivered an address before a State meeting of Progressives, hurried away to Hutchinson, where he made a speech tonight, and will jump thence to Kansas City for a speech there Monday night. From there he will go to Lincoln, Neb. Further speeches in this State have been forbidden by the Colonel's physician.

Col. Roosevelt discussed problems of capital and labor in his speech here, and talked of the Colorado mine strike as showing the failure of the State and national governments to enact and enforce effective laws, and of the New Haven Railroad scandal as an example of capital gone wrong in the absence of proper governmental control.

He asserted business is entitled to its profits and we must learn to accept the principle of combinations of capital as of the highest economic value. This acceptance, however, he asserted, must carry with it a fair share of the profit to the employe. He quoted "Mr. Dooley" in saying "Jefferson was a good man, but he lived before the days of open plumbing."

Col. Roosevelt to Speak in St. Louis at Armory, Friday, at 9 p. m.

After a tour of Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois, Col. Roosevelt will be in St. Louis next Friday night to speak at the Armory, Grand and Manchester avenues. He will speak in East St. Louis at 8 p. m., and will go from there to the Armory, speaking at 9 p. m.

Col. Roosevelt passed through St. Louis Friday evening on his way to Kansas. He was met at Union Station by a big crowd of his political supporters.

The Flag of Quality—

Firestone

Tires

Real quality—such as made Firestone tires famous—belongs to no place and is subject to no conditions of war or peace. There will always be the same extra measure of quality rubber in Firestone Tires and Tubes.

Firestone quality is a question of the Firestone O.K. on material and product. This is only given when the tire meets the high standard of Firestone perfection.

Don't be confused by hysterical claims. Don't be misled by bargain appeals. Ever since motor cars have been running, Firestone Tires have delivered most miles per dollar.

That's a fact. Ask Firestone users. Your dealer has Firestones—or can get them at once—at the same price as ever.

No-Rim-Cut Tires

Needless Tire Troubles

Rim-Cuts—the chiefest tire troubles—are utterly needless. They are ended completely—in a faultless way—in Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

Blow-Outs, in large part, are due to wrinkled fabric. Our "On-Air" cure eliminates this cause. This exclusive Goodyear process costs us $1500 daily.

Loose treads we combat by a patent method. Hundreds of large rubber rivets are formed in each tire, reducing this risk 60 per cent.

Punctures are minimized in our All-Weather tread. It is tough and double-thick.

Skidding is best combated by this same exclusive tread. The grips are sharp, deep, resistless. Yet the tread is flat and regular. It runs as smoothly as a plain tread.

Save These Losses

Save the avoidable troubles. Get all the safety, strength and mileage that you can. Then you have the utmost in a tire.

That is what Goodyear gives you. In the five ways cited, no other maker offers what we give.

The result is that Goodyear leads. No other tire commands such prestige or such sale.

And our matchless output enables prices which few makers meet.

Tires are not alike. Only one tire made offers these great Goodyear features. Get it. Learn what it means to you.

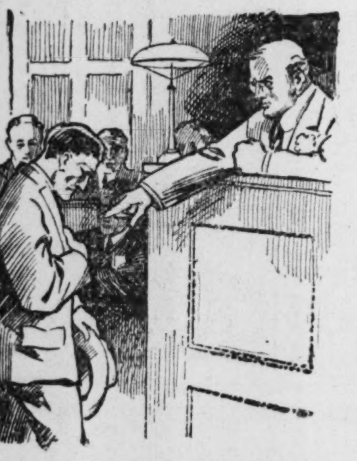
Disgusting

Catarrh Victims Fearfully Nauseating to Those Who Are Near Them.

The Positive Cure for Catarrh Is the Gauss Treatment—A Free Trial, To Prove It, Is Sent to All Who Write for It.



"You Are Sentenced to Deportation, Society Cannot Put Up With Your Filthy Catarrh Habits Any Longer."

That is what most people would like to say to the man or woman who suffers from this abominable disease. It is not because society does not pity the poor victims, for it does, but because disgust is so much stronger than pity that it outweighs it.

Of course, the poor victim cannot help the catarrhal practices that so nauseate everybody else—they are a part of the disease from which he suffers—but it is simply impossible for the average healthy man or woman to overcome the disgust that he or she feels at having to witness such unspeakable exhibitions. Neither friendship nor love can rise superior to these sights, sounds and odors that revolt in spite of all attempts to check the revulsion. The victim becomes a social outcast, despite all his or her good qualities, simply because it is a trial to everyone else to have him or her in the vicinity.

Much may be borne, for the sake of politeness, and from a feeling of pity, but seldom, indeed, does one leave the presence of a catarrhal unfortunate without heaving a sigh of relief at being again in the pure sweet, undefiled air, away from obnoxious, breath-odors, and out of sight of those symptomatic habits that turn the stomach sick.

Most pitiful of all is the fact that so many of these catarrh victims do not recognize that they are objects of disgust to all around them. They do not smell their own breaths and do not, therefore, know how offensive they are. No one tells them, because no one wants to hurt their feelings. The catarrhal person doesn't notice his own acts in clearing his throat, blowing his nose and spitting, because he is so accustomed to these things, and they are so necessary to him that he pays no more attention to them than he does to his breathing. Everybody else notices them, though, and everybody else wishes they didn't have to notice them.

These catarrhal practices, both pitiful and disgusting, are enough to make even the members of one's own family breathe a sigh of relief when the door closes after the victim.

Love itself wavers and disgust forbids the kiss. And out of regard for the afflicted one, little mention of his pollution is ever made to his face, and he must rely on his own misery and such plain talk as is contained in this page to reach him and to cure him. There is a cure for this pestilence within the reach of everyone. It was not always so. Catarrh has raged fiercely through the years like a firebrand, and in the eagerness to quench it many useless things were given out as cures, but it remains now after the slow process of experimentation and discovery to offer the positive real cure, which has been born of ceaseless searching and common sense.

Thousands Praise Gauss.

This is Gauss' Combined Treatment for Catarrh. The story is told over and over again a thousand times of the lost birthright to health restored, of the happiness caused, of the release from a degrading pestilence and of hope and comfort and sleep returned by the use of this wonderful simple Gauss treatment. It must be true. There are heart stories from all over the land that bubble up from gratitude. They tell as nothing else can the misery in which catarrh plunges, the danger it brings, the deaths it causes, and then again there are other pictures painted in these letters of happiness and health redeemed, lost energy restored, and ambition reclaimed.

SEND THE COUPON

If you are a catarrh victim, don't allow yourself any longer to be avoided by your friends because of your catarrh atmosphere, to be an object of nauseous disgust among strangers, to have people you know turn their faces away from you when you talk to them, to have people move away from you and stick up their noses as you sit next to them, to have your own family hate to have you come around—all because of the catarrh odor that everywhere and always makes you an outcast.

Gauss' Combined Treatment for Catarrh, stops bad catarrh breath right off short and quick, and cures every catarrh germ in the body. If a man or woman will spend comparatively little time and money it takes to cure catarrh by means of the sure Gauss Treatment, the little coupon at the corner of this page will be cut out and sent flying toward Marshall, Michigan, with the patient's name and address on it. By return mail you will be sent the Gauss Treatment absolutely free for you to try and prove to yourself its great power. If you are a sufferer of catarrh, send coupon below today to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main street, Marshall, Michigan, and get back a trial package of the treatment that positively cures catarrh.

Sniffler Chased Out of Meeting

Enraged Audience Roughly Handles Gagger Who Interrupts Speech.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 19.—During a public primary meeting here today, a middle-aged man in the audience who was fumbling a rolled up handkerchief in his hand and persistently sniffling and pulling his nose during the delivery of a speech, was forcibly ejected from the assembly hall. Cries of "Kick him out" and "Choke the lobster" interrupted the proceedings, and finally resulted in a grand rush for the nose-puller by some of the enraged hearers. He was grabbed by the coat collar and unceremoniously and swiftly moved toward the door.

When the man first sat down and began loudly tearing out a throat-hawk, the audience shifted nervously. After continuing the draw-rattle of his catarrh through one of the most stirring parts of the speech the audience gave vent to its feelings. He was roughly handled on the way out, and sustained several severe bruises. He was taken to the county hospital.

It is such occurrences as these which make the catarrh victim one of the despised of his race. He can't help but show his disease. If this man had simply spent a few moment's time to send to C. E. Gauss for a package of the wonderful Gauss Catarrh Treatment, he never would have suffered such an indignity as being kicked out of a public meeting.

Catarrh Kills Thinking Power

Catarrh anywhere in the head or throat or ears is right next to the brain. The catarrh germ grows fast, does an enormous amount of damage in its burrowing into bone and flesh and is difficult to destroy. There are thousands of little nerves that run from all parts of the face and head to the brain. Some of these little nerves have to pass through probably a mass of catarrhal inflammation on the road to the brain. When they do they are weakened; and sometimes destroyed.

What affects the nerves is bound to affect the brain, and when the nerves are deadened by constant catarrhal discharges there is bound to be a certain torpor or stupidity brought about in the brain of the victim. Thus follows sleeplessness, inability to think clearly or to connect ideas, loss of memory, lack of concentration, lack of presence of mind, and a wandering thought.

When it takes such a comparatively short time to cure this terrible disease by the Gauss common sense treatment, and regain the flash and brilliancy of the normal brain, there is no good reason why one should not spend the two or three minutes it takes to cut out the coupon below and send it to C. E. Gauss and have him prove to you that he is right, and that he positively cures catarrh. The coupon below mailed now will bring you back by return mail a package of the wonderful Gauss treatment. It costs you absolutely nothing. Address C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main street, Marshall, Mich.

Thought Wife a Consumptive

Your catarrh medicine is a wonderful medicine. My wife had it so bad everyone thought she had consumption. She used to cough all night, and could not sleep at all. One doctor gave her up. He said she would not get cured if she stayed here. I have tried all kinds of medicine and found them no good, till I tried yours, and it acted right away. I recommend it to all my friends. You may mention my name if you please and they can write to me and I will let them know how bad my wife was with catarrh. But she is a well woman once more. W. Thomas, 936 Talman Ave., Chicago, Ill.

C. E. GAUSS,
Sole Proprietor.

What I have done for thousands of others I will do for you. I offer you my treatment THAT WILL CURE CATARRH free of charge.

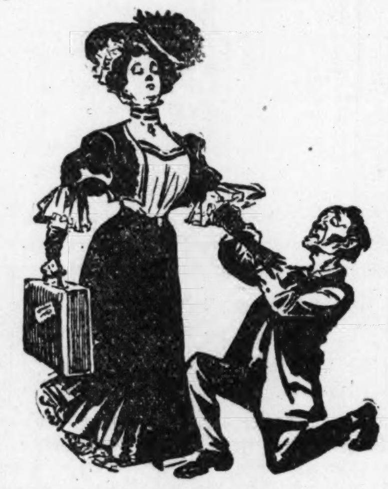
I can do no more—the matter lies entirely with your own good judgment. Simply fill out the coupon in the lower right-hand corner—MAIL IT TODAY, and you receive a trial package of my remedy free. THAT'S ALL THERE IS TO IT. In a week's time you will be on the road to recovery.

Seeks Divorce Can't Stand Catarrh

Wife Says It Is Either Separate or Die of Disgust.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept 19.—Henry O. Rasmussen, it is reported, is to be sued for divorce because his wife can no longer endure a catarrhal affliction of which Rasmussen is said to have been a victim for the last two years.

Mrs. Rasmussen states that no woman with any shadow of self-respect could consent to be in constant association even with a man she loved who was afflicted in the manner she states. She says she regrets the publicity attached to a suit for divorce, but that it is either that or "simply lie down and die of disgust."



Wife Can't Stand His Catarrh Any Longer.

Plain language is the only thing to use in trying to deal with such an affliction as catarrh. The facts are plain. There is a man, an able-bodied, robust, vigorous business man, blessed with a paying business, a happy home and a faithful wife, suddenly stripped of all that makes life worth living, with the love of a true woman mired in his own disease. Picture to yourself what happens when a catarrh victim comes home from work—the face of his gentle mate turning away from a foul-breathed kiss, and almost dying of the disgust engendered by his awful catarrhal practices.

Some Results of Catarrh

Even Slight Cases of Catarrh Have Terrible Consequences.

Every case of catarrh, of course, is not fatal. Nor does every case result in consumption or bronchitis, but nevertheless they are very frequent. No man or woman knows what his or her case of catarrh will lead to. Men of robust health have succumbed to resulting consumption and partial idiocy. Women of strong vitality have become nervous wrecks and victims of bronchitis. Your good health is not always a preventive against the catarrh germs.

The more you feel sure there is no danger of the catarrh resulting in a disease more serious, the more danger there is, simply because you neglect yourself. This happens in hundreds of cases and we see it recorded almost daily in the letters we receive. "If I had only started earlier," is a very frequent expression, showing that our warning is not fanciful, but based on fearful reality.

Even slight cases of catarrh may result in nose cancer, than which there is hardly a more pitiful affliction in this world.

Catarrh Fatally Frequent.

Some of the frequent results of catarrh are bronchitis, pneumonia, death and decay of the bones, loss of thinking and reasoning powers, death in ambition and energy, loss of appetite, indigestion, dyspepsia, ulceration, bad breath, raw throat, raw sores in the nose, general debility and sometimes idiocy and insanity.

This is why in the death list you do not find a mention of fatal catarrh; the death is caused not directly by the catarrh itself, but by a disease which was caused by catarrh. Medical books and cyclopedias will tell you even more serious news than we tell you here; probably after reading them you will have a full realization of what it is to have catarrh—a common disease, it is true, but with a common result—misery for years if not death.

Cure Is Certain.

You can cure that catarrh, slight or serious, once and forever, by means of Gauss' Combined Treatment. We don't ask you to believe it before proving it yourself. Therefore we send you a treatment at our own expense, absolutely free to you. When you get it you can prove it all to your own satisfaction. It is without question the greatest catarrh cure on earth. Cut out the coupon and send for the free treatment today to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main St., Marshall, Mich. When you see your catarrh begin to leave you, you will appreciate what it is to have a real, genuine cure for catarrh that can be relied on. Send the coupon.

An Old Soldier Grateful

Mr. Gauss: I have finished your treatment now, and am completely cured. My wife says she cannot detect any of it left and says my catarrh is gone. She ought to know, for she is a graduate nurse. I am as truly grateful to you as an old soldier can be for what your treatment has done for me, and certainly will recommend it to those whom I know are afflicted. You are certainly at liberty to use this if you want to in recommending your treatment to others. W. B. PLUMB.

Confessions of a Catarrh Victim

Some of the Experiences That Catarrh Forces Upon Its Slaves.

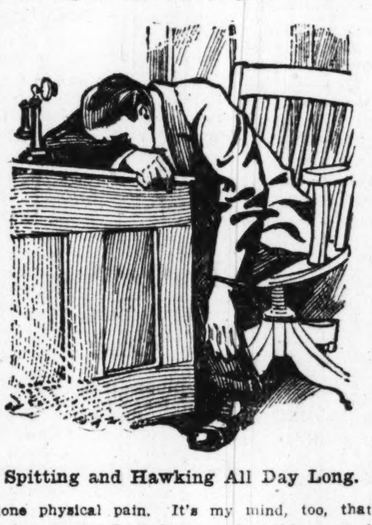
I get boiling mad when people tell me I've got catarrh. I've had dozens of mere acquaintances, and especially one young lady, who have come up and ventured to tell me something "for my own benefit." That expression begins to pall on me—"for my own benefit." It seems they all want to tell me the same thing, "You ought to take something for your catarrh; I'll tell you how my cousin got cured, and every doctor used to say he had the worst case he ever heard about."

Now, when a friend puts his hand on my shoulder, I gulp in preparation for catarrh advice. This gulp is not mere throat action, but the swallowing of mucus. Nothing would suit me better than to have the earth open and swallow me up.

I walk along the street close to the curbstone. When I ride on a car, I stand on the rear platform rather than sit down inside.

I wish I could talk without having to open my mouth to breathe. I wish that kisses were obsolete. I wish that handkerchiefs could be turned into sheets. I wish that no chair but mine would be placed at a table. I wish that other people were deaf, blind and without noses. I wish that I were alone, always alone, to hawk and spit when and where I please. I wish that I was my mother's little fairy once more, with my little towsled head that knew not disease, lying on her warm shoulder.

Now I feel that I am an outcast. I know what they think of me, every one. I know my friends shun me, for even Jack, my old college chum, doesn't come around and chat and smoke any more as he used to do. My acquaintances only say hello, and pass by. Mrs. Grundy, next door, and all the other neighbors are talking about how repulsive I am. I see it in the way they look and act. People I sit next to get up and move somewhere else. People who talk to me turn their heads at an angle. And I'm in pain. It is not alone physical pain. It's my mind, too, that is in agony. I can't remember things as I used to. Thoughts slip away from me. I say things I don't mean, and mean things I don't say.



Spitting and Hawking All Day Long.

My head is thick and my brain is in a fog.

I walk alone, my work palls on me, my nerves refuse me. That let-her-go feeling has got me. I relish nothing I eat, and my appetite is gone. And as I think of my misery I must hawk again. My cough is a rattle. The ruby has been plucked from my cheek, the flush of my young health is gone. My head is in a fever, but my hands are cold, and I seem to feel in them the approaching chill of the tomb—I have read of catarrh death and my mother's brother died of the same disease. Come on, death, and relieve me.

No, my mother comes. Who, Gauss, did you say, mother? Do you think so? I'll try, mother. Yes, if you send for the treatment I'll use it faithfully. I won't let it go a single day without using it. They prove it in every case, do you say? All right, send on the coupon today. Perhaps, after all, there is a cure, and still one person in the world to live for, one who will love you in spite of the catarrh, your mother.

Gauss' Catarrh Treatment is the simplest and surest in the world. It cures catarrh on a common sense plan, and Gauss proves it. Cut out the coupon below and mail it today, and get a free package of the Gauss treatment and prove to your own satisfaction that it will cure you. Whether you have catarrh slightly or seriously, it may be the means of brightening your life, now overshadowed by catarrh. Send coupon to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main St., Marshall, Mich.

Eminent Doctor Says Blindness Due to Catarrh

(Associated Press Dispatch.)

London, Aug. 6.—Dr. H. Manning Fish of Joliet, Ill., declared at the medical congress that most of the blindness in the world is the result of catarrh in the upper nasal cavities or the bony cells composing the roof of the nostrils.

Dr. Fish described his experience in 36 cases, covering a period of several years, claiming that in each of these immediate improvement of the vision followed the effective treatment of the diseased nasal cavities, and advised that in cases of loss of vision following grip, measles, scarlet fever and kindred ailments, relief be sought through treatment of the noses of the patients.

Catarrh is caused by a germ, which must be destroyed before the catarrh itself can be cured. If not cured, blindness may result. An extended history of the many extraordinary cures effected by the Gauss treatment will probably be brought to the attention of the next international meeting of the medical congress.

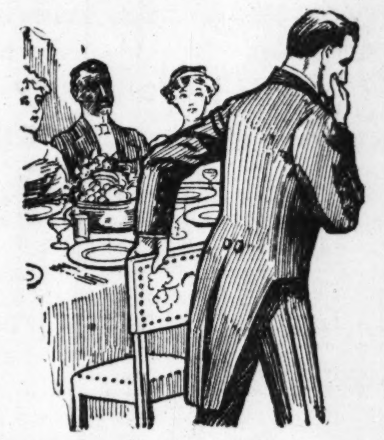
Catarrh Terribly Embarassing

This Is Especially True at Meals When the Uncontrolable Habits of Catarrh Victims Chase Away the Appetites of All at Tables.

Catarrhals Are Unwelcome Guests.

The sufferer from catarrh either leads a life of continual embarrassment and shame over his (or her) unavoidable habits, or else is so unmindful of the opinion of others as to not care how much they are annoyed or sickened.

At the table, at mealtime, when everybody is gathered about the board with sharp appetites and pleasant anticipations of the good things to come the catarrh victim is suddenly taken with the desire (or, rather, the necessity of raising mucus. There is a scramble for his trusty handkerchief, a quick turning of his head, a struggle to suppress the nauseating spectacle, and then——! But why detail the thing? In a nutshell, the meal is spoiled for everyone, and nausea has replaced appetite as disgust has replaced anticipation. The poor catarrh victim feels ready to sink through the floor at each repetition of these mortifying, degrading scenes. He feels like a leper—like one who has no business to associate with clean, normal people. It is awful!



If you have nerves, or you believe other people have any, you will just stop and look at yourself as you are, and before other people move away from you when they see you coming you ought to run away from them. Go somewhere, anywhere, just to be alone, and take this page with you, cut out the coupon at the bottom and send it now, before you pull your nose again, to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main St., Marshall, Mich.

Send for Free Trial Treatment.

You will get by return mail a free package of the famous Gauss' Combined Catarrh Treatment, the only positive cure for even the worst cases of catarrh on earth. Gauss sends you this treatment to prove to you that it will cure you, and it costs you nothing, absolutely nothing. Gauss' Treatment will save you a world of misery and humiliation, and make you, instead of an outcast, a welcome soul in the bosom of your own family and among your friends and acquaintances.

Because you have not gagged at the table yourself before this, don't imagine it will not happen some time or other as long as you have catarrh. Catarrh brings all this just as sure as night follows day. It is only a question of time. Send the coupon.

In the Coils From Childhood

I have suffered with catarrh since I was 4 years old, but it has annoyed me more in the last two years.

I tried everything I read or heard of, but they did me no good and I saw your advertisement in a paper and I wrote to you and received a sample package. I was impressed so favorably with the sample that I immediately sent for the full treatment.

I suffered much with the dropping back into my throat, and after I had taken the medicine for three or four weeks this nasty sensation entirely ceased and I have never had any return of it. I am now fully cured of my catarrh and am very grateful to you and your medicine.

I will be very glad to tell anyone whom I think needs it, and if you wish to use my name you may do so, as I am so grateful that I wish everybody who needs it would use it, and I am sure that it will cure them—Miss Mattie Drullinger, Birdsells St., South Bend, Ind.

Pointed Paragraphs

Spare the stamps and spoil the treatment.

We believe in telling the truth and saving time.

Common sense wins. Write and ask any of Gauss' patients.

"Down in the mouth" can apply to the spirit as well as the catarrh.

All great things are conceived in "Sweat." Gauss worked hard and produced a cure that will live after him.

Some would know a great deal more about being able to cure catarrh if they could forget a lot of old ideas they never should have learned.

The reasons of the strongest always yield to the strongest reasons—common sense. Gauss' Treatment prevails for the same reason.

If the catarrh victim would stick to the treatment as faithfully as the catarrh sticks to him, that disease would probably be as infrequent as the now conquered diphtheria.

There are some people who, instead of making the best uses of the chances they have for a cure, are always telling of what they might do under happier circumstances. Send the coupon.

CUPID RETURNS

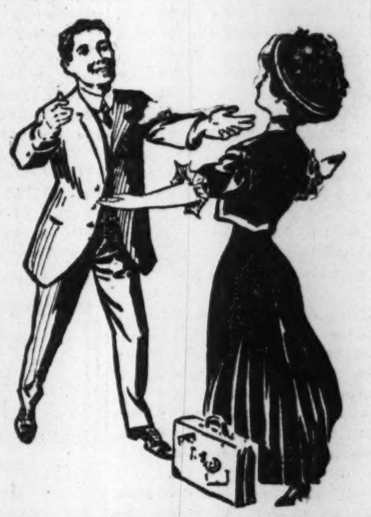
Mother: How does it happen, Helen, that you have started going with Henry Hawk again? I don't see how you can bear to have him around.

Helen: Oh, you couldn't tell he ever had catarrh now. He's been taking Gauss' treatment for over two weeks.

Catarrh Everywhere Even on Pike's Peak

No Man or Place Is Immune from the Deadly Catarrh Germ.

There is no part of the land which is free from catarrh. Altitudes and latitudes have little effect in destroying the omnipresent germ. Many imagine that the climate of the West, with its high altitude and dry atmosphere, tends to prevent catarrh. There are just as many cases in proportion to the population west as east of the Mississippi, only the disease is not so severe because of the climatic effect upon the nerves.



"Happy Together Once More; Mr. Gauss Has Cured My Catarrh."

Even on Pike's Peak, which is over 14,000 feet above the sea level, catarrh seemed to attack several of the attaches of the signal station located there some years ago.

No place is exempt, no human soul is immune from catarrh. Don't imagine because you don't live by a lake or a river that you can't have catarrh, or that you have only chronic cold when your nose has been stopped up for some time. That is usually the way catarrh starts—with a bad cold.

Better spend a few days destroying the catarrh germ right from the start, than waiting and putting off until you feel droppings in your throat and your nose clogged up.

The Gauss Complete Treatment will stop it and avoid for you years of future misery. Cut out the coupon below if you have even a slight cold or a touch of catarrh, and send it to C. E. Gauss, who will send you a free package of the wonderful Gauss treatment, so as to prove to yourself its great power.

It costs you nothing. Address coupon to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main St., Marshall, Mich.

"If I Had My Life to Live Over."

We can point to hundreds of cases of catarrh that have dragged their blear-eyed, nose-dripping, half-dead victims through 15 and 20 years of misery. It all started with one little germ. Just one of Gauss' Catarrh Treatments for a little while would have killed off Mr. Germ and reclaimed to health and happiness in short order some of the world's best women and bravest men who now dodder about in blank, diseased old age, or fill some cold graves—food for thought. Think of yourself at 40 or 50 or 60 clutched by catarrh. If you only had your life to live over! A 2-cent stamp would blot out all the misery.

It is not too late. Cut out the coupon below, fill in your name and address, and take courage. Do it willingly and with hope. Mail it to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main St., Marshall, Mich., and you will get by return mail a free package of Gauss' Catarrh Treatment to prove that it will cure you.

A Glimpse of the Death Roll

Died of consumption, aged 82.
Died of acute bronchitis, aged 60.
Died of pneumonia, aged 25.
Died of cancer, aged 51.

And so on down the list. Do you find a mention of catarrh? No. Because catarrh as a rule does not directly cause many deaths. But catarrh is indirectly the cause of many deaths. "Died of pneumonia" should better be: "Died of pneumonia, caused by catarrh." The "caused by catarrh" is left off—what's the use? He's dead, anyway. And so catarrh is looked upon as a disease of slight consequence by those who don't know. Over every catarrh sufferer, no matter whether he has been suffering a month or five years, there hangs a dark shadow which is pointing with its dark, bony finger to the silent way. Will you follow it or fight it?

Gauss' Combined Catarrh Treatment will save you and avoid for you years of future misery. Gauss' Treatment permanently cures catarrh in the common sense way. He proves it, too, with a free treatment he sends to you by return mail as soon as he receives the coupon at the bottom of this page. Cut out the coupon, fill in with your name and address and send today to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main St., Marshall, Mich.

I Want to Cure You

I only wish I could gather some of my patients together and let you hear them talk. Some of these people had such extreme cases of catarrh that a cure was unknown to them. My treatment not only cured them, but its effect made them feel much healthier.

After a one-minute conversation with a Gauss patient you would be firmly convinced that the statements set forth here are facts.

But I can't do that, so let me do the next best thing. Let me send you a trial treatment free. Fill out the coupon below.

How to Judge Man's Honesty

The Man Who Lets You "See for Yourself" Is Usually Honest.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. The antagonists turn on the search light and the proof of merit will depend on being able to stand the gleam. There are always men who aim to tear down every good thing, and there have been men who set about to ridicule the Gauss Catarrh Treatment and figuratively tear it into shreds. They turned on the gleam and dissected it. They expected to find mere dross and found gold. So Gauss has been discovered by his enemies.

But regardless of all this, if a man will "show the goods" he has willingly and openly and let his patients prove first to themselves by their own senses the value of what he offers them, instead of expecting them to take his word for it—there must be something of value in his "goods" and it must show his intentions to be honest.

Every catarrh victim should make a test of the great Gauss Catarrh Treatment. It is free. All you have to do is to spend a minute or two cutting out the coupon below, filling in with your name and address and send it on to C. E. Gauss, 6159 Main St., Marshall, Mich. You will get back a package of the Gauss Catarrh Treatment in plain wrapper and under seal, with full information and instructions. It costs you nothing and you put yourself under no obligations whatever.

Use it according to instructions; don't expect too much of the treatment you get, and it will prove to you that the worst case of catarrh can be cured, and that the Gauss Catarrh Treatment can do it.

Cut out and mail the coupon today.

OSCAR H. GUETHER DIES SUDDENLY IN LIEDERKRANZ CLUB

Stove Company Cashier Stricken at Card Table and Expires in Few Minutes.

Oscar H. Guether, 70 years old, of 3434 Pestalozzi street, cashier of the Quick Meal Stove Co., was stricken while playing penuchle in the card room of the Liederkranz Club last night, and died within a few minutes.

He had gone to the club with his wife to spend the evening, and while Mrs. Guether was visiting with friends in the reception room, he joined a party of men at a penuchle game. He had been playing more than an hour when his companions saw him collapse in his chair. Physicians were called, but they were unable to restore him to consciousness.

Deputy Coroner Henry Fath was in the card room and Dr. D. F. Hochdoerfer, Coroner's autopsy physician, was in the club. Fath summoned Dr. Hochdoerfer, but Guether was dead when the physician reached him. Dr. Hochdoerfer, after a superficial examination, said he thought Guether died from natural causes and Fath authorized the removal of the body to the home.

Mrs. Guether was informed of her husband's death. She hastened to the card room.

Mrs. Guether told friends at the club that her husband had been in good health, and that he had not recently complained of feeling ill.

Immediately after club officials learned of the death, they stopped the dancing in the ball room and the other usual festivities.

Guether was born in Germany, but had resided in St. Louis many years. He was a member of the Board of Directors of the Liederkranz Club, and for many years has been interested in the St. Louis Altenheim.

PARTS OF SKULL FOUND IN HOUSE INNES RENTED

Prosecutor Believes Nelms Women's Bodies Were Destroyed by Chemicals.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 19.—Officials investigating the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Eloise Nelms Dennis and her sister, Miss Beatrice Nelms of Atlanta, Ga., announced last night that city chemists had reported that bones found in a cesspool in the rear of a cottage here were parts of a human skull.

District Attorney Linden, directing the investigation, declares the house was leased for a month last June by Victor E. Innes, who, with his wife, is in jail here on a charge of murder in connection with the disappearance of the women. Mrs. Innes is held as an accessory.

"I hope to prove," said Linden, "that the bodies of the women were disposed of by chemicals. The brick wall of the cesspool shows it had been attacked by strong chemicals which dissolved much of the brick work."

Other shipments, it is said, soon will be made.

HUSBAND SHOOTS WIFE AND ESCORT AT 8TH AND PINE

EIGHT POLICEMEN NEARBY

With Drawn Revolvers They Rush at Assailant, Who Surrenders.

Mrs. Laura B. Miles, 36 years old, of 1812 Prairie avenue, and her escort, Albert Mathes, a former boarder at her home, were shot by her husband, Charles C. Miles, at 11:30 o'clock last night opposite the Moser Hotel on Pine street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. One bullet struck the woman, inflicting a flesh wound on the left side of her breast. Mathes was struck twice in the breast and a third time in the groin as he attempted to run across the street. Mathes is 50 years old and Miles is 38.

Numbers of persons, going home from theaters, were on the street, and a score of men, sitting in front of the hotel, were in line with the fire as Miles shot at the fleeing Mathes. The latter fell into the arms of one of them, Albert Franklin, a salesman.

At the time of the shooting a platoon of eight policemen was forming at Eighth and Pine streets, a half block east. They rushed to the spot with drawn revolvers, and found Miles, who had put his pistol in his pocket, standing beside his wife, who had staggered to a building at 804 Pine street and was leaning against it. Miles threw up his hands as the policemen closed in upon him, and shouted: "I'm not going to run."

When an ambulance drew up in front of the hotel to pick up Mathes, Mrs. Miles, without aid, walked across the street to the vehicle and asked for a glass of water. Then she took her place beside Mathes and was taken with him to the city hospital, where surgeons said Mathes' condition was serious.

Without any sign of nervousness, Miles, when put in jail, told how he locked his 5-year-old daughter, Dorothy, in the house, sent his 15-year-old son, Ralph, to a picture show, and then followed his wife and her next-door neighbor, Mrs. Sadie Rosenbrook, when they started downtown at 7:30 o'clock.

Followed Them to Theater.

Mrs. Miles went into a furniture store at Twelfth and Olive streets, he said, and was joined at that corner soon afterwards by Mathes. The two women and Mathes went to a Sixth street theater, with Miles shadowing them. When the show was over, they walked north on Sixth street and turned west on the south side of Pine street, with Miles a few paces in the rear.

He overtook them across the street from the hotel, he said, and Mathes, on seeing him, threw his hand to his hip pocket. Miles then began shooting, emptying his revolver of its six shells. Two of them went wild.

Miles said he had learned that for a year his wife had been meeting Mathes, and that he followed her to verify his own information. They were married 16 years ago at St. James, Mo., and have two children, Ralph and Dorothy. Miles is a carpenter.

Miles begged that someone be sent to his home to release the little girl, and a message was sent to her godmother, Mrs. George Aring of 1508 North Eleventh street, to take the child into her care.

Says Husband Knew of Friendship.

Mrs. Miles, at the city hospital, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that since last Christmas she had gone frequently to places of amusement with Mathes, who she said is married but separated from his wife, who lives at 4312 North Eleventh street. Her husband was aware of her friendship with Mathes, but up to a month ago did not object. Miles, she declared, refused to work and to support her, so that the money paid her by Mathes for his room and board maintained the family.

A month ago, she continued, Miles fell into a jealous rage and ordered Mathes from the house. Miles then declared, she said, that he would shoot her and the former boarder, but she paid so little attention to the threat that last night, after dinner, she telephoned Mathes to meet her at Twelfth and Olive streets. She denied Mathes made any motion to attack her husabnd, and said neither of them was aware he was near until he fired upon them. Mrs. Rosenbrook, she said, disappeared immediately after the shooting.

SUES HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW

Frank A. Connor of Boston entered suit in the Circuit Court yesterday against his mother-in-law, Mrs. Georgiana Miller, for $673.90. He alleges this is the amount he has expended in caring for Mrs. Miller's daughter, Helen, whom, he says, Mrs. Miller virtually deserted some time ago, together with her son, George.

Mrs. Miller is a widow. Her husband was purchasing agent for the M. K. & T. railroad at the time of his death. She formerly lived at 5435 Maple avenue, but is said not to be living in the State at present. Her daughter, Mrs. Marie Connor, applied to the Probate Court a year ago for a guardian for her mother. The matter was compromised.

RESCUERS MEET ENTOMBED MINER WORKING WAY OUT

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 19.—Rescue parties early today released Jacob Timperella, who was imprisoned in the cave-in in the Eureka-Centennial mine at Eureka on Thursday night. Timperella, although bruised and almost exhausted, declared he had not suffered greatly by his imprisonment. He told of his experiences after the slide and said he was slowly working his way out when found by the rescuers.

His wife, who refused to believe him dead, had prepared supper for him. The table was set when he reached home. Mrs. Timperella remarked simply:

"I knew you'd come."

The rescue of Timperella reduced the death toll of the cave-in to 11.

2 MEN MATCH NICKELS, VISITOR IS ROBBED

Edward Johnson of Baden Station, arrived at Union Station at 4:30 p. m. yesterday and strolled along Eighteenth street. A stranger hailed him. They walked to Seventeenth and Market streets, had a drink in a saloon and then walked to Twenty-second and Olive streets. There they met another man, who was a stranger to Johnson, and who appeared to be a stranger to Johnson's companion.

The two strangers soon began matching nickels. Finally they agreed that Stranger No. 1 owed $20 to No. 2. No. 2 took a revolver from his pocket and commanded Johnson to pay the $20.

Johnson said he had only $8. He was told to hand that over. He did so and No. 2 then asked him what time it was. Johnson took out his watch and No 2 grabbed it. No 2 then commanded Johnson and No. 1 to walk in different directions.

COMET IS REDISCOVERED

Shows on Photograph Taken at Yerkes Observatory.

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis., Sept. 19.—Enck's comet was rediscovered Friday night by Prof. E. E. Barnard of the Yerkes Observatory, on photographs taken by him, according to an announcement yesterday. The comet has taken its name from Johann Franz Enck, a German astronomer, assistant in the Observatory of Seeburg.

Enck calculated the orbit of the comet observed by Nechain, Miss Herschel and Jons, predicted its return and detected a gradual acceleration of movement ascribed by him to the presence of a resisting medium.

NEW FACTORY PLANNED TO SUPPLY BARRELS

East St. Louisan Says Demand for Product Increases—Realty Prices Hold Up.

Frank Tissier, president of the Central Barrel Co. of East St. Louis reports that the company is now negotiating with several parties for a site for a new factory to take care of the increased demand of the company's product. Tissier states that the great demand for the barrel has made it impossible for them to guarantee shipments before Jan. 1 and between now and that time they plan to erect a new plant to take care of the business.

The State Savings and Loan Association announced the opening of a new series was Sept. 14 and issued 274 shares, representing $29,400. Building loans since Sept. 14 amount to $14,260. An officer of the association stated that the members of building and loan associations generally are not concerned about the effect of the war on their organizations. While the war in Europe has materially affected the railroad and industrial securities its influence on the price of real estate is very slight. The stability of the price of real estate, even under the most adverse conditions, has caused many investors to put their money into real estate securities.

Will Erect Factory Building.

As a site for a six-story factory building, V. Viviano & Bro. have purchased through the Harry Simon Real Estate Co. a lot on the south side of Carr street, between Sixth and Seventh streets. The price paid was $7500. The new building will form an addition to the company's present building.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKETS

GOLD POOL PLAN AGAIN TAKEN UP BY N. Y. BANKS

Amount Reduced to $100,000,000—Central Reserve Cities Will Be Asked to Contribute.

COMMITTEE IS WORKING

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"News that the Federal Reserve Board has again taken up the consideration of the proposal to form a $100,000,000 gold pool so as to enlarge our credit balances in Europe indicates that the interior banks may yet play an important part in the relief measures called for in connection with the unusual conditions existing in the foreign exchange market. When the proposal was first made by the bankers' committee the amount asked was $150,000,000. But that was before the New York City maturities had been provided for through the successful loan operation just consummated. The suggestion now is that the interior banks shall join with the banks of the Central Reserve cities in contributing a fund which shall be sufficient to give us large balances in London through the export of gold to Ottawa.

There is little doubt that this fund can be raised without difficulty, if the banks of the smaller cities are asked by the Reserve Board to give up some gold. The board has not determined as yet upon any course of action, but a decision will be forthcoming within a day or two if such a sum as $100,000,000 should accumulate. There is no likelihood that would have to be remitted as a whole in gold; on the contrary there is strong reason to believe that the mere announcement that the fund had been set aside for the purpose of caring for our foreign indebtedness as it matured would have the effect of further relieving the foreign exchange market and depressing rates to the basis of normal trading again. The experiment will be very interesting, and unless all signs fail it is likely to be successful. The indications are that if the Federal Reserve Board approves the scheme it will be quickly put in force, through the aid of the committee of New York and Chicago bankers who will have charge of distributing the fund.

The sharp fall in foreign exchange, however, which has been brought about through the offering of exchange against the foreign subscriptions for the New York City loan, has greatly relieved the situation. But yesterday's quick recovery in the price of sight drafts on London after the decline of 3 cents to 4.93 at the opening, indicated plainly enough that the demand for exchange was still far in excess of the supply.

The situation is, however, getting better each day, and if the proposed gold pool should be quickly formed, the decline in exchange would probably be much more pronounced. In that connection the action of certain London banks in lending money here this week was suggestive. The advances made were not heavy, but the fact that the lenders were willing to resume lending operations in this market again showed that the situation abroad was improving, and that normal conditions were gradually being restored.

What was of much significance, also, in evidencing improvement in the money market here was the action of various borrowers in paying off collateral loans this week that had been standing since the closing of the Stock Exchange. These transactions were of some magnitude, and inasmuch as many of the borrowers were a fortnight ago unable to take up the loans when asked to do so by the banks, the cancellation of the indebtedness at this time reflected a decided improvement in conditions. Many of the loans thus paid off could have remained until the opening of the Stock Exchange, had the borrowers not taken the action they did. What was more, the action was voluntary in most cases as the banks have not pressed the borrowers at all.

It was evident also, that the mercantile borrowers were finding it less difficult to put out commercial paper at the 6 and 7 per cent rates which prevailed. Some of the large out-of-town banks bought a good deal of paper in this market. The Wall street banks were not a large factor in this movement, although purchases by banks here showed some increase over those of a week or two ago. It is of the highest importance that the merchant should be accommodated and that everything should be done to increase the supply of funds available for employment in high-grade paper based upon the "actual commercial transactions" described in the Federal Reserve act.

CATTLE RECEIPTS LIBERAL, BUYERS SEEK DISCOUNTS

The week was another of liberal supplies, the run showing a slight increase over both a week ago, and the same time last year. At that, however, the beef steer aggregate was never anything but moderate. Quality, with a few exceptions was good and averaged a great deal better than the previous week. Despite the fact that the run was only moderate, buyers seemed to be after discounts and there was complaint all during the week that medium grades were lower, the bulk of them closing a big 15c under the previous week's figures. Strictly fancy beeves sold steady, with the exception of the late week's trade, which was a little lower. Some good weight steers at $10.75 were top. This also was the highest price of the year. A good sprinkling sold at $10.15@10.40.

The week's supply of butcher cattle was liberal, in fact, cows and heifers predominated in the large run. Quality was lacking, with the possible exception of one day. Common and medium grades were in the majority and there was an especially large quota of "trash." The latter grades acted as a drug on the market and made the trade slow all during the week. Strictly prime lightweight heifers were fully steady, some mixed steers and heifers setting a new record at $9.70. Medium-grade killing heifers were anywhere from a dime to a flat quarter lower. Heavy heifers also suffered considerably. Strictly good cows sold largely 10@15c lower, while medium grades that went to killers were a quarter off from the previous week, as were also best cutters.

Vealers Close Higher.

Canners and thin cutters were almost a half-dollar lower and slow sale at the loss. A generous supply of cows was on hand at all times. Bulls sold steady all week. Vealers were steady early, but closed a quarter higher, with a late top of $11.25. Best stockers and feeders looked a dime higher last week, while medium grades were steady at all times, with a good demand.

Quarantine receipts were of rather generous volume and, while Texas and Oklahoma contributed a good share, still canner territory was well represented all during the week. Monday's supply was liberal and, while the steer market was rather slow, yet some sales of tidy-weight, good-quality steers looked steady. However, the bulk of the steers sold 10@15c lower, and as the market was steady following that day, they closed with this decline standing for the week. There was some depression in the market on canners and she-stuff early in the week, but by the close it was fully regained and they closed steady. Yearlings and heretics were 10@15c higher for the week.

Hog Market Not So Steady.

There was but little change to the hog trade during the past week, with the exception that the plain and heavy grades did not meet with as good a demand as recently and prices widened, considerable lots of good hogs selling half of a dollar under the top of the market. Best pigs and lights found ready sale at good figures, but the poorer kinds did not go so readily.

The top of the market hovered around $9.25 all week, while the bulk of the hogs went at $8.90@9.20. Still there were a good many plain hogs that only the packers would purchase that sold at $8@8.75. The good smooth hogs all sold above $9, but there were lots of mixed hogs at $8.50@8.95 and the rough heavy hogs went at $8@8.40.

Strictly good grade, corn-fed lights were ready sale for shipment at $9@9.25, while the plainer kinds went at $8.40@8.90. Best pigs found sale at $8.25@8.75, fair to medium grades brought $7.35@8 and the poorer kinds sold at $6@7.25. There was a pretty wide spread on the pigs and light, and all grassy and off-grades sold very unsatisfactorily.

Sheep and Lambs Gain.

Again the receipts of sheep were extra small, and, as there was a good demand, prices were on the advance all week. None of the buyers were able to secure anything like the number of either sheep or lambs that they really wanted. Lambs scored an advance of 75c, while the sheep made a gain of at least 50c, and buyers were extra anxious for them at the higher prices. Values at the close of the week were on the highest basis ever known in September.

Good fat lambs found ready sale at $8.50@9, plain grades went at $7.75@8.40, and the culls and those that were but little or no better than culls went at $6.50@7.50. Buyers did not waste time arguing for a very heavy sort on the lambs, so there were not many culls offered. Mutton sheep at the opening of the week went at $5, but at $5.50 later.

Breeding ewes were in fair demand at $5.50@6, while the choppers and good stockers went at $3.75@4.50. The fair to medium stockers went at $2.50@3.65, while the bucks sold at $4@4.25, showing a gain over the previous week of 25c. Buyers were forced to ship in supplies from other markets to fill urgent demands.

Army Horses Best Sellers.

There was only a light demand for horses and all that found outlet were on the quality order. The largest demand came from Eastern States, which took all the good quality types of chunks and good big work animals at prices which were satisfactory to shippers. The best call came for army animals to supply European demands. These animals sold well and sellers here claim they will be able to handle all of this material which arrives.

Mule trade was about steady all the way through. Buyers came and took light supplies at fair prices, but as a rule there were not many animals sold. A few miners and big mules of extra quality were the kinds that found the best outlet.

Developments in the grain markets in the past week were as exciting in their way as those in the European war which were the chief factors in bringing them about. The battles, victories, advances and retreats on the great field of slaughter have caused advances, declines, activity and apathy in the grain markets in turn and have demonstrated that efficient, strategic and courageous leaders are as necessary to the grain speculators in their "bull" and "bear" campaigns as they are on the field of battle. Present conditions are unprecedented, and the experience and statistics of previous years of big crops and active demand or the reverse are of no avail. The market is drifting like a ship without a rudder, awaiting the "man of the hour" to show the grain trade the way to adjust itself to the new conditions until the war is over.

Awaiting a Leader.

When such a leader appears the American grain trade, more than that of any other country, in this new world of opportunity, will be in a position to reap the blessings of profits and business expansion.

Prices rose and fell with the reverses or successes of the allies army, but while the price tendency is difficult to determine, the market became strong toward the close of the week, and the record-breaking loss was more than recovered.

Traders hesitate to sell short on account of the wide fluctuations in either direction, but sentiment is gradually crystallizing on the bear side.

One of the most striking proofs of the development of the belief in the ultimate success of the allies is furnished by the fact that England was able to float her enormous loan at an average rate of only a little over three per cent, and France was also able to secure a large amount of gold without difficulty, only about one-fifth of the proposed issue of German notes has been taken, although these notes bear 5 per cent interest.

It is generally believed that the success of the allies will mean a short war, while German success will mean a long drawn out and bitter war, so when German victories are reported, wheat prices advance, and when the allies are victorious prices decline.

Cash Markets Dull.

The cash wheat market is extremely dull, as the advance has driven millers out of the market.

At the close on Saturday No. 2 red wheat showed a net gain for the week of ½c to 1½c, but No. 2 hard was quoted at the same price it sold a week ago.

December options were only ½c higher than they were last Saturday, and May wheat scored a net advance for the week of only ¼c.

September wheat is nominally ¼c lower than was asked a week ago.

The general movement on foot in all nations to encourage the planting of a larger area of winter wheat, and the prohibition of high prices in most countries is beginning to have a bearish effect.

Fluctuations Are Wide.

After suffering the heaviest single day's drop on record at the opening of the week, wheat prices became extremely nervous and fluctuations became so wild and excited that traders were afraid to take hold and the grain business was completely demoralized. As was the case last week, prices fluctuated with the successes and reverses of the allies, and manipulation on a large scale was plainly evident.

Many traders who had large paper profits last week were unable to get out in time, and not only saw their profits vanish, but suffered heavy losses before they could unload. No sooner had the pyramiders and the weak longs sold out than the manipulators took advantage of the opportunity to boost prices again, and the market was worked in the opposite direction.

Cash wheat prices were as unstable and erratic as futures, and all records were broken in the cash market for both width and frequency of the price fluctuations.

Millers were unable to keep pace with the changing prices, and the flour business was as badly demoralized as the grain trade.

European Shortage Is Light.

According to the report of the International Institute of Agriculture, the shortage in the wheat crop of Europe is much smaller than has been claimed up to this time and will be more than offset by the forced economy in consumption.

The export trade is demoralized by the frequent fluctuations, and the volume of the foreign business is disappointing.

The Iowa weekly weather crop report says: "Based on present conditions and area of 9,324,000, the State will produce about 320,000,000 bu corn. Government September crop report indicated a yield of 365,000,000 bu. Last year's final returns were 338,000,000 bu. A summary of reports receiped Sept. 1, with 86 per cent of the threshing completed, shows the following average yields of small grains: Oats, 33 bu per acre; winter wheat, 22; spring wheat, 15; barley, 26; rye, 19; timothy seed, 42 bu per acre. If these estimates are maintained by final returns the State will produce about 165,000,000 bu oats, 11,000,000 bu winter wheat, 4,000,000 bu spring wheat, 440,000 bu barley and 1,300,000 bu rye. Government September crop report suggested an oats crop of 158,000,000 bu. Last year's final returns were 168,360,000 bu."

The Price Current grain reporter says there would seem to be an increase of 10 per cent in the acreage of winter wheat throughout the surplus states as compared with last year. Indiana reports 111 per cent, Missouri 105, Illinois 115, Iowa 100, Nebraska 100, Kansas 107, Oklahoma 178 per cent. Our reports indicate an amazing increase as compared with our estimate of Aug. 25.

In corn these reports indicate an increase of 300,000,000 over our report of Aug. 25 for the surplus states and over 400,000,000 bu more than the Government report of last year, indicating a total corn crop of approximately 2,800,000,000 bu.

The Saskatchewan fortnightly bulletin on crop conditions issued by the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture states that 35 per cent of the wheat crop is now threshed. Threshing should be completed by the end of the month.

From the estimates of correspondents based on threshing returns, 13 bushels of wheat, 20 bushels of oats and 16 bushels of barley would seem to be the probable yields.

To Valorize Wheat.

A Melbourne, Australia, cable says: "Federal Commission having supervision over foodstuffs recommended that action be taken for the extension of the Australian wheat area at the next planting, the British and Australian Governments guaranteeing to take a certain quantity at the prevailing market price."

This is going farther than the proposed cotton valorization proposal in this country and Brazil's plan to aid the coffee growers.

Some of the State Governments in Australia have gone farther than this, and a cable from Sidney, N. S. W., dated Sept. 18, says:

"The State Government, acting in accordance with the powers conferred upon it by Parliament at the outbreak of the war to prevent gambling in foodstuffs, has seized 140,000 bags of wheat, which its holders had refused to sell at 4s 2d ($1 per 100 weight), the price fixed by the Government."

Official Canadian September crop report estimated wheat crop at 159,700,000 bu, against 231,700,000 bu last year, and 204,710,000 bu as four-year average.

Oats crop 327,700,000 bu, against 404,700,000 bu last year, and 351,000,000 bu as four-year average.

Barley crop 37,000,000 bu, or 11,300,000 bu less than last year, and 5,700,000 bu less than four-year average.

Flax crop 9,000,000 bu, against 17,500,000 bu last year, and 14,500,000 bu as four-year average.

Yield of spring wheat per acre in all Canada, 15 bu, against 20.81 bu last year and 19.2 average for four years.

Oats 32.5 bu, against 38.7 bu last year and a four-year average of 36.3.

Argentine shipments of wheat for the week were only 24,000 bu, as compared with 128,000 bu for the preceding week and 120,000 bu for the corresponding week last year.

Shipments of corn from Argentine for the week were 2,202,000 bu, against 3,120,000 bu for the preceding week and 4,831,000 bu a year ago.

North American shipments from the Atlantic and Gulf ports for the week were: Wheat 7,800,000 bu, corn 88,000 bu.

Argentine cables say: "Heavy rains have fallen this week, which have stiffened the grain markets, as cold dry weather is wanted for wheat and for the curing of corn."

EXCHANGE FIXES NEW SCHEDULE ON CONTRACT COTTON

Possibility of Heavy Penalty on Producer Seen in "Fixed Differences."

The cotton market is beginning to show signs of life. There is plenty of subjects to discuss and plenty of angles from which to view them. Probably the New York Cotton Exchange is the center of most attention. Its members have several difficult problems to solve. They have promulgated a new set of differences governing tenders of cotton on contract, to take the place of the schedule formerly in vogue. Just here may be seen the iniquity of "fixed differences."

At first sight there is nothing extraordinary in this revision which lowers the tenderable value of the grades above middling, and it might be laid to anticipation of a high-grade crop. A closer examination, however, will reveal a situation bearing the possibilities of a heavy penalty on the cotton producer. It is true that no one need trade in the New York market under compulsion. It is equally true that our markets, without exception, are so closely bound together in mutual interest and influence that the action of the leading market in this country is felt all down the line.

Price differences, as fixed in New York, will be used by buyers all over the country in determining what they shall pay the farmer for his cotton. The passage of the bill commonly known as the Smith-Lever bill, provided under penalty that all exchanges should use as a standard the Government type of classification. This type is higher standard than the cotton trade was accustomed to use in transferring cotton, whether in the regular trade or on future contracts; and the differences between the grades are much smaller than those fixed by classers generally. On the resumption of trading in New York they will use these types in settlement of contracts.

Revision Does Not Aid Farmer.

In their revision of price differences the higher grades suffer a sharp reduction in the premium of the basis grade. For instance, strict good middling is reduced from 90 to 42 points; good middling is reduced from 65 to 28 points; strict middling from 32 to 14 points over middling; the other high grades in proportion. The lower grades are unchanged.

What is the result? In the average trader's mind, classing by the Government standard, low middling would be about as much below middling in value as good middling is above it. Under the new differences fixed by the New York Cotton Exchange, good middling brings a premium of only 28 points over middling and low middling is tenderable at 125 points under middling; middling fair brings a premium of only 56 points, while good ordinary is valued at 300 points under middling. Values on all grades above middling are lower. Values on all grades below middling are unchanged, although the standard of class is raised. The beneficial effect of the Smith-Lever bill is nullified as far as the farmer is concerned.

The cotton market shows the beneficial effect of the "Buy-a-bale" movement. From all over the cotton belt comes news of an advance in prices, from ¾ to 1 cent per pound, and this is largely attributable to the wave of sentiment occasioned by the move to buy and hold.

American mills are showing a greater interest and are sending forward bids. Not a great deal of business has been put through, but that is largely because of irregularity in price, which varies considerably in different sections of the cotton belt. A small percentage of the cotton is being offered for sale and a good demand is reported for that. Advices from Central Alabama are to the effect that only about one bale in 20 is being offered for sale.

Weather Favors Picking.

The weather is favorable all over the cotton belt. The Government's weekly weather bulletin says:

"In the cotton region warm and dry weather over the greater part of the belt favored the opening and picking of cotton, which was reported as progressing favorably in nearly all portions. In Texas, especially, the crop continues to improve under the favorable weather, with prospects of a good crop in addition."

The Census Bureau's report of consumption and distribution showed a sharp reduction in consumption during August—384,205, compared with 432,350 for the same month in 1913. The consumption by American mills for the year ending Aug. 31, was 5,577,864 bales, compared with 5,483,321 last year; exports were 8,914,548 bales, compared with 8,800,966 last year. Exports in August were only 21,210 bales, compared with 257,172 last year.

Imports of cotton were greater than exports during the month of August. Exports are affected now by the fact that Liverpool has agreed to import no more cotton until their stock, total 867,000 bales, American 577,000 bales, is all sold; this stock is about two months' supply. It is doubtful if this agreement will hold; spinners are complaining bitterly that Liverpool dealers are taking advantage of the situation and forcing them to buy high-priced Liverpool cotton when they could be supplied from America at lower prices.

Liverpool in the meantime is lowering prices, apparently, as the stock is reduced, a reversal of the usual trend of prices. The committee which has the undoing of straddles is not having an easy time on account of the dissatisfaction over differences, and a syndicate has been formed with the intention of taking over all these straddles between Liverpool and the New York and New Orleans markets, and it is hoped that they will be successful.

Until such matters are adjusted it is not a good thing to reopen for trading the New York and New Orleans Cotton Exchanges; in the former market there are still outstanding a good big block of the Pell and Flower contracts. Dry goods trade is rather good, but buyers claim that goods prices are too high compared with the price of the raw cotton.

BIG INCREASE IN BANK OF ENGLAND STOCKS OF GOLD

Lombard Street Watches War News Closely—French Deposit Gold in England.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—When the financial position is considered by itself the conclusions must be favorable. But Lombard street watches the battlefields rather than the markets and every financier feels compelled to take short views of the future.

The most reassuring point is the Bank of England's position; its gold, despite the segregation of £3,500,000 for redemption of treasury notes, being almost at the maximum of its history, while the week's reduction in outstanding loans, despite the rediscounting of "pre-moratorium" bills, shows that maturing obligations are being gradually paid off. Moreover, as regards the £27,000,000 small notes issued by the Treasury, the joint stock banks have now taken up nearly all their allotments in cash. Notes still outstanding merely represent the treasury's own obligations.

Meantime our national finances are in good shape. The revenue is coming in moderately well, while the total issue of £45,000,000 treasury bills for war expenses has been placed at an average well below 3½ per cent. Our trade activity is, of course, still checked, but merely to the extent of a natural war restriction, credit facilities being ample.

Our market will probably subscribe in fair amounts for the New York City loan, despite the risk of loss in exchange. The subscriptions come partly from people here who are unable otherwise to get at their balances on your side, and who are therefore disposed to place a portion in the city bonds.

The arrangement of the position, left open on the Stock Exchange July 30, is proceeding towards a satisfactory conclusion. The result will be an increased freedom of movement for securities, but it will not cause the reopening of the Stock Exchange.

France is placing 2,000,000 pounds sterling of its treasury bills here, with the purpose of paying for goods bought in England. German finance is surrounded with a fog and only surmise about Berlin conditions is available. The Reichsbank's statements, though they show gain in cash, reflect no such recovery as that of our own bank.

Your unfavorable foreign trade statement for August excites much comment. General belief is, that your main chance for restoring a normal export balance lies in further and much more substantial reduction of imports.

Until the moratorium in the various countries is removed it is impossible to survey clearly the debris of European finance. That the war's financial effects in Europe are only beginning and that they are likely to continue for years, everyone now agrees. But the exact nature of the consequent reaction is impossible yet to determine.

LOCUST AND OLIVE TRADE INVOLVES TOTAL OF $132,000

Deal Includes One Building on Locust and Three Houses on Olive—Mercantile Trust Gets Largest Commission of Season on Transaction.

RENTALS ACTIVE ON EAST AND SOUTH SIDES

By BERRY MOORE.

With the demand for investment holdings as the feature, the St. Louis realty market is displaying stronger symptoms. Several large transactions were completed last week, while there were increased sales of first deeds of trust, the latter securities, according to agents, being much sought after.

While deals embracing large building plans are not expected for awhile, the close of the war, it is predicted, will be the signal for operations on a greater scale.

A deal embracing property at 2309-11 Locust street and at 2017-23-25 Olive street, aggregating $132,000, was effected yesterday by the Mercantile Trust Co., represented by John W. Gibson, manager of the real estate department.

The Locust street property was transferred by the Delor Realty Co. to Thornton B. Jackson. As part payment, Jackson transferred to the Delor company, of which George T. Burdeau is president, the Olive street property.

Property Yields Good Income.

The Locust street property consists of a a modern three-story building, together with a lot 50x152 feet. The building is occupied under a 10-year lease by the Wylie-Overland Automobile Co. The Olive street property comprises three three-story stone-front residences, with ground 97x109 feet. This porperty is well rented, yielding an income above the carrying charges.

While the holdings in both instances were transferred nominally, the value of the Locust street property, it is said, was estimated at $85,000. As is customary on trades, the Mercantile Trust Co. received commission on the aggregate amount of the deal, which was $3320, and which is the largest of the season.

The Locust street holding is attractively situated and will increase in value, experts declare, as the thoroughfare develops as an automobile center. Jackson ranks as one of the most successful investors in the St. Louis realty market.

This is the second piece of Olive street property east of Jefferson avenue, transferred this month, the other being at 1528 Olive street, which was purchased at a foreclosure sale by clients of the McNair & Harris Realty Co.

A trade, including three South Side holdings was effected by the Archshoefer & Glik Real Estate Co. The largest, a four-story family apartment building at 3941-43 Lafayette avenue, was transferred by Max Goldman to Sam Brown. Flats at 1433-35 Webster avenue, 3315 Humphrey street and at 2243 Oregon avenue were deeded by Brown in part payment.

The aggregate value of the holdings is estimated at $33,000.

Sales of Deeds of Trust.

Sales of first deeds of trust were a feature of the week in realty and financial circles. The securities are being purchased for investment and revenue, the indications being that the sales will continue as long as gilt edged paper of this character is available. The interest rates range from 5 to 6 per cent, the lower rate prevailing in the business districts of the city.

Along this line, the Mercantile Trust Co., the Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co., the Haller-Lembrecht Real Estate Co. and other concerns, have been doing a land office business. The Mercantile is offering serial paper, secured by high-class improved property, principally of a business character, in lots ranging from $500 up, with interest ranging from 5½ to 6 per cent per annum.

Leasing and renting is active throughout the West End and the South Side. This is especially true as regards high-class apartments, Giraldin Bros., agents for the Oxford; the Mercantile Trust Co., Bullock Brothers, Rutledge & Kilpatrick, Mississippi Valley Trust Co., F. J. Cornwell & Son, Cornet & Zeibig, the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., the Mason-Trepp Real Estate Co., agents for the highest class apartments in the city, all reporting a lively demand. The Oxford and Kingsbury, both fireproof structures, and the last word in apartment buildings, are exciting the attention of the more exclusive classes.

Offices Are in Demand.

The demand for space in office buildings is steadily increasing, with the indications that the absorption this year will place buildings of this character on a high investment plane. Eight offices were rented in the Victoria Building, represented by Williams & Bland, last week. This building is located in the heart of the business center and is directly opposite the custom house and the Mercantile Trust Co. The building has been recently overhauled and made more attractive than ever. The offices are arranged in suites, rendering them available for both large and small tenants.

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. reports an increasing demand for offices in the Pontiac Building at the southwest corner of Seventh and Market streets, formerly occupied by the Missouri Pacific. This building was recently gone over from cellar to roof and is in apple-pie order.

Business Men Aid Parkway Plan.

Business men are concentrating on the plan for a central traffic parkway, and there is a growing belief that this is the next great step ahead in the civic progress of St. Louis, and that now is the time for all good business men to get into line and work for it.

The Real Estate Exchange has thrown its support to this enterprise, in a resolution adopted at Thursday's monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Exchange. The resolution was as follows:

"Whereas, It is proposed by the City Plan Commission to establish a central traffic parkway between Twelfth street on the east and Grand avenue on the west, between the south line of Market and the north line of Chestnut streets, east of Jefferson avenue, and the south line of Lawton avenue and the north line of Pine street, west of Jefferson avenue, and to condemn all the property within said limits and construct a parkway system within such space with appropriate driveways, being the three in number east of Jefferson avenue, and two in number west of Jefferson avenue; and,

"Whereas, It is further proposed to carry out said scheme under the new charter by an appropriate ordinance recommended by the Board of Public Service and enacted by the Board of Aldermen, which said ordinance will define the project and limit the annual installments not to exceed seven into which the payments for said improvements shall be divided; and,

"Whereas, Thereafter the City Counselor will institute proceedings to condemn the said property within the limits defined and pray for the appointment of three disinterested commissioners to assess damages and benefits and to fix the 'benefit district' within which the assessment may be made, against which assessments and in anticipation of the collection thereof the city may issue improvement bonds to pay for said improvements, as provided by ordinance; therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the Board of Directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange That the said project be approved by this board, and that the exchange lend its aid and moral support to accomplish the construction of this commendable and much-needed public improvement, and that the members of the exchange be advised of this action and urged to use their influence in furtherance of this plan."

The board indorsed the work of the Citizens' Bridge Committee, and the directors decided to do all in their power to induce the members of the exchange and their clients to work for the passage of the bridge bond issue measure, Nov. 3.

Secretary C. M. McDonald was instructed to confer with Postmaster Selph with a view to obtaining a revival of the custom whereby a real estate man by inquiring at the Postoffice can learn the new address of a "deadbeat" who has moved overnight without paying a month or so of back rent.

25 BUNGALOWS SOLD IN WEST WALNUT MANOR

A new record was scored at West Walnut Manor, the big northwest St. Louis subdivision, last week, when the David P. Leahy House and Home Co. closed contracts for the sale from the building plans of 25 bungalows. The bungalows are being sold for $880 each on terms of $25 down in cash and the balance at the rate of $9.27 a month.

The price in each case includes both the actual cost of the building and the lot, the building offer being only an expedient to dispose of the ground.

The sale, which was inaugurated a fortnight ago, is the subdivision feature. West Walnut Manor is served by the St. Louis & Jennings Electric Railway, an extension of the Bellefontaine and Union avenue car line.

INFANT PARALYSIS GERM IS FOUND BY NOTED PHYSICIAN

TESTS COVERED SIX YEARS

Dr. Simon Flexner Finds Fly, Coughing and Dust Among Carriers of Dread Disease.

SARATOGA, Sept. 19.—Hope of a cure for infantile paralysis, a disease that has baffled the medical profession for years and has at times afflicted crowded districts in nearly all the big cities of the world, was held out in an address by Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, before 700 health officers and physicians assembled here Thursday for conference by the State Department of Health.

Dr. Flexner explained that through animal experimentation the micro-organism of the disease, heretofore invisible even with the aid of the most powerful microscopes and extremely difficult to grow outside the human body, had finally been grown in test tubes and was found visible when viewed through the microscope, in masses. He made no definite promise, but he left the distinct impression that recent experiments with this minute germ will soon produce results of a most important character.

Overcame Big Obstacles.

Research work concerning the disease has been in progress in the Rockefeller Institute about six years. Results at first were similar to those in other laboratories, where the virulent agents eluded primary microscopic detection. But the ample means at the command of Dr. Flexner enabled him to pursue the work beyond the stage at which it had blocked others, and eventual success rewarded him. His hearers showed the liveliest interest in his hopeful message and warmly applauded it.

Infant paralysis is spread in many ways. The common house fly is an active carrier of it. Bed bugs and hens distribute it. Human and other carriers have been found, which do not themselves suffer from the disease, but which appear to exhale the tiny organisms and thus infect susceptible persons with whom they come in contact. The germs are readily communicated by coughing or by the dust of sweeping.

Entrance into the body quickly produces a virus, which ascends to the brain through the nerves of smell, multiplies in and about the olfactory lobes, passes into the cerebro-spinal fluid and thus is distributed through the nervous system.

A Maker of Cripples.

The disease is not attended with very high mortality, but it has appalling power to produce deformities. Its symptoms are pains in the head, neck, back and legs, with drowsiness broken by attacks of extreme irritability. When death occurs it is caused by paralysis of the respiratory function, sometimes suddenly, but more often painfully slow, without in any degree obscuring the consciousness of the victim until just before the end.

The medical profession in this country began to give the disease serious attention about twenty years ago. Only 300 cases were distinctly recognized between 1881 and 1904, but from 1905 to 1909 the number grew to more than 5000, and in 1911 more than 9000 cases appeared in the United States. Similar progress was made by the disease in European countries.

EXPRESS CO. TRUCKMAN ADMITS MANY THEFTS

Search for Neckties Discloses Quantity of Stolen Goods in His House.

Louis N. Baker of 1316 Tower Grove avenue, a truckman employed by the Wells-Fargo Express Co., was arrested yesterday, when company officials suspected he had stolen four neckties from an express package.

Detectives then searched Baker's home women's wearing apparel to stock a and found enough articles of men's and small store. There were silk shirts, scores of cravats, suits of clothes, hats, suspenders, gloves, garters, overcoats, raincoats, tango hat pins, perfumed soaps, pajamas and nightgowns. The police estimated the value of the articles at several hundred dollars.

Baker confessed he had stolen the things from express packages at the Wells-Fargo Co. and at the Adams Express Co., by which he was formerly employed. He said he made only $50 a month, and that he took to theft so that his wife, his three children and himself might have better clothes. He is 26 years old.

The Sunset published pictures of the Panama Canal fortifications taken from Fowler's aeroplane, and criticised the defenses. The Government charges that this disclosed military secrets and is a treasonable offense.

GOODNOW REALTY AFFAIRS BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

Six Witnesses Subpenaed in Investigation of Bankrupt Firm's Transactions.

The grand jury has been investigating for the past two days affairs in connection with the R. F. Goodnow Realty Co., which was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy three weeks ago. Creditors of the company are said to have called the attention of Circuit Attorney Harvey to certain transactions which he considered were of such a character as to call for investigation.

Witnesses who have been subpenaed and most of whom are understood to have been before the grand jury yesterday and the day before, are Dr. Mary Dodds, 4587 Westminster place; James E. Baker, 1104 Pine street; J. A. Boyers, 2726 Dalton avenue; Mrs. Alfred Webb, 4221 Page boulevard; John Hemphill, 4530 North Euclid avenue, and C. R. Barnhart.

Barnhart and Hemphill are contractors and builders. They have been engaged in putting up houses in the West End and it is understood that they depended upon Goodnow to look after details. They found when the houses were completed, it is said, that bills had not been paid and insurance had not been taken out.

The Goodnow company was formed a year ago and took over the rental and repair accounts of the Nicholls-Ritter-Goodnow Realty Co., which is also undergoing bankruptcy proceedings. It has been testified in hearings before Referee in Bankruptcy Coles that Goodnow paid $8000 for these accounts.

MRS. F. LESLIE'S DEATH CLOSES A NOTABLE CAREER

Social Leader Made Fortune Out of Estate $300,000 in Debt —Wed Three Times.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The death of Mrs. Frank Leslie (the Baroness de Bazus) in her apartment in the Sherman Square Hotel last night, marked the passing of a woman who had made an unusual success both in business and social life.

Mrs. Leslie was born in New Orleans in 1851. She was Miriam Florence Folline. Her parents were Huguenots. Her first husband was E. G Squier, afterward United States Commissioner to Peru, from whom she separated.

Next she was married to Frank Leslie, New York publisher. He died in 1880. His affairs were much involved and he left about $300,000 in debts. She assumed control of the publishing house and rapidly piloted it to prosperity.

In those times Mrs. Leslie was in her office every day from 9 a. m. till 4 p. m. With the exception of a short vacation each summer, when she would go to Europe, she could be found at her desk. Business done for the day she would enter into social gayeties.

When Mrs. Leslie sold her business it was estimated that her income was $100,000 a year. On Oct. 4, 1898, she married William Wilde of London, a brother of Oscar Wilde. The marriage was not a happy one and they parted. Mrs. Wilde had her name changed back to Mrs. Frank Leslie.

Until she retired from an active business career Mrs. Leslie did not assume the title of Baroness, which she said was rightfully hers, as her family was noble. She was an ardent advocate of woman suffrage.

Mrs. Leslie announced her engagement to the Marquis of Campellegre, a Spanish nobleman, in 1907. Her trousseau arrived in Paris and the wedding was to take place in May of that year, but the Marquis died.

516 DIVORCE SUITS FILED FOR NEXT TERM OF COURT

20 Damage Claims Growing Out of M. A. C. Fire Also Are Presented.

When the time for filing suits for the October term of the Circuit Court expired at noon yesterday 1649 suits had been filed, of which 516 are petitions for divorce. The period for bringing suits to this term began in May.

Besides divorce cases a big part of the litigation consists of damage claims, including about 20 suits growing out of the Missouri Athletic Club fire last March. The Boatmen's Bank, owner of the building where the fire occurred, is defendant in these cases.

There was a big rush of attorneys to get their cases docketed at the last moment and employes of the Circuit Clerk's office were kept busy preparing writs for the Sheriff's office to serve on the defendants.

In loving remembrance of Henry Deideshelmer, who departed this life Sept. 19, 1913.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice beloved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
We miss his coming footsteps,
We miss him everywhere,
The home is not what it used to be since my dear son and our brother is not there.

Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

UHLANS' TASK IS TO RIDE INTO DEATH TO FIND ENEMY

They Must Advance Until They Are Fired on From All Sides, to Guide Their Men.

SOME TIMES ONE ESCAPES

Nevertheless, They Proceed Undisturbed, in Keeping With German Discipline.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. .—Of the German uhlans, of whom much has been heard in the European war, Luigi Barzini, a widely known Italian war correspondent, says in the Corriere Della Sera of Milan, a copy of which has arrived here:

"As we neared a small station and the train lessened its speed we saw a small troop of cavalry guarding the railroad crossing—a patrol of uhlans. Their demeanor was calm. Though they were in the enemy's country, their care free attitude gave the impression that they were merely in a maneuver camp.

"The swarms of cavalry which the Germans send out ahead of their advance are to be found everywhere—on any highway, on any path. It is their business to see as much as possible. They show themselves everywhere and they ride until they are fired upon, keeping this up until they have found the enemy. Theirs is the task of riding into death.

Once in a While One Escapes.

"The entire front of the enemy is established by them and many of them are killed—that is a certainty. Now and then, however, one of them manages to escape to bring the information himself (which otherwise is obtained by officers in their rear making observations).

"The fire with which the uhlans are received permits of a fair estimate of the strength of the enemy, for they know that usually all the soldiers shoot as soon as the cavalry of the enemy shows itself.

"At every bush, every heap of earth, the uhlan must say to himself: 'Here I will meet an enemy in hiding.' He knows that he cannot defend himself against a fire that may open on him from all sides. Everywhere there is danger for the uhlan—hidden danger.

"Nevertheless, he keeps on riding calmly and undisturbed, in keeping with German discipline."

The German uhlan is employed entirely for reconnaisance purposes, and what is known as "screen" and contact work. In the first of these capacities he endeavors to find the enemy without running into his fire, doing this usually in groups of from 20 to 30, which move with vanguard, flankers and rear guard.

Used to Cover Advance.

In "screen work" the uhlan is used to cover infantry or artillery advances, taking a position on the flank as soon as this has been accomplished.

In contact work, as the task described by Barzini, the uhlan rides in small bodies until he has drawn the fire of the enemy. Instead of retreating, as he may do in ordinary reconnaisance work, he endeavors to trace the front of the enemy, riding parallel to it—usually until the last man is shot down. The contact action has, meanwhile, been closely observed from the German front, and the advance and attack of the infantry is governed by the information gained at the expense of the uhlan, for whom there is no hope as soon as he is detailed for duty, but who, from all accounts, does not seem to mind this part of his work.

ENGLAND SAID TO HAVE HAD SUPPLIES IN FRANCE FOR WAR

Item in French Paper Told of Shipment of Ammunition to Maubeuge in 1913.

TREATED WITH RUSSIA

German Foreign Office Reported to Have Evidence of Negotiations Months Ago.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Sept. 4.—No one in Germany is willing to admit the sincerity of Great Britain in basing its declaration of war upon Germany's violation of the territory of Belgium and Luxemburg, and much alleged evidence is produced in newspapers and magazines to prove that Great Britain had made up its mind to join France and Russia previous to Germany's advance upon Belgian territory.

In the highest circles of the German Government it is claimed that the Foreign Office has evidence that Great Britain was negotiating with Russia several months before the war broke out to furnish ships for a descent of Russian troops on the coast of Pomerania, which lies on the Baltic Sea to the north of Berlin, but it appears that nothing came of these negotiations.

Ammunition Movement Reported.

Another curious and timely piece of evidence is presented in the shape of an item purporting to be from the Paris Gil Blas of Feb. 25, 1913. That paper on that date is said to have published the following:

"A newspaper of Eastern France has revealed a highly interesting piece of news. In military circles there it is related that large stocks of British ammunition have for several weeks been brought into Maubeuge, near the northeastern frontier of France, on the railway line from Paris to Cologne. The city of Maubeuge is of great military importance. It is designated in the French general staff's plan of campaign as the concentration point for allied troops which will be commanded in case of war by the English Field Marshal, Sir John French, under Gen. Joffre as commander-in-chief. It is well known that the British cannon fire a different projectile from those of France. The two governments, however, have reported an agreement to accumulate on French territory in time of peace the necessary war supplies of ammunition for the English artillery."

That Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, had substantially agreed to give France military support in the event of a war with Germany is also regarded in German circles as proved by the notes of the French and British Foreign Ministers, which were read in the British Parliament and in the French embassy about the middle of August.

Mail Rights Held Violated.

Dispatches announcing that Great Britain had held up neutral Netherlands ships and had taken from them German reserves, and she had also taken German mails from neutral ships have caused much bitter comment in Germany In respect to arrest and detention of the 400 German reserves who were on their way home from New York on the Dutch liner Noordam, it is asserted here that Great Britain's act is a flagrant violation of the declaration of London to which Great Britain is party.

In regard to seizure of German mails it is also contended that this was contrary to The Hague convention of 1907 which declares that the mails of belligerent states carried on neutral vessels are inviolable.

Still another grievance is that on Aug. 1, three days before Great Britain's declaration of war, the British authorities at Port Said detained the German steamer Dufflinger and removed parts of her machinery so that she could not proceed; in some cases, too, the wireless apparatus of German ships was removed and sent ashore. All this occurred, German officials point out, contrary to the neutral character of the Suez Canal stipulated in treaties and on which Great Britain largely based its action in the Panama Canal negotiations with the United States.

TO INQUIRE INTO WRECK

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 19.—Representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission are today conducting an inquiry into the wrecking of Queen & Crescent passenger train No. 2, near Livingston yesterday, which resulted in the death of M. J. McDonough of Birmingham, assistant general freight agent of the Frisco, and nine others and the injury of 37 persons.

An official statement issued by the railroad here attributes the disaster to a train wrecker, who, it is declared, threw the switch and wrecked the train. An alleged ante-mortem statement by Conductor William Jones of the passenger train in which he declared he saw a man run from the switch a moment before the wreck was cited by officials as authority for their statement.

TENNESSEE ROAD SOLD

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 19.—The sale of the Birmingham & Northwestern Railroad to the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago Railroad Co. was announced here today. The price paid was $500,000. The line extends from Jackson, Tenn., to Dyersburg, Tenn., a distance of 49 miles.

The Burlington road, seeking a route to the gulf, is believed to be back of the deal.

HOW TO FEED FOWLS ANIMAL FOOD AND GET BEST RESULTS

Government Expert Gives Suggestions for Supplying Needed Food Elements in Winter.

A great many erroneous impressions are held by some poultrymen in regard to the proper use of animal matter in the feed. Birds on free range in the summer time pick up large numbers of bugs, worms and various other insects These contain elements that are absolutely necessary in the formation of bone, tissue, feathers and eggs. In the winter time, or when the flock is kept closely yarded, these elements must be provided artificially to get the best results.

Under average conditions the best feeds to furnish this necessary animal matter are green cut bone, meat scraps or meat meal, and skim milk. Some good suggestions in regard to the use of these feeds are given by G. A. Bell, an expert in the employ of the Government, as follows:

"Green cut bone is usually fed by itself, while the scraps and meal may be readily mixed with the mash. Cut bone consists of green or fresh bone sliced or shaved into thin pieces by a bone cutter. Bones from the butcher have more or less meat adhering, and the more of such meat the better, for the combination of bone and meat is excellent for producing eggs.

"Where a good supply of fresh bone can be obtained regularly it is very useful, but it cannot be kept sweet for such long periods as the beef scraps and animal meat. Green cut bone should be fed carefully and in a sweet condition, otherwise bowel trouble may result. One pound a day is sufficient for 20 hens, but not more than a half pound should be fed to that number of birds when first beginning to use it.

"From a half to three-fourths of a pound of animal meal or meat scraps may be fed to 12 or 15 hens a day. Any form of meat is likely to loosen the bowels of the hen when first fed. The hens should be watched carefully and not fed too much. After the fowls have become accustomed to the animal meat or meat scraps, they may be kept constantly before them.

"When properly fed, milk makes an excellent feed for poultry. In feeding sour milk or buttermilk, however, the feeder must exercise care not to give too much, or bowel trouble will result. Skimmilk is an economical feed. In skimming, the most valuable food constituents—the nitrogenous substances—are left in the skimmilk. Not only does this skimmilk contain much nutritive material, but it contains it in a form which, as a rule, is easily digested.

"Skimmilk may be advantageously substituted in part for meat feeds. It may also be used in mixing the soft feed, or it may be given to the fowls to drink in addition to water."

Poultry Paragraphs.

A half dollar spent for a good lock to put on the poultry house is money well invested.

Wet mashes are good for fattening birds, but for the laying flock dry feed is preferable.

When fowls are to be drawn, 10 hours without feed before killing is sufficient. Otherwise it is better to starve them 18 to 24 hours.

Loss of Feathers.

Please let me know what is the matter with my chickens. They are May and June hatched chicks and are getting bald and losing feathers on back and wings. Their skin is red as if sunburned. They are always hungry and eat well.—P. F. B., Madison, Ill.

It is our opinion that some parasite is to blame for this condition—possibly the so-called "depluming mite." Based on this assumption, our advice would be to dust the birds with lice powder and apply carbolated vaseline to their bodies.

Early Laying.

I would like to know if it is a common thing for a 5-months-old pullet to lay. I have a White Leghorn that was just 5 months old when she laid her first egg. Have been told it is unusual to have them lay so young.—F. L. W., St. Louis, Mo.

While it is somewhat unusual to have a pullet lay at this age, such occurrences are not rare. The Poultry Station at Mountain Grove has several White Leghorn pullets that began laying before they were 5 months old. One of them was only 4 months and 5 days' old when she laid her first egg.

In Italy there are several manufacturing concerns that are now utilizing tomato waste in the making of valuable byproducts. From 1500 tons of dried residue 150 tons of tomato seed oil have been secured and 800 tons of oil cake. The oil byproduct has been found a valuable element in the manufacture of soap.

Measure Which Is Expected to Provide $105,000,000 Will Go to House Monday.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee reached an agreement on the emergency revenue bill late today and it will be introduced Monday to be taken up next Thursday under a special rule.

The bill would provide an annual revenue, estimated at $105,000,000, and in general follows the lines of the war revenue measure of 1898.

Poultry Problems Solved

Abnormal Feathering.

I have a Plymouth Rock rooster, hatched about last April, and his wing feathers, instead of growing straight as they should, are turning upward slightly curved toward the head. What causes this and will the new feathers be straight?—T. P. W., Belleville, Ill.

This is an abnormal condition and happens occasionally without any apparent cause. Ordinarily the second growth of feathers will come out all right, but this could not be foretold with any degree of certainty.

Incubator Troubles.

Will you please tell me how to get rid of surplus moisture in a hot water incubator. I have a 140-egg machine and there are no leaks. My hygrometer shows from 8 to 12 degrees too much moisture. I had poor hatches. Some eggs would pip and the chicks would die in the shell. They seemed wet and sticky. The machine has two ¼-inch holes in the back and I put a ½-inch hole in the bottom, with a slide for it, and yet there is too much moisture. I caponized some young cockerels and wind puffs appeared about the wounds. I opened these with a needle but they came right back.—R. E. D. Washington, Ind.

Without an examination, it would be difficult to make a definite statement as to what is the trouble with your machine. Are you sure it does not leak? Sometimes there are small leaks that will not be discovered by an ordinary examination. The leaks may not be large enough to make the water drip but it will ooze out and evaporate just the same. It might be well to lay your case before the maker of the machine. Windpuffs following caponizing are a common occurrence. If pricking with a needle will not get rid of them use a sharp, small bladed knife and make the opening larger.

Limberneck.

Have lost about a dozen chickens in the last 10 days and believe I have limberneck or chickenpox in my flock. They will lie on the ground, head stretched out, eyes shut, unable to walk and fluff soiled. I have learned that there was a chicken carcass in the vicinity, with maggots on it. The flock also gets meat thrown to them daily from a nearby packing house. What is your opinion on this?—B. P. B., St. Louis, Mo.

This ailment is limberneck beyond a doubt. The disease may have had its origin in the birds' picking at the dead chicken or there may be some putrid meat lying about that was thrown from the packing house. If not too far gone cures may frequently be effected by mixing equal parts of turpentine and sweet oil and giving each sick bird a teaspoonful of the mixture. Also mix a little ginger in the fowls' feed for a few days, about a teaspoonful of ginger to each pint of the food. Or, the ginger may be put into the form of a pill by mixing it with pepepr, mustard and lard, and forcing it down the throat. In bad cases this treatment must be repeated two or three times a day (Will B. P. B. please send his address to the poultry editor.)

Fencing Yards.

I have a piece of ground 100 feet square and would like to know how you would fence it off? How many birds I could keep on it? What kind of house it would be best to build? Am thinking of sowing rye on this ground this fall.—H. C. B., Hannibal, Mo.

The best plan would be to fence this ground in two or three plots so that you can rotate green crops. Rye for a green crop is very good and should be sown at once so that it will get a good start before cold weather. Bluegrass makes a good permanent sod for green picking. If the yards are to be in permanent sod and are to supply the flock with green feed, from 70 to 80 square feet should be allowed for each bird. If the yards are to be used mainly for exercise grounds and part or all of the green feed is to be provided otherwise, 30 to 40 square feet, or even less per bird will be sufficient ground. The greater number of birds on a given plot of ground the greater must be the care exercised to keep filth from accumulating. The house should be built along the north side of the yards. The shed roof style, with high side south would be very satisfactory and at the same time economical. The question of housing is really too lengthy to discuss here and would suggest that you write to the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., or to the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove, Mo., for bulletins on this subject.

Low Nests.

Please explain why so many designs show nests on the ground, underneath dropping boards, etc. Does this not make it extremely awkward to gather eggs and clean nests? Is there any reason why they should not be waist high? Also kindly give me the approximate amount of grain feed for a flock of 200 pullets for four months; in other words, how much corn, wheat and rye will I need to buy, as all our crops failed. I want to buy a winter's supply at one time.—I. R., St. Louis, Mo.

The main reason why nests are built low is because they are then easily accessible to the hens. This encourages them to lay in the nests rather than on the floor. Low nests also prevent the exertion and fluttering due to jumping to a high nest, often resulting in a fight with an occupant of the nest, and probably broken eggs. Putting the eggs under the dropping boards simply saves space. The best plan is to place the nests just high enough so the hens can get about underneath and scratch.

Not knowing what kind of birds you have and whether or not they are allowed to run in the open, it would be very difficult to even estimate the amount of grain they would eat in four months. The better way would be to buy a small quantity of grain and keep records of the amount they will eat in one week. Then it would be easy to arrive at the approximate amount they would consume in four months. Would suggest that you feed oats instead of rye.

Feather Eating.

I have an Indian runner duck that pulls feathers and eats them. I feed corn meal, bran, sand, greens and a little meat scraps from the table. What will stop this habit? At what age is a duck big enough to eat?—J. H. L., Louisville, Ky.

Confinement and unbalanced rations are the most common causes of this habit. If you could turn this bird out in the open where he could get a greater variety of food and let him have more meat food, you can undoubtedly cure this habit. Vaseline, lard, and powdered aloes in equal parts, applied to the feathers will also discourage it.

Ducks are considered ready for market and the table just as they are feathering out. They are then as heavy, perhaps, as they ever will be and the meat is tender and of good flavor.

Advertise your property as though you believed its sale or rental to be important, by keeping it listed in the Big House, Home and Real Estate Directory.

QUICK, MUSCULAR GROWTH SECRET OF RAISING BROILERS

The market broiler business is confined to a comparatively few poultry farms because it is an industry that requires considerable skill. In general, a broiler is a young chicken that has been kept growing rapidly until ready for market at six to 12 weeks old. Weights, when dressed, range from three-fourths of a pound to two pounds. The three market classes are known as squab broilers, weighing from three-fourths to a pound each; small broilers, ranging from one to one and one-fourth of a pound, and large broilers that range from the latter weight up to two pounds. The small broiler finds the most popular demand in the market.

Broilers are so-called because, in preparing them for the table, they are usually split in halves and broiled. They are grown much the same as young chickens intended for any other purpose, except that they are pushed as rapidly as possible from the start. Quick growth is the main object, as a plump bird has the first call in the broiler trade

It is next to impossible to get a broiler fat, as all the nutriment ordinarily available is used up for natural growth and development. The best feeds for this period are those that will give a uniform development to all portions of the body. To give a ration that is fattening at the expense of bone and muscle-building would mean abnormal development and stunted birds. Wheat, oats, cracked corn, green feed, grit, oyster shell, skimmilk and plenty of water constitute the best feeding program for the first five to eight weeks. For the last two weeks the feed is of a fattening nature, a mash of corn meal bran and skimmilk being used for this purpose.

Grit and shell hoppers, kept filled at all times, will insure hard-shelled eggs.

PULLETS BEST EGG LAYERS, OLD BIRDS BEST IN BREEDING

While Young Hens Fill Basket, Their Elders Should Not Always Be Supplanted.

It is seldom a paying proposition to keep a hen for laying purposes after she is two years old. A hen may still be profitable at that age, but she will not be as profitable as the pullet, and, when only a certain number of fowls may be kept, it will mean a better return to give the old hen's place to the younger bird. However, it may be advisable in many cases to keep old birds that have outstanding laying qualities for breeding purposes.

On quite a number of egg farms it is the custom now to keep only pullets for winter egg production. Even the yearling hens are disposed of simply because the younger birds will lay a greater number of eggs during the season that eggs are highest. When properly raised the early-hatched pullets should begin laying in October, or early in November, at the latest. The best laying strains of the egg breeds will begin to shell out at 5 months old. The general meat breeds are usually from 6 to 8 months old before they begin laying.

It seems to be an established rule that the older the hen the later in the winter she will begin laying. As has been stated, the pullet will begin in October or November, the yearling hen will rarely start before the end of the year, while the 2-year-olds and those still older may be expected to begin any time after Jan. 1—frequently not until stimulated by the first days of warm February or March weather. November and December eggs are the ones that bring the highest prices, hence the preference for birds that will lay best during those two months.

While the owners of commercial egg farms realize that pullets are the most profitable egg producers, they are very careful to secure their laying stock by breeding from older birds. To breed from young stock on the female side would bring on disaster in a very few years.

The Man Who Caused the Greatest War in History

HE is Garilo Prinzip, a young Bosnian Serb. It was his hand that fired the pistol which killed the Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria and his wife at Sarajevo, and thereby precipitated the mighty conflict now raging in Europe. This is an actual photograph of the assassin's arrest, never before published in this country.

THE MANY SIDEDNESS OF MARRIAGE

By Richard Clark Cabot, M. D., Assistant Professor of Medicine, Harvard University.

Can science fill the needs of life? No, answers Dr. Cabot, a physician, lecturer and writer, in his latest book "What Men Live By," from which the following is a short extract:

IT is fashionable nowadays to talk of marriage as a contract between husband and wife. This is something like calling violin music a contact between fiddle and bow. It is not untrue; it is merely foolish. There is a contract in marriage and there is a contact between bow and strings; but there is so much else that no one in his senses should pick out this subordinate element to characterize the whole.

What sort of a contract is marriage? How does it differ from a contract between a housebuilder and a (prospective) householder? First of all in this: Contracting parties are not usually drawn together by any mysterious and elemental attraction. Employer and employe exert, as a rule, no subtle fascination on each other. Their differences have to be adjusted, while the differences of married people are often their most effective bond.

Give the complementary differences of sex a chance and they will work for each other's benefit without pay, without effort and even without capacity. In marriage, when mind and conscience sleep, our subconscious elemental energies may be busily serving the common good, despite our ineptitudes and even despite our sins. Of course this is not the whole truth. No matter how devotedly a man is attached to his wife, he does not want to be fastened to her beauty any more than to her apron strings. He wants to be rationally as well as magically linked to her. He wants to be led by her experience and her nobility as well as by charm. It is good to be thus linked by bonds of many colors, as we are in marriage, rather than by one dull instrument, a contract.

For the many-sidedness of marriage gives it strength. Even two interests shared throw light on each other and on those who share them. Each reflects and multiplies all, like a group of mirrors. Married people share, as a rule, more and more diverse interests with each other than with any one else. Houses, children, sorrows, relations (poor and not so poor), finances, reputations, meals, opinions, prejudices, sickness and health—who but mates can share so many and so richly varied realities? Who else has the chance to realize with soul and with sense how each reinforces the rest?

Perhaps the greatest blessing in marriage is that it lasts so long. The years, like the varying interests of each year, combine to buttress and enrich each other. Out of many shared years, one life. In a series of temporary relationships one misses the ripening, gathering, harvesting joys, the deep, hard-won truths of marriage. The unmarried can rarely follow so many strands of interest at once. They share food with one friend, work with another, play with a third, travel with a fourth, fail with a fifth, quarrel with a sixth. But with no human being can they share the light shed by each of these experiences on all the rest.

The ripening of money by compound interest is slow and feeble compared to the ripening of compounded interests in married life. God forbid that I should belittle the sacredness of first love because I hold just now a brief for enduring marriage. But there is fascination in familiarity as well as in the first glimpse of a new world. A love that can remember its own development, can look down the lengthening vista of its adventurous past and project its future, has perhaps less quivering intensity, but surely more volume and richness than its opening days could possess. Such elastic strength comes only with time. Early love may be incomparable in its creative brilliance, but in maturer love we win the fruits of security.

Helping Labor Stave a Hole Through at the Top

By GERALD STANLEY LEE.

Mr. Lee Addresses the Readers of the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine Every Sunday From This Page.

IF a Labor leader believes that it is a mistake for Labor to try to get out by butting away on the bottom; if he believes in staving a hole at the top, up through the employers; if he believes that the way for laboring men to get things is to think their way up—to put themselves in their employers' places long enough to know what their employers are like and how their minds work on the inside—in other words, if he believes in being disinterested toward the other classes as a means of freeing his own, how is he going to get the rank and file of laboring men to agree with him? How is he going to get the men who elect him to leadership in the unions to back him up and let him act disinterestedly enough with the world to get what he wants out of it?

The Capitalist makes the claim that, in resisting the encroachments of Labor, he is defending, not merely himself, but Society. Just because he cannot make everybody believe him he is having a hard time lately in getting what he wants out of the Government and out of the people.

The Labor leader should also make the claim that, in resisting the encroachments of Capital, he is not merely defending his own class but is acting in the interests of all of us.

It is because the Labor Leader cannot make everybody believe this now, and often does not try to, that he is having such a hard time in getting his rights.

Both Capital and Labor are being held back by the people and by the Government from their fair rights, because everything they propose has to be held up and gone through first by detectives. Everybody is suspicious of these two. They cannot get things out of one another, or out of anybody else, because they are not disinterested enough.

On the other hand, the better and more powerful employers—those who are making more headway and whipping their competitors by being fairer and more disinterested in dealing with their employes and with the consumer—succeed in being believed in and in getting things.

The same is true of the better labor leaders. The class that, in defending itself, can honestly say that it is disinterested and is defending the rights of society is already getting its own rights.

But the rank and file of employers and the rank and file of laboring men do not seem to see yet how disinterestedness works. They do not admit that one class, in trying to get out of the other classes what it wants for itself, can get it only by showing that it is acting in the interests of all classes.

I have been thinking what I would do if I were elected representative of a labor union to get the union men to back me up in conducting a campaign in what I would call a practical or disinterested way. How could I get the laboring men to stand by me in a frank, honest fight to make everybody believe that we were not engaged in getting all we could, but in getting what all parties, if they would quietly consider the question, would find it to their interest to let us have?

As soon as a Labor movement in this country can make the people, rich and poor, believe that Labor, in making the fight it makes, is acting as the trustee of all classes; that, in defending itself it is defending us all; that it is acting disinterestedly and can be trusted (as Capital is not trusted) to use in the interests of all the rights and privileges it claims—so soon is it going to get what it wants.

The people are afraid of Labor now, and every delay it meets in getting what it wants is due to the fact that people as a whole are afraid that Labor in its turn will take advantage of and hold up Society precisely as Capital has already done.

In the next twenty years, with a public seeing through special interests, whether poor or rich, as our public now does, only disinterestedness will work.

The man who gets what he wants does it by seeing what other people want and steering through it. The time has already gone by when a Labor leader who is able to think of an industrial proposition only from a labor union point of view can do anything for a union.

It may be some time before every man in a union can be brought to believe that thinking of some one besides himself pays from the point of view of a workman. But if I were a Labor leader, one of the elected representatives of the unions of today, the first thing I would do would be to go about in the unions making addresses and scattering editorials and pamphlets, in which I would try to get the unions to commit themselves definitely to a bigger fight for Labor than they have undertaken yet.

I would do what I could to make it the announced policy of the unions of America that the fight they are making for Labor is a fight for all of us, a fight for the consumer and for the employer.

I would conduct the fight on the principle that the exploitation and exhaustion of the laboring class is as grave a danger to the employer as the exhaustion of the soil is to the farmer. I would fight to keep employers from committing suicide by enslaving Labor, by keeping each laboring man like the soil from renewing himself. And of course consumers from committing suicide in letting business commit suicide.

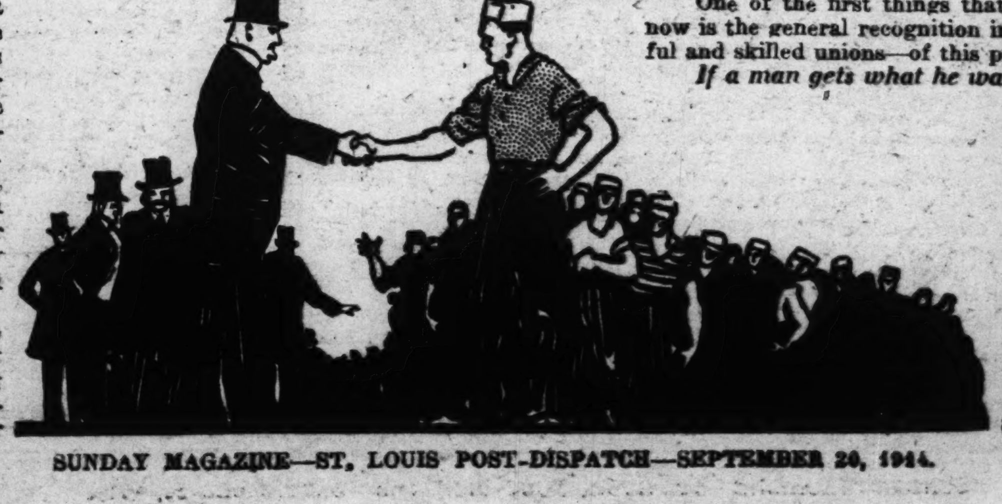
Exhausting the Labor of a nation is suffocating a nation. The cause of Labor today is nothing less than the cause of us all. It is a fight for air in the world, a fight for the right to breathe. Labor unions that will not elect and back up leaders who can present their cause in this bigger and more practical way; labor unions which elect and support leaders who conduct their fight, the biggest and noblest in all history, as a little mean fight of one class to get all it can for itself regardless of the results to the other classes, are visionary and unpractical unions. They do not see how modern human nature works.

I believe for one that the average American laboring man in our unions is ready to flame up to this bigger policy of conducting a Labor fight. Every advantage for the last twenty-five years that Labor has wrung out of Capital has been wrung out because a laboring man has at last been produced in America who can think of somebody besides himself. Every single thing that labor has got out of Capital has been got by disinterestedness.

It is because the American laborer of the better type has been able to forget himself, has been able to look past his own particular, personal, momentary interest as a laborer, and to think and act with reference to the interests of all other laborers; it is because he has given himself up to his union and devoted himself with self-sacrifice and heroic patience to the interest of all other laboring men or great groups of laboring men, that every concession Capital has had to make to Labor has been made.

The less skilled laborers have merely sacrificed themselves for their own group of labor and have not thought of all labor throughout the country. But in precise proportion as the laboring man in this country has been disinterested in his fight for his rights, he has got them.

The last man on earth not to see that thinking of some one besides himself is the way to get things is the typical American labor union man—the man who has got everything he has got so far—shorter hours, better conditions, larger wages—through unions, through giving himself up to unions and acting for the benefit of others.



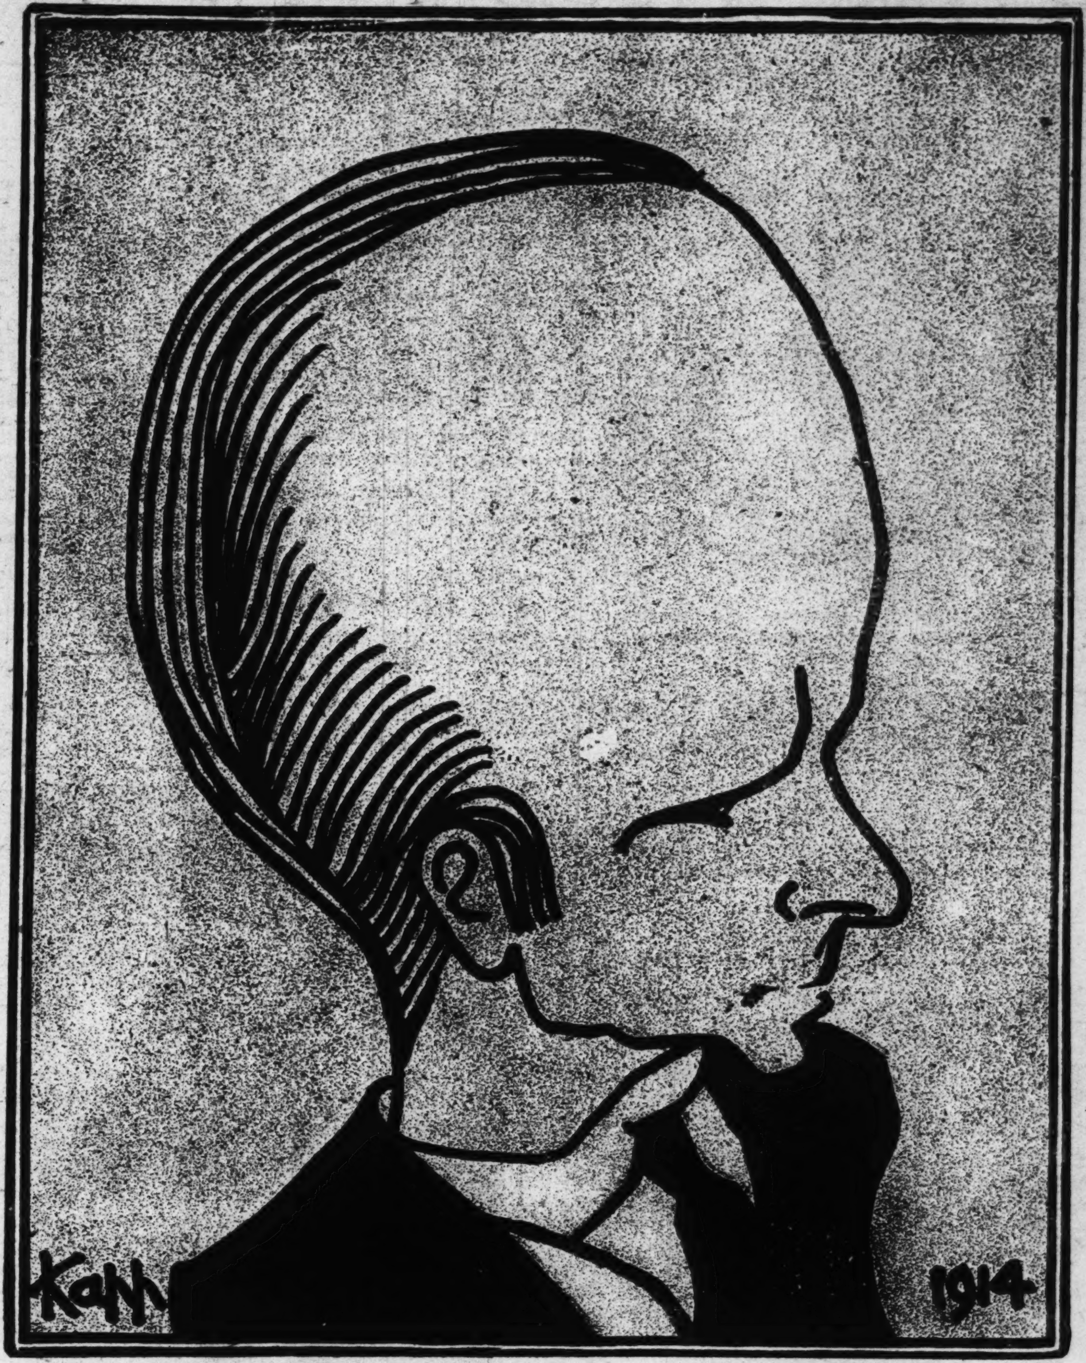
One of the first things that I look forward to for Labor now is the general recognition in the unions—the more powerful and skilled unions—of this principle:

If a man gets what he wants out of his class by being disinterested, his class will get what it wants out of other classes by being disinterested, by making common cause for all, by fighting for the fate of the world and all classes together.

To save yourself, save the people who can help you do it. Save everybody. Let everybody help you do it. This is what I mean—what all of us mean—by "helping Labor stave a hole through the top."

War Is the World's Great Illusion

No individual nation can win—Destruction and sacrifice are world loss—Cold facts of recent history have proven Ralph Lane's contention, viz.: That modern business has outgrown militarism, and "victory" no longer means profit, but rather the reverse.



Norman Angell (Ralph Lane), whose famous book, "The Great Illusion," proved all war is destructive. (Drawn by Kapp.)

WHO will "win" in the present war? Who will "lose"? And just what will they win and lose? Will Germany be "destroyed"? Will England be "wiped out"? Will any of the countries "lose their colonies"? And if so, how much actual loss will it involve? These questions were all answered about four years ago in a way that made the answerer, Norman Angell, immediately famous. Today, by virtue of those answers, he is in the minds of thousands of very keen thinkers, a towering figure in international affairs. For if his answers are right, the present war can accomplish nothing but destruction and no nation can possibly gain a material advantage by that. All the bloodshed and bravery will have gone for nothing and an exhausted world will have to turn from its conflict and admit that it has been the fool of a "Great Illusion."

Norman Angell is really Mr. Ralph Lane. He was a California boy who went to England and became one of Lord Northcliffe's bright young writers. He helped found the Paris Daily Mail, of which he was editor for some years.

During the spare hours of a very busy life, he talked with bankers and labor leaders and all sorts of people with international ideas. He was impressed above everything with the international character of both capital and labor and he tried to stack it up beside the national animosities. Then he wrote an anonymous pamphlet.

That pamphlet made him famous. From all over the world came demands for more. It was enlarged into a sizable book and published under the title "The Great Illusion" (Putnam).

The work was translated into every European language and sold by hundreds of thousands. It didn't avert the war, but it demonstrated many things that have already come true. It showed, for instance, how the first outbreak of hostilities would produce a panic throughout all the world's financial centers. When this happened, even the warrior statesmen who had called him a fool a few years before, began to rub their eyes.

No nation will win in the present war. All nations on earth, whether actually engaged in war or not, will lose. Germany will not be destroyed, because no nation could destroy her without destroying itself. England will not be wiped out for the same reason. Neither will "lose" any colonies, because they do not and cannot own their colonies, and one cannot very well lose what one does not own.

And if England, for instance, were compelled by Germany to separate from the colonies, Germany, not England, would be the loser.

There was nothing sensational about this book. It charged the jingoists with sentimentalism. It said nothing about the horrors of war. It spoke only of its foolishness. Its seeming advantages to the conquering nation, Mr. Angell maintained, were no advantages at all. For the world had completely changed since the time when any nation could profit by military victory; in fact, the actual facts of recent history showed that they oftener profited by defeat.

Here are a few of the startling facts which the author put up to the "war economists" and which the latter found it generally convenient to ignore.

After Spain was defeated by the United States and lost her last American colonies, Spanish securities doubled in value.

After England "added the gold fields of the world to her possessions," British consols dropped 20 points.

After Japan defeated Russia, she beat all records for heavy taxation, while, for the first time in 20 years, the Russian budget showed a surplus.

Ten years after the Franco-Prussian War, France was in a better financial position than Germany, although France had "lost" Alsace and Lorraine and had paid an indemnity of a billion dollars to her conquerors.

Suppose Germany annexes Belgium as the price of the little nation's resistance at Liege. Mr. Angell has pointed out why not a single German citizen would be the richer for the change. The whole idea that one nation can enrich itself by the conquest of another is "The Great Illusion." The conqueror must respect the property rights of the conquered—must encourage and not destroy its industrial and commercial development. It cannot "capture" its trade.

The only way that Germany could permanently destroy England's trade would be by destroying England's population; and this would destroy Germany's market. If Germany should destroy England's credit, the very act would destroy Germany's credit. If she confiscated England's property, her own losses would exceed the value of the property consfiscated.

Neither nation could exact tribute from the other without impoverishing itself, while the collection of an indemnity would be of doubtful value to the collector.

Suppose the German army should begin to loot the Bank of England. Every bank in England would fail. German bankers with credit in London would feel the effect. All credits in Germany would be called in and German finance would end in chaos. The German General, by robbing the Bank of England, would destroy his own bank account in Berlin.

Mr. Angell did not maintain that this could not happen, but he pointed out that no one could profit by its happening. The damage could be done only by an "inverted altruist" who, with nothing to gain, would inflict misery for the mere joy of inflicting it.

If Germany "took possession" of Canada, what would England lose? England does not and cannot exact tribute or economic advantage from colonies. All nations, including England, have tried to do so in the past. All have failed.

If Germany took South Africa and the gold mines, would the result be different? England "took possession" of them only a few years ago, because the "rule of the Boers was intolerable." But the ownership of the mines was not changed on account of the bloody war, and an entirely independent colony, in which the Boers rule, was set up.

When it was pointed out in London that the proposed South African Constitution included every discrimination that England had called a cause of war, the Government replied that England could not help herself; she could not interfere with the Government of her colonies. "In fact," said Mr. Angell, "a nation is in a worse position to enforce its views in its own colonies than in foreign territory."

As for deriving commercial advantages from colonies, Mr. Angell pointed out that every nation which has tried to force them has failed. And in Germany's "commercial aggression," which has startled the world, no colonial policy figures at all. The aggression, in fact, was often felt the most in the trade with the colonies of other nations.

That a large fleet and naval supremacy has nothing to do with commercial supremacy seemed simply astonishing. Mr. Angell made it astonishingly simple.

Switzerland's commercial boom has progressed without any navy at all. Belgium, Holland and the Scandinavian countries have been noted for their prosperity. And all of these countries, with no military or naval significance, have derived a large share of that prosperity from trade with British colonies.

The average middle-age Hollander, it was pointed out, possessed twice as much as the average middle-age German, and the standard of comfort in all these smaller countries was exceptionally high. Their securities, moreover, were generally stronger than those of the great Powers. Three per cents of Belgium were then quoted at 96; those of Germany at 82. The three and a half per cents of Norway were at 102; those of Russia at 81.

The more a nation's wealth is protected, was the astonishing conclusion, the less secure does it become.

The illusion which the author tried to dispel, and didn't, rests, he says, upon concepts of war which modern business has outgrown. An invading army could once sack and plunder a city and enrich its own kingdom by the spoils. When they took the gold goblets and plate, they actually took the city's wealth. But today they would have to take something entirely different.

They would have to carry away the mills, mines and railroads, or take the stocks and bonds which represent them. Confiscating these securities would render them worthless; for it is only through the recognition of their titles that they become securities at all.

But isn't it conceivable that Germany could make money through imposing an indemnity on England; that such an indemnity could actually be distributed among her citizens?

Mr. Angell answers: If the indemnity were paid in goods, all the manufacturers in Germany would howl. As it is, they put up a high tariff wall to prevent the entry of cheap goods into Germany. What wouldn't they do to stop their coming free? If the indemnity were paid in money, it must be used to buy goods from abroad or remain worthless. If used to buy goods at home, it would automatically raise the price of the goods; just as in the siege of Paris it would have availed nothing to the starving population to distribute pro rata the contents of the Bank of France.

As for tribute, all nations have had the same experience. People will quit producing. Trade and tribute will both soon vanish.

There is a way, of course, in which a so-called conquest is beneficial to the conqueror. California, for instance, was obtained by conquest. But Mexico could not maintain order in California and the United States could. Business demanded that order be maintained, and so the United States as a whole was benefited.

Likewise England and all Europe is benefited by the acquisition of India, as it might be if some country should efficiently police Asia Minor. But in these cases the invader is acting only as a policeman and there is no analogy between this and international European conquest. The question of who shall be the policeman is a trivial one which, when seen in its right light, could never provoke war.

Psychologically, Mr. Angell's case is equally strong. To Col. Roosevelt's claim that certain qualities necessary to national greatness can be obtained through war alone, he replied by showing that nations have become great in so far as they have abandoned war.

The South American republics, with war as a daily diet, make the worst showing. Warlike Turkey and the Balkans had little to boast of. Even in war, the most war-like Dervishes made a poor showing against the English, who had learned efficiency through the pursuits of peace. Warlike Spain did not lack valor, but was no match for the peace-trained United States.

That war tends to the survival of the fittest was another argument equally well disposed of. The fittest, he said, went to war, and that ended them. If they didn't bite the dust, they at least quit working for a living, quit producing and creating, and learned to "soldier" and to grab.

Finally, class interests, which were international, transcend national interests. Both capital and labor were internationalized. London bankers in self defense rushed to relieve financial crises in New York. European capitalists struck hands across the national boundaries to resist the growing demands of international labor unions and the international Socialist movement.

And yet war was declared. The people of all classes whose interests were international began to fight and kill for national interests instead. Why? According to this book, it could not have been because of "capitalist interests"; it could not have been because of any possible commercial advantage to Anglo-Saxon or Teuton or Celt. Surely it was not because a Servian boy murdered an Archduke. It could only have been because of a "Great Illusion."

G. BERNARD SHAW ON HOW TO RAISE CHILDREN

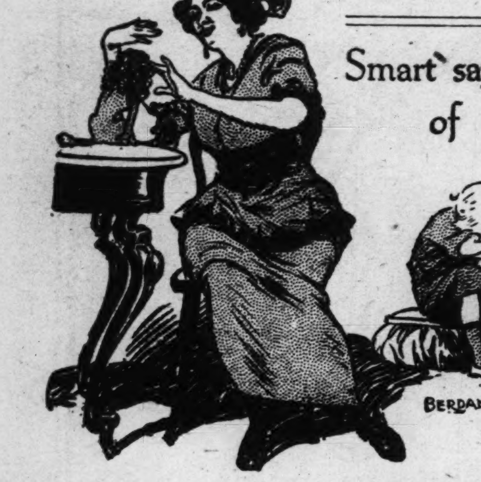
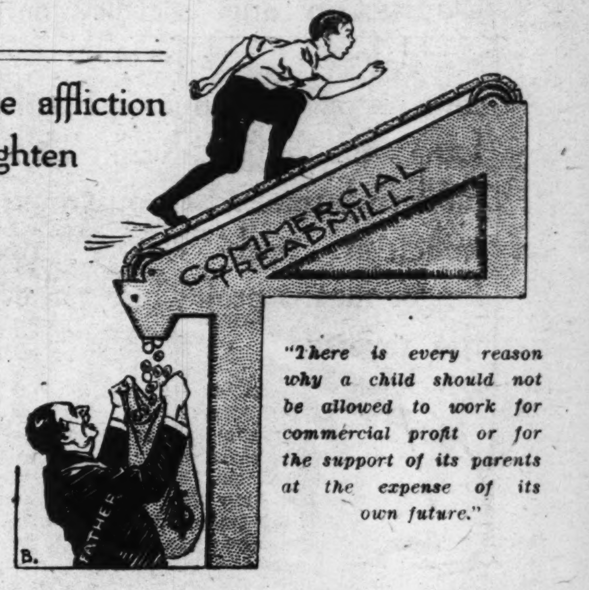
(Note—He has None.)

Smart sayings by a smart man, smarting under the affliction of other men's offspring, which may enlighten real parents . . . .



"It is easier to love the company of a dog than of a commonplace child between the ages of six and maturity."

PRECISELY because George Bernard Shaw, though married, has no children of his own, he no doubt considers himself better qualified than anyone in the world to instruct parents as to how they should rear their offspring. This characteristic Shavian paradox is probably the raison d'etre for a 100-page essay on "Parents and Children" which the Anglo-Irish humorist prefixes to his recent play, "Misalliance" (Constable). And, after all, his attitude is only another version of the proverb that "Old maids' children are the best raised." Following are selected epigrams from the essay:



"There is every reason why a child should not be allowed to work for commercial profit or for the support of its parents at the expense of its own future."

THE manufacture of monsters is by no means peculiar to China. The Chinese (they say) make physical monsters. We revile them for it and proceed to make moral monsters of our own children.

Every child has a right to its own bent. It has a right to dislike its mother or father or sister or brother or uncle or aunt if they are antipathetic to it.

The old observation that members of large families get on in the world holds good because in large families it is impossible for each child to receive what schoolmasters call "individual attention."

The fact is, simply, that a child is a nuisance to a grown up person. What is more, this nuisance becomes more and more intolerable as the grown up person becomes more cultivated, more sensitive and more deeply engaged in the highest methods of adult work.

People of high character and intelligence cannot be plagued with the care of children. A child is a restless, noisy little animal, with an insatiable appetite for knowledge and consequently a maddening persistence in asking questions.

The evidence shows that it is easier to love the company of a dog than of a commonplace child between the ages of six and the beginnings of controlled maturity; for women, who cannot bear to be separated from their pet dogs, send their children to boarding schools cheerfully.

The true cry of the kind mother after her little rosary of kisses is "Run away, darling." It is nicer than "Hold your noise, you young devil; or it will be the worse for you;" but fundamentally, it means the same thing: that if you compel an adult and a child to live in one another's company either the adult or the child will be miserable.

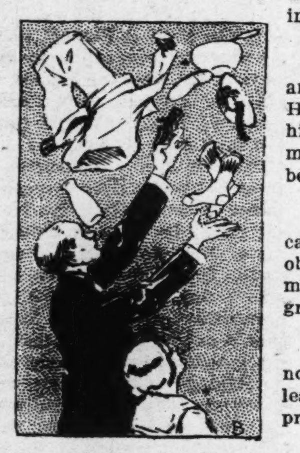
If you once allow yourself to regard a child as so much material for you to manufacture into any shape that happens to suit your fancy, you are defeating the experiment of the Life Force. You are assuming that the child does not know its own business, and that you do. In this you are sure to be wrong.



"No child should be brought up to suppose that its food and clothes come down from heaven."

The parent who says to his child: "I am one of the successes of the Almighty; therefore, imitate me in every particular or I will have the skin off your back" (a quite common attitude), is a much more absurd figure than the man who, with a pipe in his mouth, thrashes his boy for smoking.

Two adult parents, in spite of a house to keep and an income to earn, can still interfere to a disastrous extent with the rights and liberties of one child. But by the time a fourth child has arrived they are not only outnumbered two to one, but are getting tired of the thankless and mischievous job of bringing up children in the way they think they should go.

In many families it is still the custom to treat childhood frankly as a state of sin, and impudently proclaim the monstrous principle that little children should be seen and not heard.

There is, on the whole, nothing intended for innocent people so horrible as a school.

All your childish hatred of your jailer and flogger (your schoolmaster) is nothing to his adult hatred of you; for he is a slave forced to endure your society for his daily bread.

When I went to school as a very small boy I knew a good deal of Latin grammar which I had been taught in a few weeks privately by my uncle. When I had been several weeks at school this same uncle examined me and discovered that the net result of my schooling was that I had forgotten what he had taught me and had learnt nothing else.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

I can read French as easily as English; and under pressure of necessity can turn to account some scraps of German and a little operatic Italian; but these I was never taught at school. Instead I was taught lying, dishonorable submission to tyranny, dirty stories, a blasphemous habit of treating love and maternity as obscene jokes, hopelessness, evasion, derision, cowardice and all the blackguard's shifts by which the coward intimidates other cowards.

With the world's bookshelves loaded with fascinating and inspired books, the very manna sent down from Heaven to feed your souls, you are forced to read a hideous imposture called a school book, written by a man who cannot write; a book from which no human being can learn anything.

The school remains what it was in my boyhood, because its real object remains what it was. And that object, I repeat, is to keep children out of mischief: mischief meaning for the most part worrying the grownups.

If our universities would exclude everybody who had not earned a living by his or her own exertions for at least a couple of years, their effect would be vastly improved.

No child should be brought up to suppose that its food and clothes come down from Heaven or are miraculously conjured from space by papa.

The child's rights, being clearly those of any other human being, are summed up in the right to live. And this right to live includes, and in fact is, the right to be what the child likes and can, to do what it likes and can, to make what it likes and can, to think what it likes and can, to smash what it dislikes and can.

The unsympathetic, selfish, hard people who regard happiness as a very exceptional indulgence to which children are by no means entitled, though they may be allowed a very little of it on their birthdays or at Christmas, are sometimes better parents in effect than those who imagine that children are as capable of happiness as adults.

As to children, who shall say what canings and birchings and terrifyings and threats of hell fire and impositions and humiliations and petty imprisonings and sendings to bed and standings in corners and the like they have suffered because their parents and guardians and teachers know everything so much better than Socrates or Solon?

At present it is assumed that the schoolmaster has a right to force every child into an attempt to become Porson and Bentley, Leibnitz and Newton, all rolled into one.

Think of the years and years of weary torment the women of the piano-possessing class have been forced to spend over the keyboard, fingering scales. How many of them could be bribed to attend a pionaforte recital by a great player?

"Go and see what baby is doing; and tell him he mustn't" is the last word of the nursery; and the grimmest aspect of it is that it was first formulated by a comic paper as a capital joke.

Ruskin's parents were wise people who gave John a full share of their own life, and put up with his presence both at home and abroad when they must sometimes have been very weary of him.

The whole tendency of our family and school system is to set the will of the parent and the school despot above conscience as something that must be deferred to abjectly and absolutely for its own sake.

Ask the Duke whether he could pass the standard examination of 12-year-old children in elementary schools, and he will admit, with an entirely placid smile, that he would almost certainly be ignominiously plucked.

In spite of Dickens and his picture of little Paul Dombey dying of lessons, we persist in heaping upon growing children and adolescent youths and maidens tasks Pythagoras would have declined out of common regard for his own health and common modesty as to his own capacity.

I have more than once thought of trying to introduce the shooting of children as a sport, as the children would then be preserved very carefully for 10 months in the year, thereby reducing their death rate far more than the fusillades of the sportsmen during the other two would raise it.

It is the sensible schemes, unfortunately, that are hopeless in England. Therefore I have great hopes that my own views, though fundamentally sensible, can be made to appear fantastic enough to have a chance.

Parents could run away from disagreeable children or drive them out of doors or even drop their acquaintance, temporarily or permanently, without inhumanity.

I myself was never on bad terms with my mother: we lived together until I was 42 years old, absolutely without the smallest friction of any kind; yet when her death set me thinking curiously about our relations, I realized that I knew very little about her.

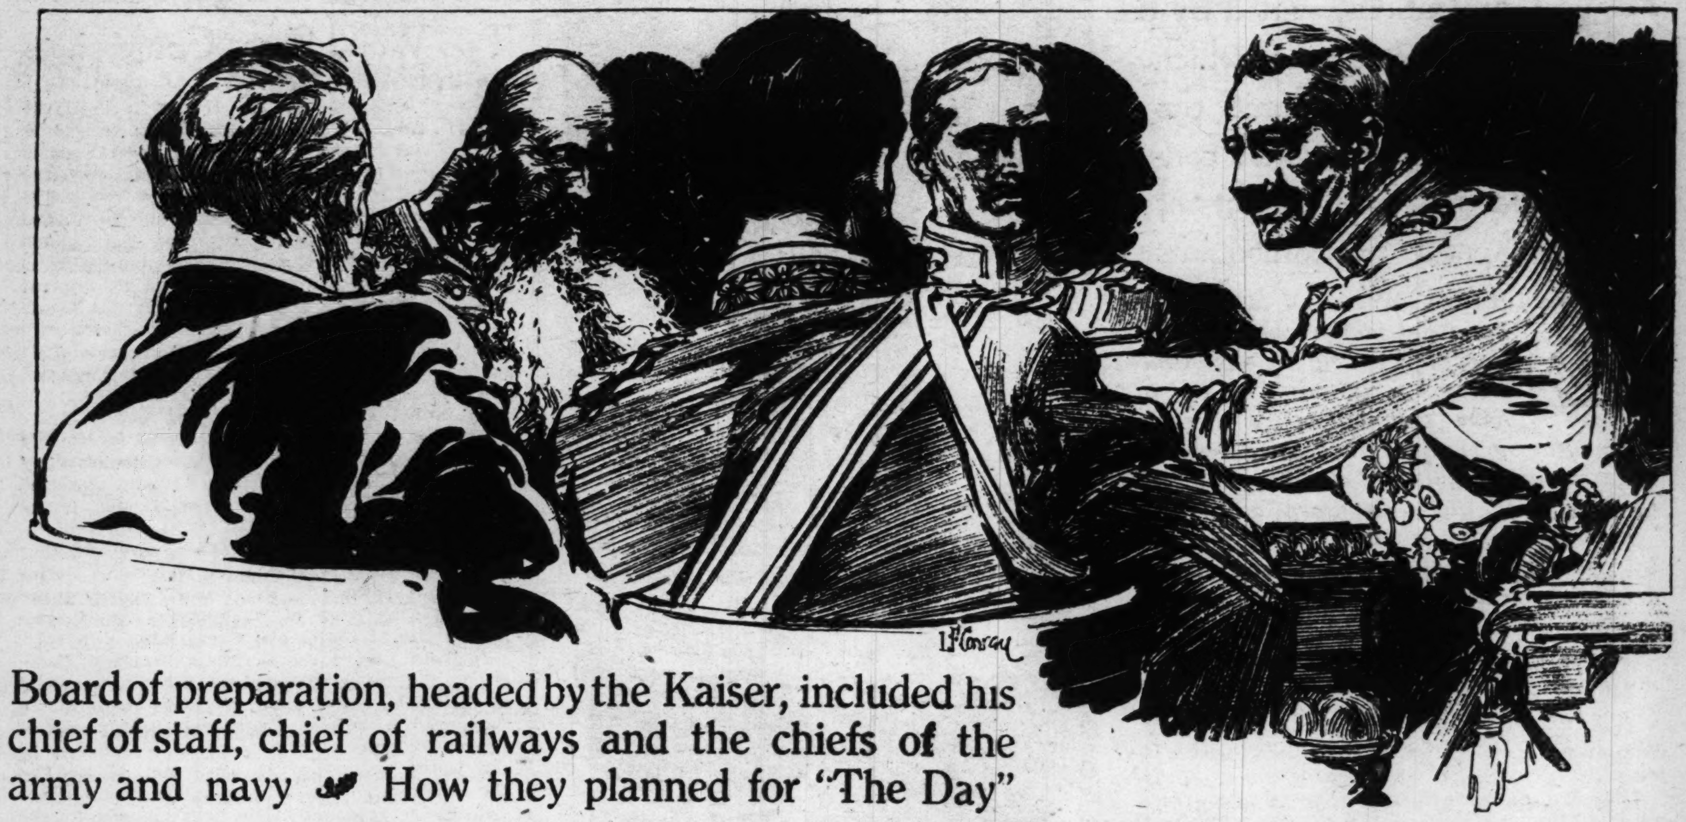
THE BIG FIVE OF GERMANY'S WAR MACHINE



Board of preparation, headed by the Kaiser, included his chief of staff, chief of railways and the chiefs of the army and navy ❧ How they planned for "The Day"

FIVE men sat in a dingy little room in the "General Stab Gebaeude," Berlin, and threw a whole world into war.

There was no representative of finance or diplomacy present, for when these five men got together it meant that the rule of finance and diplomacy had ceased. They were the Powers. They were the Powers before which all the other powers of earth must wait. How they measured up to their power, only history can tell; but for a few minutes they held the destiny of the world in their hands. They said: "War." And war it was.

They were the heads of the German fighting machine.

The five were the Emperor, the chief of the General Staff, the Minister of War, the Minister of Railways and the chief of the "Admiral Stab"—the navy.

How these men acted, how they were able to brush aside every other consideration and interest, and how they set in motion the greatest military machine of all history has just been revealed for the first time. It has been revealed by a secluded resident of New York City, "Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves," one of the few real men of mystery in modern civilization, who held for a number of years a very high position with the German secret service.

By means of Dr. Graves' book, "The Secrets of the German War Office" (McBride-Nast), it is possible to understand how Germany fell like a thunderbolt upon her allied enemies, appearing everywhere at once, advancing uniformly in spite of the "impregnable positions" of the allies and the repeatedly reported "annihilation" of her ranks.

Note who the men were and the inexorable precision of the machine may be apprehended.

First, the Emperor. He was sole commander of the nation. He had to yield to no Minister nor Parliament. He had to grant no favor. Never had political expediency intruded upon the single operation of this fighting machine. Never was it necessary to gratify a single officer's personal ambition. Efficiency had been the single goal and brains, ability and scientific knowledge had been the only considerations.

At his right was the "Chef des General Stab." This General Staff, which he controlled, was made possible only by the same autocracy, the same freedom from anything resembling politics or "pull."

At the Emperor's left the Minister of War, the one man in the Ministry who counted when the question of questions was to be discussed.

The chief of the "Admiral Stab" must needs be present. For years all German naval officers had drunk a toast to "The Day," by which they meant the day when Germany might cope with England on the sea. "The Day" might presently dawn.

And the Minister of Railways. He was as important as any member of the quintette. For the railways of the empire have not been built to carry tourists. They have been built by the state to carry soldiers, and to carry them by the million at a moment's notice, to all the strategical points on the frontier. For 20 years not a spur has been built in which this was not the chief consideration. Berlin had become the center of a veritable spider's web, from which triple and quadruple trunk lines extended to every strategical center, each in turn connected with every district post in the empire. At all times the Minister of Railways was ready with a military time table, which, at the scratch of a pen, could supercede the one in force.

The machine itself began to develop immediately after Napoleon conquered Prussia. As a compliment to Luise of Prussia, this susceptible genius, contrary to the advice of Talleyrand, allowed the Prussians to have a standing army of 12,000 men. Under another type of genius, Gen. Stein, 12,000 were brought in, drilled, discharged and another 12,000 enlisted. In three years 180,000 drilled troops were at hand. The machine then started was merged during the wars of '64, '66 and '70 into the machine of the German empire.

The mobilization schedules were the work of Helmuth von Moltke. Von Heeringen was a worthy successor. Moltke played chess as a passion. Heeringen amuses himself with 30,000 lead soldiers.

The General Staff, now in control of 5,000,000 fighting men, consists of 180 to 200 experts, none of whom owe their promotion to anything but their own expertness.

The same strategy evinced by Gen. Stein has governed the whole development of the machine. The Reichstag limited the standing army to just bearable proportions. It did not decree that well conducted men could not be given from two to four months off their military term. This provision added 75,000 to the army. The backbone of the army was the noncommissioned officers. When mustered out they were usually drafted into minor administrative positions in the railway or other state service. So the army always controlled the state in every branch through army-trained administrators. The higher administrative positions were similarly held by regular officers. The merchant marine was controlled by the navy in the same way.

"Dr. Armgaard Graves."

FIRST of all, he is NOT Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves. Just who he is, five persons on earth know. One of them is now at the very head of the forces directing the greatest fighting machine in human history. "Graves" entered the service of this machine at 24; he is now 39; he was one of the most trusted members of the German secret service; he was sent on its most important missions and became intimate with every secret of state. Finally, it was feared that he had learned too much, more than it was good that any individual outside of the very inside should know; he was sent to England to get some intricate naval plans. A letter was sent to him with a faulty address, in spite of the fact that the Intelligence Department in the German empire never makes such mistakes. He was captured as a spy, convicted in an English court, in one of the most sensational international trials in history. He was led to believe that the German Government had planned this mishap and asked to join the English secret service. Unknown to all except Earl Grey and a few intimates, he was released from prison. On June 12, 1913, he startled every Government in the world by publicly announcing his presence in New York.

"DR. ARMGAARD KARL GRAVES."

The whole country was subdivided into bezirks commandos, district posts. Here every possible conscript within the limits was registered and recorded. Also every motor car, taxi, bus, truck and motor cycle was registered and recorded. They were subject to conscription as well.

At each district post full equipment for the number of possible conscripts in the district was kept. The transformation of citizens to soldiers was instantaneous.

Outside of all regular appropriations, there was $120,000,000 in gold on hand for immediate war expenses. It was in no bank, but in steel, subterranean vaults in the fortress of Spandau. Two hundred million marks had been buried there after the Franco-Prussian war, part of the indemnity paid by France. On Oct. 1, for many years, three ammunition wagons loaded with gold coin have passed over the drawbridge to the old Julius Thurm and their contents placed in the vaults. The Kaiser or his heir apparent has inspected the hoard twice a year. Weighing machines and accounting apparatus make it possible to get an accurate inventory of the treasure in two hours. Most of this has been told before. It has also been denied and termed a myth. Dr. Graves says he knows.

The highways, no less than the railroads, were constantly prepared for war. Tourists have often wondered at the magnificent, perfectly kept roads in obscure parts of the empire, where traffic was almost unknown. They now understand. They were kept thus for fear there would be an hour's delay in the transportation of men and supplies to some necessary outposts on the day that war might be declared.

Dr. Graves tells of an incident during the Kaiser maneuvers a few years ago, when a member of the General Staff asked the position of a certain train then transporting troops. In two and a half minutes an operator found the train between two stations 310 miles away.

Five minutes after the declaration of war, the military time table was in force and the railways of the empire under complete military control. Steam was up in the waiting engines, as it always was in any crisis. Railway experts in the General Staff took command, and the railway corps of the standing army, the Eisenbahn Regimenter, consisting of trained railway builders and mechanics, was put to work.

The head of the greatest of all fighting machines never

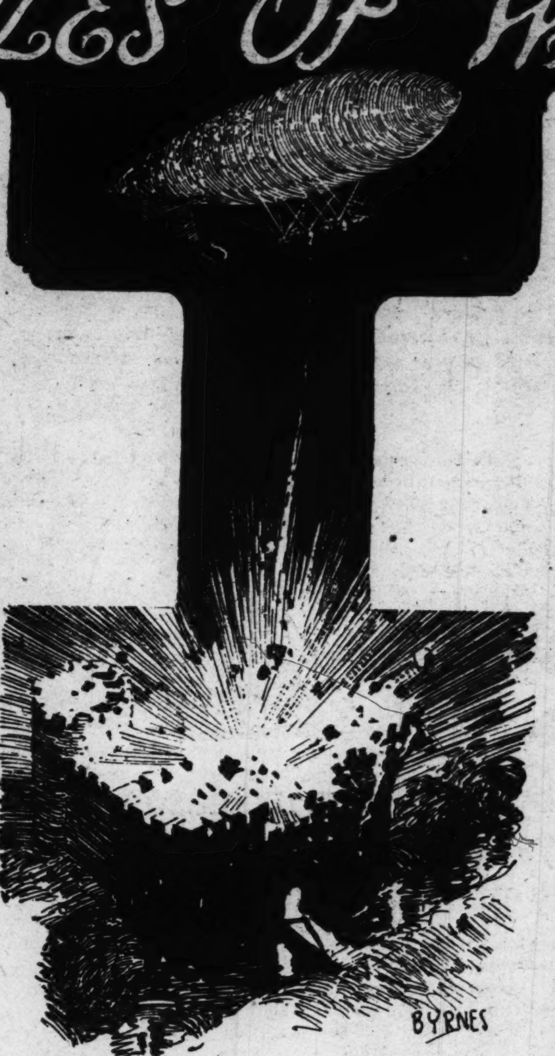
THE RULES OF WARFARE

Hague Conventions, signed by the nations now at war, which were designed to limit the horrors of international conflict and preserve the rights of neutrals and noncombatants



In sieges and bombardments all necessary steps must be taken to spare, so far as possible, buildings dedicated to religion, art, science or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospitals and places where the sick and wounded are collected, provided they are not being used at the time for military purposes

EMPEROR WILLIAM on the one hand and, on the other, a commission dispatched to the United States by the King of Belgium have complained to President Wilson as an umpire that their respective adversaries are guilty of violating the "rules of war." If the sanguinary and furious "game of kings," as now being played in Europe, is amenable to rules, precisely what are they, and how were they formulated?

They are embodied in a number of Conventions and Declarations adopted, for the most part unanimously, at the two World Peace Conferences held at The Hague, in 1899 and 1907. The first was attended by the representatives of 26 nations and the second by the delegates of 44 states. Both assemblages of plenipotentiaries included representatives of all the nations now at war.

Tragic events have proved that these rules, from which the legislators almost hoped a millenium, do not define war as it now is, or as it probably soon will be, but only as it ought to be—that is, if war must be waged at all. From the great mass of laws the following excerpts are selected, as expressing the most interesting and the most important aims of those idealists who aspired to debrutalize that which perhaps can never be humanized:

Opening of Hostilities.

THE contracting Powers recognize that hostilities between themselves must not commence without previous and explicit warning, in the form either of a reasoned declaration of war or of an ultimatum with conditional declaration of war.

The existence of a state of war must be notified to the neutral Powers without delay, and shall not take effect in regard to them until after the receipt of notification, which may, however, be given by telegraph. Neutral Powers, nevertheless, cannot rely on the absence of notification if it is clearly established that they were in fact aware of the existence of a state of war.

The Laying of Submarine Mines.

It is forbidden to lay unanchored automatic contact mines, except when they are so constructed as to become harmless one hour at most after the person who laid them ceases to control them.

It is forbidden to lay anchored automatic contact mines which do not become harmless as soon as they have broken loose from their moorings.

It is forbidden to use torpedoes which do not become harmless when they have missed their mark.

When anchored automatic contact mines are employed, every possible precaution must be taken for the security of peaceful shipping.

The belligerents undertake to do their utmost to render these mines harmless within a limited time, and, should they cease to be under surveillance, to notify the danger zones as soon as military exigencies permit, by a notice addressed to shipowners, which must also be communicated to the governments through the diplomatic channel.

At the close of the war, the contracting powers undertake to do their utmost to remove the mines which they had laid, each power removing its own mines. As regards anchored automatic mines laid by one of the belligerents off the coast of the other, their position must be notified to the other party by the power that laid them, and each power must proceed with the least possible delay to remove the mines in its own waters.

(Russia and Montenegro refused to sign this Convention at all. Germany and France declined to agree to Article 2, which reads: "It is forbidden to lay automatic contact mines off the coast and ports of the enemy, with the sole object of intercepting commercial shipping." Great Britain entered a general reservation to the effect that "the mere fact that the said Convention does not prohibit a particular act or proceeding is not to be considered as depriving the government of His Brittanic Majesty of the right to contest the legality of said act or proceeding.")

Bombs From Aeroplanes and Dirigibles.

THE contracting Powers agree to prohibit, for a period extending to the close of the Third Peace Conference, the discharge of projectiles and explosives from balloons or by other new methods of a similar nature.

(Germany, France, Russia, Japan, Servia and Montenegro refrained from signing this measure. It was signed by Great Britain, Austria-Hungary and Belgium. The signatories are now, however, released from adherence to the Declaration by a provision that "It shall cease to be binding when, in a war between the contracting Powers, one of the belligerents is joined by a non-contracting power," such as Germany. A similar Declaration forbidding the use of aerial projectiles, which was adopted at the 1899 Conference and which expired five years later, was signed by Germany, France, Japan, Russia and Montenegro, as well as by the powers which renewed their adherence to the measure in 1907. The Third Peace Conference, if it is held, will end in the autumn of 1915.)

Use of Dumdum and Gaseous Projectiles.

THE contracting Powers agree to abstain from the use of projectiles, the object of which is the diffusion of asphyxiating or deleterious gases.

The contracting parties agree to abstain from the use of bullets which expand or flatten easily in the human body, such as bullets with a hard envelope which does not entirely cover the core, or is pierced with incisions.

On Belligerents.

THE laws, rights and duties of war apply not only to armies, but also to militia and volunteer corps fulfilling the following conditions:

1. To be commanded by a person responsible for his subordinates.
2. To have a fixed distinctive emblem recognizable at a distance.
3. To carry arms openly; and
4. To conduct their operations in accordance with the laws and customs of war.

The inhabitants of a territory which has not been occupied, who, on the approach of the enemy, spontaneously take up arms to resist the invading troops without having had time to organize themselves, shall be regarded as belligerents if they carry arms openly and if they respect the laws and customs of war.

The armed forces of the belligerent parties may consist of combatants and noncombatants. In the case of capture by the enemy, both have a right to be treated as prisoners of war.

Two World Peace Conferences

THE meeting of the Second World Peace Conference at The Hague in 1907, the first impulse towards which originated in St. Louis, was hailed by enthusiasts as "the greatest step towards peace since Grotius founded international law," and as a realization of the dream of the Federation of the World and the Parliament of Man. However, the London Times, organ of British public opinion, declared that "The conference was a sham and has brought forth a progeny of shams, because it was founded on a sham."

It was attended by the plenipotentiaries of 44 nations, which included all of the Latin-American countries except Honduras and Costa Rica. Thirteen formal conventions covering nearly every phase of warfare were adopted. Of interest to Americans are the facts that the "Convention regarding the laws and customs of land warfare" was adopted from General Order No. 100, issued in 1863 by President Lincoln in the form of instructions to the United States army; and that the "Convention regarding the rights and duties of neutral powers in naval war" embodies the rules of the Treaty of Washington, agreed upon by the United States and Great Britain in 1871.

In 1904, during the Lousiana Purchase Exposition, the Interparliamentary Union, in session in St. Louis, called upon President Roosevelt to inaugurate a movement towards calling a Second Peace Conference. His response is attested in the words beginning the Final Act adopted by the Congress: "The Second International Peace Conference, proposed in the first instance by the President of the United States." But Roosevelt relinquished the honor of convoking the Congress to the Czar of Russia, who desired the distinction of assembling the second, as well as the first conference, which met at The Hague in 1899.

Laws and Customs of War on Land.

THE contracting Powers shall issue instructions to their armed land forces, which shall be in conformity with the regulations respecting the laws and customs of war on land, annexed to the present convention.

A belligerent party which violates the provisions of the said regulations shall, if the case demands, be liable to pay compensation. It shall be responsible for all acts committed by persons forming part of its armed forces.

Prisoners of War.

PRISONERS of war are in the power of the hostile Government, but not of the individuals or corps who capture them.

They must be humanely treated.

Work done for the state (by prisoners of war) is paid at the rates in force for work of a similar kind done by soldiers of the national army, or, if there are none in force, at a rate according to the work executed.

Prisoners who, after succeeding in escaping, are again taken prisoners, are not liable to any punishment on account of the previous flight.

Prisoners of war liberated on parole and recaptured bearing arms against the Government to whom they had pledged their honor, or against the allies of that Government, forfeit their right to be treated as prisoners of war and can be brought before the courts.

Prisoners of war shall be subject to the laws, regulations and orders in force in the army of the state in whose power they are. Any act of insubordination justifies the adoption towards them of such measures of severity as may be considered necessary.

Means of Injuring the Enemy.

THE right of belligerents to adopt means of injuring the enemy is not unlimited. It is especially forbidden:

To employ poison or poisoned weapons.

To kill or wound treacherously individuals belonging to the hostile nation or army.

To kill or wound an enemy who, having laid down his arms, or having no longer means of defense, has surrendered at discretion.

To declare that no quarter will be given.

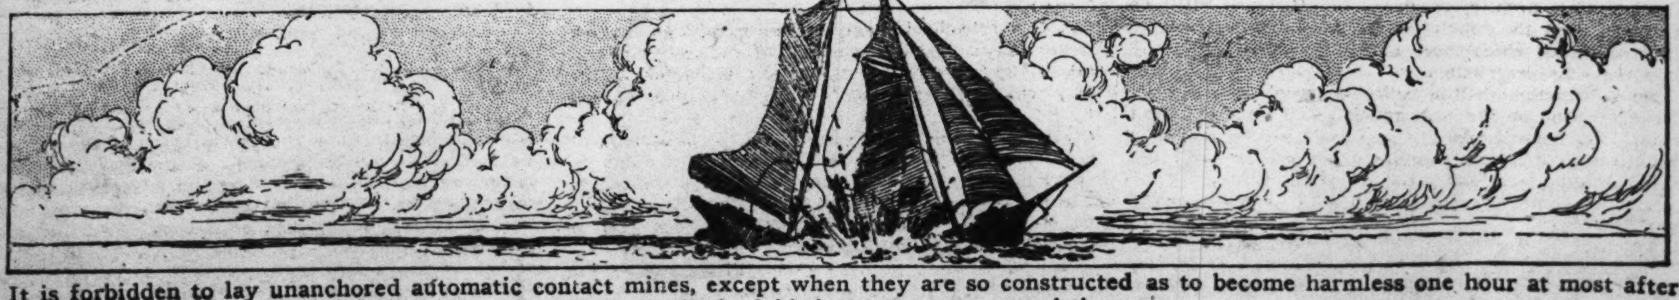
To employ arms, projectiles or material calculated to cause unnecessary suffering.

To make improper use of a flag of truce, of the national flag, or of the military insignia and uniform of the enemy, as well as the distinctive badges of the Geneva Convention (Red Cross).

The attack or bombardment, by whatever means, of towns, villages, dwellings or buildings which are undefended is prohibited.

The pillage of a town or place, even when taken by assault, is prohibited.

Ruses of war and the employment of measures neces-



It is forbidden to lay unanchored automatic contact mines, except when they are so constructed as to become harmless one hour at most after the person who laid them ceases to control them.

ADOPTED BY 44 NATIONS

How mines may be planted, the safety of prisoners and their property assured, when towns may be bombarded, the rights of ships on the sea, and all laws of honorable warfare sary for obtaining information about the enemy and the country are considered permissible.

The officer in command of an attacking force must, before commencing a bombardment, except in cases of assault, do all in his power to warn the authorities.

In sieges and bombardments all necessary steps must be taken to spare, as far as possible, buildings dedicated to religion, art, science or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospitals and places where the sick and wounded are collected, provided they are not being used at the time for military purposes.

It shall be the duty of the besieged to indicate the presence of such buildings or places by distinctive and visible signs, which shall be notified to the enemy beforehand.

Spies.

A PERSON can only be considered a spy when, acting clandestinely or on false pretenses, he obtains or endeavors to obtain information in the zone of operations of a belligerent, with the intention of communicating it to the hostile party.

Soldiers not wearing a disguise who have penetrated into the zone of operations of the hostile army, for the purpose of obtaining information, are not considered spies.

Similarly, the following are not considered spies: Soldiers and civilians, carrying out their missions openly, intrusted with the delivery of dispatches intended either for their own army or for the enemy's army. To this class likewise belong persons sent in balloons for the purpose of carrying dispatches and, generally, of maintaining communications between the different parts of any army or a territory.

A spy who, after rejoining the army to which he belongs, is subsequently captured by the enemy, is treated as a prisoner of war, and incurs no responsibility for his previous acts of espionage.

Flags of Truce.

A PERSON is regarded as bearing a flag of truce who has been authorized by one of the belligerents to enter into communication with the other, who advances bearing a white flag. He has a right to inviolability, as well as the trumpeter, bugler or drummer, the flag-bearer and interpreter who may accompany him.

The commander to whom a flag of truce is sent is not in all cases obliged to receive it.

Occupation of Hostile Territory.

TERRITORY is considered occupied when it is actually placed under the authority of the hostile army. The occupation extends only to the territory where such authority has been established and can be exercised.

Private property cannot be confiscated.

Family honor and rights, the lives of persons and private property, as well as religious convictions and practice, must be respected.

The authority of the legitimate Power having in fact passed into the hands of the occupant, the latter shall take all the measures in his power to restore and insure, as far as possible, public order and safety, while respecting, unless absolutely prevented, the laws in force in the country.

A belligerent is forbidden to force the inhabitants of territory occupied by it to furnish information about the army of the other belligerent, or about its means of defense.

It is forbidden to compel the inhabitants of occupied territory to swear allegiance to the hostile Power.

If, in the territory occupied, the occupant collects the taxes, dues and tolls imposed for the benefit of the state, he shall do so, as far as is possible, in accordance with the rules of assessment and incidence in force, and shall in consequence be bound to defray the expenses of the administration of the occupied territory to the same extent as the legitimate Government was so bound.

If, in addition to the taxes mentioned in the above article, the occupant levies other money contributions in the occupied territory, this shall only be for the needs of the army or of the administration of the territory in question.

No general penalty, pecuniary or otherwise, shall be inflicted upon the population on account of the acts of individuals for which they cannot be regarded as jointly and severally responsible.

No contribution shall be collected except under a written order, and on the responsibility of a commander in chief. The collection of the said contribution shall only be effected as far as possible in accordance with the rules of assessment and incidence of the taxes in force. For every contribution a receipt shall be given to the contributors.

An army of occupation can only take possession of cash, funds and realizable securities which are strictly the property of the state, depots of arms, means of transport, stores and supplies, and, generally, all movable property belonging to the state which may be used for military operations.

No general penalty, pecuniary or otherwise, shall be inflicted upon the population on account of the acts of individuals for which they cannot be regarded as jointly and severally responsible.

The property of municipalities, that of institutions dedicated to religion, charity and education, the arts and sciences, even when state property, shall be treated as private property.

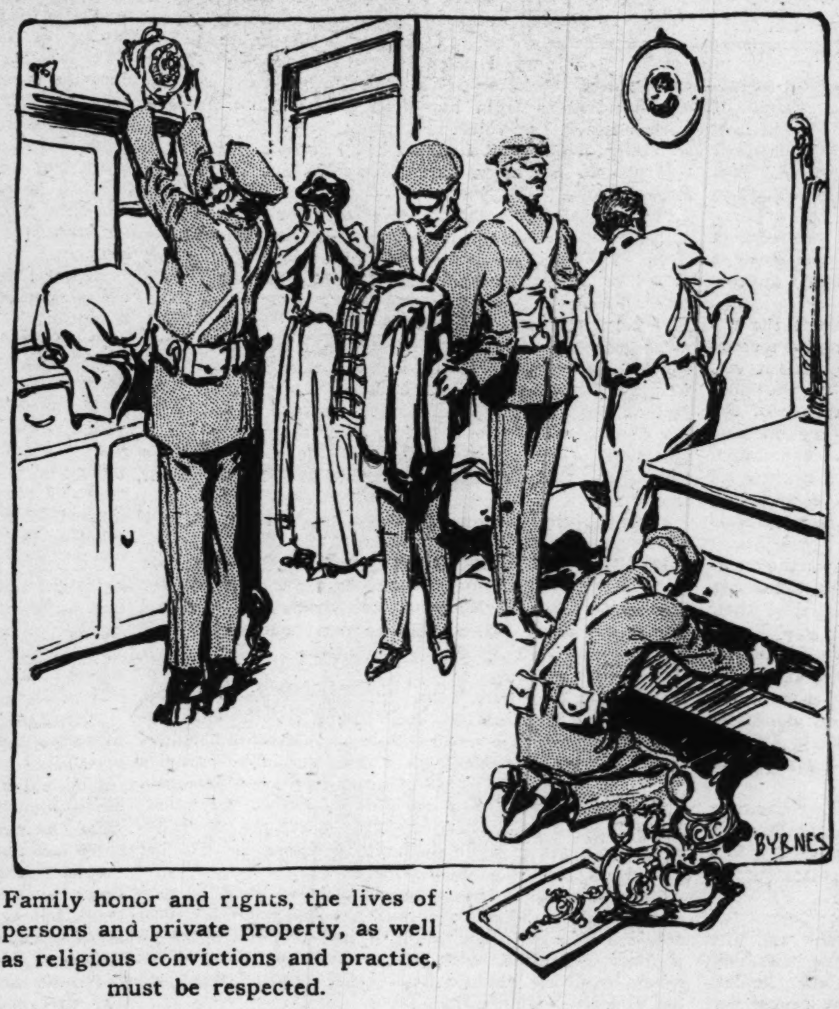
All seizure of, destruction or willful damage done to institutions of this character, historic monuments, works of art and science, is forbidden, and should be made the subject of legal proceedings.

Rights and Duties of Neutral Powers.

THE territory of neutral Powers is inviolable.

Belligerents are forbidden to move troops or convoys of either munitions of war or supplies across the territory of a neutral Power.

The fact of a neutral Power resisting, even by force, attempts to violate its neutrality cannot be regarded as a hostile act.



Family honor and rights, the lives of persons and private property, as well as religious convictions and practice, must be respected.

Corps of combatants cannot be formed nor recruiting agencies opened on the territory of a neutral Power to assist the belligerents.

The responsibility of a neutral Power is not engaged by the fact of persons crossing the frontier separately to offer their services to one of the belligerents.

A neutral Power is not called upon to prevent the export or transport, on behalf of one or other of the belligerents, of arms, munitions of war, or, in general, of anything that can be of use to an army or a fleet.

The following acts shall not be considered as committed in favor of one belligerent:

(a) Supplies furnished or loans made to one of the belligerents, provided that the person who furnishes the supplies or who makes the loan lives neither in the territory of the other party nor in the territory occupied by him, and that the supplies do not come from these territories; and

(b) Services rendered in matters of police or civil administration.

The Status of Enemy Merchant Ships.

WHEN a merchant ship belonging to one of the belligerent Powers is, at the commencement of hostilities, in an enemy port, it is desirable that it should be allowed to depart freely, either immediately, or after a reasonable number of days of grace, and to proceed, after being furnished with a pass, direct to its port of destination or any other port indicated.

The same rule should apply in the case of a ship which has left its last port of departure before the commencement of the war and entered a port belonging to the enemy while still ignorant that hostilities had broken out.

A merchant ship, unable, owing to circumstances of "force majeure," to leave the enemy port within the period contemplated in the above article, or which was not allowed to leave, shall not be confiscated.

Enemy merchant ships which left their last port of departure before the commencement of the war, and are encountered on the high seas while still ignorant of the outbreak of hostilities, cannot be confiscated.

They are only liable to detention on the understanding that they shall be restored after war, without compensation, or to be requisitioned, or even destroyed, on payment of compensation; but in such case provision must be made for the safety of persons on board as well as the security of the ship's papers.

After touching at a port in their own country or at a neutral port, these ships are subject to the laws and customs of maritime warfare.

(Germany and Russia declined to subscribe to the last three paragraphs.)

Enemy cargo is likewise liable to be detained and restored after the termination of the war without payment of compensation, or to be requisitioned on payment of compensation, with or without the ship.

The present convention does not affect merchant ships whose build shows they are intended for conversion into warships.

Conversion of Merchant Ships.

MERCHANT ships converted into warships must bear the external marks which distinguish the warships of their nationality.

The commander must be in the service of the state and duly commissioned by the competent authorities. His name must figure in the list of the officers of the fighting fleet.

The crew must be subject to military discipline.

A belligerent who converts a merchant ship into a warship must, as soon as possible, announce such conversion in the list of warships.

Bombardment by Naval Forces.

A place cannot be bombarded solely because automatic submarine contact mines are anchored off the harbor.

Military works, military or naval establishments, depots of arms of war "materiel," workshops or plants which could be utilized for the needs of the hostile fleet or army, and the ships of war in the harbor, are not included in this prohibition.

After due notice has been given, the bombardment of undefended ports, towns, villages, dwellings or buildings may be commenced, if the local authorities, after a formal summons has been made to them, decline to comply with requisitions for provisions or supplies necessary for the immediate use of the naval force before the place in question. These requisitions shall be in proportion to the resources of the place in question.

Undefended ports, towns, villages, dwellings or buildings may not be bombarded on account of failure to make money contributions.

In bombardment by naval forces all the necessary measures must be taken by the commander to spare as far as possible sacred edifices, buildings used for scientific, artistic or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospitals and places where the sick and wounded are collected, on the understanding that they are not used at the same time for military purposes.

It is the duty of the inhabitants to indicate such monuments, edifices or places by visible signs, which shall consist of large, stiff, rectanguar panels, divided diagonally into two colored triangular portions, the upper portion black, the lower portion white.

A town or place, even when taken by storm, may not be pillaged.

Cutting Submarine Cables.

Submarine cables connecting an occupied territory with a neutral territory shall not be seized or destroyed except in the case of absolute necessity. They must likewise be restored and compensation fixed when peace is made.

Wireless Stations in Neutral Territory.

Belligerents are forbidden to (a) Erect on territory of a neutral power a wireless telegraphy station or other apparatus for the purpose of communicating with belligerent forces on land or sea; and (b) Use any installation of this kind established by them before the war on the territory of a neutral power for purely military purposes and which has not been opened for the service of public messages.

Postal Correspondence.

THE postal correspondence of neutrals or belligerents, whatever its official or private character may be, found on the high seas on board a neutral or enemy ship, is inviolable.

"Man Is a Fighting Animal"

BY JOSEPH H. CHOATE,

First Delegate of the United States to the Second Peace Conference at the Hague.

MAN is a fighting animal. He has fought his way to his present advanced position, which is the result of the survival of the fittest; but I am one of those who believe that by and by, by the general consensus of the public opinion of the world, he will be generally satisfied that war does not pay; that wars and the necessary preparation for war are, as the Emperor of Russia said in his first summons, a terrible burden, fatal to the prosperity of nations who indulge in them; that wars will become less and less frequent as time goes on . . . . and that at last will be realized the dream of Grotius, the founder of international law, that all the civilized nations of the earth will submit to its dictates, whether in war or in peace.

I. Aphrodite From the Sea Foam.

As Lieut. Forbes watched the surge of automobiles from the superior height of a motor bus it amused him to see how little people lost of the childhood spirit of truancy and adventure. All this grown-up, sophisticated world seemed to be run like a school, with joyous deviltry whenever and wherever the teacher's back was turned, but woe to whoso was caught; everyone winking at guilt till authority detected it, then everyone solemnly approving the punishment.

Mr. Forbes had not seen Fifth avenue since the pathetic old horse coaches were changed to the terrific motor stages. He had not seen the avenue since it was widened—by the simple process of slicing off the sidewalks and repairing their losses at the expense of the houses. The residences on both sides of the once so stately corridor looked to him as if a giant had drawn a huge carving knife along the walls, lopping away all the porticos, columns, stoops and normal approaches, and leaving the inhabitants to improvise such exits as they might.

As far as Forbes could see north and south, the roadway was glutted from curb to curb with automobiles. And their number astonished him even less than their luxury.

From his swaying eery he seemed to be completely lost in a current of idle wealth. The throng, except for the chauffeurs, the policemen and a few men whose trades evidently fetched them to this lane of pleasure—the throng was almost altogether women. And to Forbes' eye, unused to city standards, almost all the women were princesses.

At first, as his glance fell on each radiant creature, his heart would cry: "There is one I could love! I never shall forget her beauty!" And before the vow of eternal memory was finished it was forgotten for the next.

There was one woman, however, that he could not forget, because he could not find out what she was like. In the slow and fitful progress up the avenue it chanced that his stage kept close in the wake of an open landaulet. The stage never fell far behind, and never quite won alongside.

A young woman was alone in the tonneau. At least he judged that she was young, though his documents were scant. Her head was completely hidden from his view by a hat that was just exactly big enough to accomplish that work of spite.

He grew eager and more eager to see what flower-face was hidden under that overturned straw flower pot of a hat.

Now and then, as the stage pushed forward, he would be near enough to make out the cunning architecture of the mystery's left shoulder and the curious felicity of her left arm. Seen thus detached, they fascinated him and kindled his curiosity. Bu and by he was swept near enough to glimpse one rounded knee crossed over the other, and one straight shin creasing a tight skirt, and a high-domed instep, and the peak of one slim shoe.

And once, when the traffic was suddenly arrested, he was close enough to be wildly tempted to bend down and snatch off that irritating hat. He was a fearless soldier, but he was not so daring as all that. Still, he heard her voice as she gossiped to a momentary neighbor who raised his hat in a touring car held up abeam her own.

Her voice did not especially please him; it was almost shrill, and it had the metallic glitter of the New York voice. Her words, too, were a trifle hard, and as unpoetic as possible.

"We had a rotten time," she said. "I was bored stiff. You ought to have been there."

And then she laughed a little at the malice implied. The policeman's whistle blew and the cars lurched forward. And the stage lumbered after them like a green hippopotamus. Forbes began to feel a gnawing anxiety to see what was under that paradise feather.

It became a matter of desperate necessity to overtake that will-o'-the-wisp chauffeur and observe his passenger. Great expectations seemed to be justified by the fact that nearly every policeman saluted her and smiled so pleasantly that the smile lingered after she was far past.

Forbes noted, too, that the people she bowed to in other cars or on the sidewalk seemed to be important people, and yet to be proud when her hat gave a little wren-like nod in their directions.

At Fifty-first street, in front of the affable gray cathedral, there was a long and democratic delay while a contemptuous teamster, perched atop a huge steel girder, drove six haughty stallions across the avenue; drove them slowly, and puffed deliberate smoke in the face of the impatient aristocracy.

Here a dismounted policeman paced up and down, followed by a demure horse with kindly eyes. This officer paused to pass the time of day with the mysterious woman, and the horse put his nose into the car and accepted a caress from her little gloved hand. Again Forbes heard her voice:

"You poor old dear, I wish I had a lump of sugar."

It was to the horse that she spoke, but the officer answered:

"The sight of you, ma'am, is enough for um."

Evidently he came from where most policemen come from. The lady laughed again. She was evidently not afraid of a compliment. But the policeman was. He blushed and stammered:

"I beg your pardon, Miss"——

He gulped the name and motioned the traffic forward. Forbes was congratulating himself that at least she was not "Mrs." Somebody, and his interest redoubled just as the young woman leaned forward to speak to her chauffeur. She had plainly seen that there was a policeless space ahead of her, for the driver put on such speed that he soon left Forbes and his stage far in the rear.

Forbes, seeing his prey escaping, made a mental note of the number of her car, "48150, N. Y., 1913."

He had read how the police traced fugitive motorists by their numerals, and he vowed to use the records for his own purposes. He must know who she was and how she looked. Meanwhile he must not forget that number—48150 N. Y., 1913—the mystic symbol on her chariot of translation.

Helpless to pursue her with more than his gaze, Forbes watched from his lofty perch how swiftly she fled northward. He could follow her car as it thridded the unpoliced traffic by that dwindling bird-of-paradise plume, that sphinxic riddle of a feathery question mark.

The plume went very respectably across the plaza, for policemen were there on fixed post; but, once beyond, the feather diminished into nothingness with the uncanny speed of a shooting star.

She was gone. And now he wondered whither she sped and why. To what tryst was she hastening at such dreadful pace, with such rash desire? He felt almost a jealousy, at least an envy, of the one who waited at the rendezvous. He was almost afraid to follow farther lest his curiosity be more than sated.

His irresolution was solved for him. The stage was turning out of Fifth avenue, to cross over to Broadway and Riverside drive. Forbes was not done with this lane. He rose to leave the bus. It lurched and threw him from bench to bench. He negotiated with difficulty the perilous descent, clutched the handrail in time to save himself from pitching head first to the street, clambered down the little stairway with ludicrous awkwardness, stepped on solid asphalt with relief, and walked south.

The press gradually thickened, and before long it was dense and viscid, as if theater audiences were debouching at every corner.

The stream was still almost entirely woman; beautiful woman at the side of beautiful woman, or treading on her high heels; chains of womankind like strings of beaded pearls, hordes of women, dressed in infinite variations of the prevailing mode. They strode or dwaddled, laughing, smiling, bowing, whispering or gazing into the windows of the shops.

But to Forbes there was an overpowering fleshliness in the display. It reminded him of the alleged festivals of Babylon, where all the women piously offered themselves to every passerby and rated their success with heaven by their prosperity with strangers.

He had dwelt for years among half-clad barbarians, unashamed Igorrotes; but these women looked nakeder than those. The more studiously they were robed the less they had on.

He brooded like a sneering Satan for a time upon the meaning of the dress-parade, and then the glory of it overpowered him again. He felt that it would be a hideous world without its luxuries. It was well, he concluded, that men should dig for gold, dive for pearls, climb for aigrets, penetrate the snows for furs, breed worms for silk, build looms, and establish shops—all in order that the she-half of the world should bedeck itself.

The woman of the bird-of-paradise feather was buried in Forbes' mind as deeply as if a balcony full of matinee girls had collapsed upon her. Forbes fell in love at first sight a hundred and fifty times on the avenue. Had he met any one of that cohort again under favoring auspices he might have found in her arms the response he sought. It might have brought him tragic unrest, or the sort of home comfort that makes no history.

Perhaps he did meet some of these potential sweethearts later; but if he did, he could not remember them and he did not heed them, for he was by then involved inextricably with the one he had hunted for and lost.

When he found her he did not remember her any more than the others. She impressed him as a woman of extreme fragility, yet she was to test his strength to its utmost, his endurance, his courage, his readiness for hazard.

Perhaps it would have been better for both if they had never come nearer together than in that shadowy, that foreshadowing game of hide-and-seek in the full sun among the throngs.

Perhaps it was better that they should meet and endure the furnace of emotions and superb experiences in gorgeous scenes.

But, whether for better or worse, they did meet, and their souls engaged in that grapple of mutual help and harm that we call love.

When he returned to his hotel he was a tourist who has done too much art gallery. Fifth avenue had been an ambulant Louvre of young mistresses, not of old masters.

He crept into a tub of water as hot as he could endure and simmered there, smoking the ache out of him, and imagining himself as rich as Haroun al Raschid, instead of a poor subaltern in a hard-worked little army, with only his pay and a small sum that he had saved, mainly because he had been detailed to regions where there was almost nothing fit to buy.

The price of his room at the hotel had staggered him, but he charged it off to a well-earned holiday and pretended he was a millionaire. He rose from the steaming pool and turned an icy shower on himself with shuddering exhilaration. His blood leaped as at a bugle call, a reveille, to life.

He heard the city shouting up to his windows, and he began to fling on his clothes. And then he realized that he knew nobody among those roaring millions. He cursed his luck and flung into his bathrobe. As he knotted the rope he felt that he might as well be a cowed and cloistered monk in a desert as his friendless self in this wilderness of luxury.

Happiness was bound to elude him as easily as that woman of the white query-plume eluded him when he in his 10-cent bus had pursued her in her $5000 landaulet. All he had of her was the back of her hat and the number of her car—N. Y. 41508. Or was it N. Y. 85140, or—what the devil was the number?

He had not brought away even that!

Nothing can be lonelier than a room in even a best hotel when one is lonesome and when one's window looks out upon crowds. Forbes had pitched his tent at the Knickerbocker and his view was of Longacre Square.

He sat in the dark room in an armchair and muffled his bathrobe about him, watching the electric signs working like solemn acrobats.

Forbes wanted to be among the crowds again. He could not tolerate the solitude. He resolved to go forth. It inspired him with pride to put on his evening clothes. While he dressed he sent his silk hat to be ironed by the hotel valet. It came back an ebon crown.

He set it on his head, tapped the top of it smartly, swaggered to the elevator, bowed to the matronly floor clerk as to a queen, went down to the main dining room and tried to look at least a duke. He was glad to be in full dress, for the other people were. The head waiter greeted him with respect and handed him a bill of fare with expectation.

He ordered more than he had an appetite for, and tried not to blanch at the prices.

The room emptied rapidly as the hour for opera and theater arrived. But he lingered, not knowing where to go. He pretended to be in no hurry. He had, indeed, more leisure than he enjoyed. Still he sat smoking and protracting his coffee, and haughtily playing that he was not starving for companionship.

When almost the last couple was gone he realized that he faced an evening of dismal solitude. He realized also that a number of kind-thought gentlemen had erected large structures for the entertainment of lonely people and had engaged numbers of gifted persons to enact stories for their diversion.

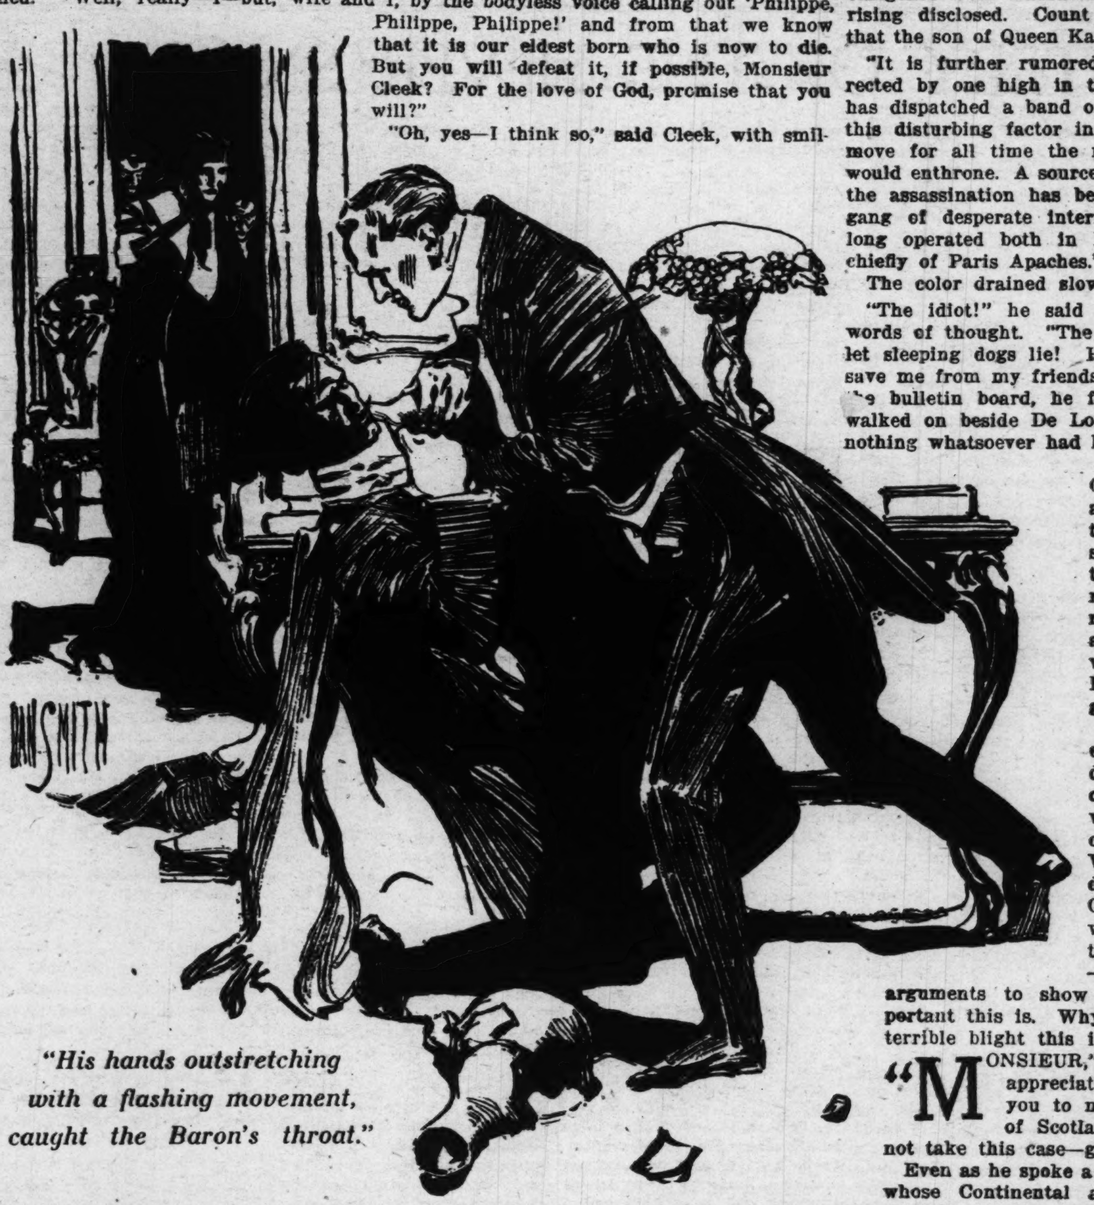
He called for his account, paid it with a large bill and ignored the residue with a ruinous lifting of the brows as he accepted a light for his exotic cigar.

He helped to put false ideas in the hatboy's head with the price he paid for the brief storage of his hat and coat and stick. He sauntered to the news stand with the gracious stateliness of a Czarovitch incognito, and bought a ticket from the theater agent.

The boy who twirled the squirrel-cage door told him that the theater was just down the street, and received a lavish fee for the information. Forbes was soon in the lobby, but the first act was almost finished. Rather than disturb the people already seated, he stood at the back leaning over the rail. Presently he heard the susurrus of robes and turned to see a small group of later comers than himself.

At the head went something that he judged to be a woman, though all he saw was a towering head dress, a heap of elaborately coiffed hair, a wreath of mist, an in-

"AILSA LORNE stepped out of the cab with hands outstretched to Cleek. 'What devils!' breathed Cleek, his face turning crimson and then a ghastly white. For a moment, he seemed almost to lose control of himself; and then the iron nerve reasserted itself and the Man of the Forty Faces smilingly advanced to meet Miss Lorne."



"His hands outstretching with a flashing movement, caught the Baron's throat."

understanding?"

"Hum-m-m! It's as bad as that, is it?"

"Worse, monsieur—worse! For myself, I call it a riddle which has no answer; but madame, my wife, who has read of you and your many exploits, will have it that all things that happen in nature, have a key, and that that key 'the great Cleek' can find, no matter how cunningly it is secreted."

"Hum-m-m! Very complimentary of the lady, I am sure," said Cleek, altering his position so that the light from the one window in the room was behind him and full upon his client. Then, very abruptly: "Suppose you begin at the beginning, monsieur, and give me some idea of this—er—riddle and of yourself?"

THIS little bombshell had come so unexpectedly, the request was so unusual and so unlooked for, that monsieur was for the moment bowled over.

"Of myself?" he exclaimed. "Well, really—I—but, monsieur, there is so little to tell about myself it scarcely merits your interest. I am an Austrian by birth, an ex-captain of Hussars, a millionaire through the goodness of my late father, an Englishman by naturalization, and—that is all. As for the other thing—the horror, the mystery, the riddle, I am hoping you can solve"——

He turned away suddenly, made one or two agitated turns up and down the room, then stopped before Cleek once more, and flung out his arms with a despairing gesture. "Monsieur, it will dethrone my reason, this thing. Save me, save my children, save my stricken wife, Monsieur Cleek. Unriddle this thing, this horror, this nightmare. 'Lay' that bodyless shape, that invisible ghost, and save us from the snare of the silver cord!"

"Snare of what?" replied Cleek, a queer smile moving over his lips as he glanced to all appearances, out of the window, yet took in monsieur out of the tail of his eye. "I'm afraid I don't quite grasp the idea, my dear sir."

"Who could, monsieur? Name of the heavens, who could, when it is at once so diabolical, so seemingly impossible, that one might believe it the mere fancy of a mind diseased? But my children die of it, monsieur! There can be no 'fancy' in that. Conceive, if you can, of a thing that has neither substance, nor shape, yet speaks with a human voice and slays with a monster's lust! Conceive of a thing that comes to your bedside in the night—a thing that mocks you when you stab at it, laughs when you shoot, and, calling out the name of one of your children, marks that child for death, and marks it so well that, do what you may, fight as you will, guard it as you can, in the morning that child is found dead in its bed, throttled with a silver cord that has ensnared it while it slept and has wrung the innocent life out of it!"

Before he could check it the thought that was hammering at the back of Cleek's head put itself into words.

"Monsieur!" exclaimed De Louvisan in a voice of shocked amazement.

"The little boys at cricket out there," said Cleek serenely, as he waved his hand toward the window. "A lob ball cut to the left as clean as a whistle! A good trick! I knew it would be when it came. But, pardon—I am a cricket enthusiast, Monsieur de Louvisan; that must be my excuse. Let us return to this most interesting case. So your children die like that, do they? Hum-m-m! Very, very remarkable indeed! How many have you lost in this amazing manner, may I ask?"

"Four, monsieur—four out of the six with which it has pleased Heaven to bless me."

"All in this country?"

"No, monsieur. One in Austria, the other three here."

"Hum-m-m! I see! Rather strange that three mysterious murders of that sort should have occurred in England without some report getting into the newspapers or some hint of it reaching Scotland Yard!" the curious one-sided smile looping up the left corner of his mouth.

"Monsieur mistakes me," put in Monsieur de Louvisan hastily. "When I said this country I alluded to Great Britain as a whole, not to England alone. One of the children perished in Wales, the others in Scotland, and the affair did get into the papers—the Welsh and Scottish papers. I shall be able to show the reports to monsieur, if he will honor my home with his presence. It may be that they were copied into the English papers; it may be that monsieur himself saw them and has forgotten. It was a long time ago—two years last month."

"QUITE so," agreed Cleek with serene composure. "I do forget things sometimes. Hum-m-m-! So you have lost four children in this mysterious and unprecedented manner, eh? One in Austria, one in Wales and one in Scotland? Dear, dear! How horrible! Tell me something, monsieur: Are you expecting to lose one in England, too, that you have made this unexpected appeal to me?"

"Monsieur, yes—God have pity on me and my wife—yes!" the man made answer, with a great show of agitation and distress. I have neglected to tell you, Monsieur Cleek, that there is always a warning before these horrible visitations culminate in death, and that for two nights before the slaying of one of my children the Unseen Presence manifests its intentions by calling out in the night the name of the child that is next to die.

"Last night we were awakened from our sleep, my wife and I, by the bodyless voice calling out 'Philippe, Philippe, Philippe!' and from that we know that it is our eldest born who is now to die. But you will defeat it, if possible, Monsieur Cleek? For the love of God, promise that you will?"

"Oh, yes—I think so," said Cleek, with smiling composure. "I rather like the idea of that silver snare, monsieur. Where are you at present located, Monsieur de Louvisan? Am I right in assuming that, as you have chosen this place for our meeting, your present residence is within a short distance of Chiswick?"

"No, monsieur, you are not. It was chance—nothing more—that led me to select 'The Coach and Horses.' A social obligation is accountable for my presence in Chiswick today—that, and that only. As for my residence, monsieur may possibly have heard of the severe illness which has obliged Lord Laverstock to vacate his English home and sojourn for a time in Egypt?"

"Yes. I have heard," replied Cleek. "Lungs affected; threatened consumption, I believe; and it compelled him to abandon that glorious old place of his in the wooded deeps of Roehampton—Gamlingay House, I think it is called; and there's a gallery there with some wonderful old pictures, hidden staircase, secret panels and medieval things of that sort, isn't there?"

"Monsieur is right in all particulars. It is that house I have taken, furnished, as it stands, on a five-years' lease from his unfortunate lordship; and it is there, in that place of winding passages and secret recesses, that the thing which robs me of my children now lurks, and if you can find it, if you can run it to earth"—— His voice seemed to choke, his body to be wrung by a violent muscular convulsion; he flung out both arms, with a wild, almost theatrical gesture, and, clasping his hands, extended them toward Cleek.

"Ah, save us!" he went on. "My carriage is within easy reaching distance—come with me, monsieur; come with me to my stricken home, and save the reason, perhaps the life, of a tortured and distracted mother. They say of you that you are tender of women, monsieur; they say of you that your ear is ever given to the cry of one of them who is in need; come then, at the cry of this broken and despairful woman, whose only hope you are!"

"Well played!" said Cleek again, his face toward the window, the curious one-sided smile again looping up his lip. "What is that you say, Monsieur de Louvisan—go with you? Go now? Yes, certainly I will. Order your carriage, and we'll be off as soon as ever you like."

"Oh, monsieur, how can I thank you?" exclaimed De Louvisan, grabbing his hand and wringing it heartily. "It is only a short walk to the stable where I have put up my carriage. Come, monsieur, let us start at once."

Cleek agreed, and, waiting a moment while De Louvisan settled with the landlady for the private use of the parlor in which the interview had taken place, followed him to the door and walked out into the narrow passage wherein the tavern stood.

De Louvisan walked on briskly, and Cleek, his brows puckered up in a thoughtful knot, walked briskly with him. They branched out of the narrow lane into a more public thoroughfare, where people were moving about the pavement, and the more enterprising tradesmen were already lighting the gas jets in their shop windows; and here—just here—while they were walking along together, something happened which struck the color out of Cleek's face and sent a nervous tremor flashing through all the fibers of his body. It was merely a bulletin board, set outside of a newsvendor's shop—on which was pasted the placard of the latest evening edition of the Daily Luminary, and bearing on its yellow surface the disquieting words: "Latest intelligence from Mauravania. Secret of the threatened rising disclosed. Count Irma said to have declared that the son of Queen Karma is living and in England!

"It is further rumored that a powerful faction directed by one high in the councils of the monarchy has dispatched a band of assassins to London to find this disturbing factor in Mauravanian affairs and remove for all time the man whom the revolutionists would enthrone. A source, usually reliable, reports that the assassination has been placed in the hands of a gang of desperate international criminals who have long operated both in London and Paris, made up chiefly of Paris Apaches."

"The idiot!" he said to himself in the soundless words of thought. "The fool, not to know enough to let sleeping dogs lie! How well it is said: 'Heaven save me from my friends!'" And, looking away from the bulletin board, he fetched one deep breath, and walked on beside De Louvisan as serenely as though nothing whatsoever had happened.

"Monsieur," finally said Cleek, "I am afraid I cannot accept your case. I am sorry to disappoint you after having seemingly accepted it, but the truth of the matter is I just recollect a vital piece of business that I must transact this afternoon and which will prevent me from going with you. Monsieur, I must wish you good-day."

"But," burst out the foreigner, looking over his shoulder as if expecting someone or something, "you said you would take the case. You cannot disappoint us now. Why, it would kill the Madame de Louvisan. It is impossible! Come let us return to the inn, where we may talk further. I think"—peering up the street—"I may be able to add some arguments to show you how tremendously important this is. Why, think of our child and the terrible blight this is casting over our lives."

"MONSIEUR," coldly responded Cleek. "I appreciate all that, but I must refer you to my equally efficient associates of Scotland Yard. Personally, I cannot take this case—good afternoon!"

Even as he spoke a taxicab driven by a chauffeur whose Continental appearance was only thinly disguised by his London clothes, drew up to the curb and Ailsa Lorne stepped out with hands outstretched to Cleek.

"What devils," breathed Cleek, his face turning crimson and a ghastly white. For a moment he seemed almost to lose control of himself, and then the iron nerve reasserted itself and the Man of the Forty Faces smilingly advanced to greet Miss Lorne.

"Rather a strange neighborhood for an unattended young lady," he said.

"Yes! but, Mr. Cleek, the need is so urgent. This, I suppose, is Monsieur de Louvisan. I have just come from your wife who sought me out and pleaded with me to get Mr. Cleek to take this case. I promised her I would do what I could."

Bowing low the foreigner expressed his gratitude in almost too effusive a manner, which gave Cleek time to cast a warning glance at Miss Lorne, but that young lady in her innocence did not catch its meaning.

"You will help Monsieur de Louvisan, will you not, Mr. Cleek," the girl continued.

"I am sorry, but I have just been telling the gentleman that I can do nothing for him," he replied as gently as possible.

Into the girl's face came a look of injury and disappointment which for a moment disarmed Cleek.

"But Mr. Cleek," she began, "you told me once a long time ago"——

"Don't," he said in a voice husky with emotion. "I know—this is different, but, even so, I will take the case, Miss Lorne, and you will see that I will do my best."

"If you will call a cab"—— said Miss Lorne.

"But this is Miss Lorne's taxicab," broke in the foreigner, indicating the machine standing at the curb, with the evil-looking driver at the wheel.

"I beg your pardon," said Cleek, hailing another taxicab which happened to be passing, "but I think Miss Lorne would prefer the carefulness of this unmistakably Irish chauffeur. Miss Lorne, allow me," and with a whispered admonition to return home immediately and a few directions to the chauffeur that made the honest Irishman open wide his eyes and buckle down to the wheel as if his life depended on the safety of his fare, the girl sped away.

"I am at your service," said Cleek to the foreigner.

As his gaze travelled across the road to a tobacconist's shop, over which there swung an enameled sign cause it did not occur to it to make a theatrical demonstration of affectionate delight when its mother returned after an absence: a typical example of the way in which spurious family sentiment is stoked up.

It is not to be wondered at that some people hold that blood relationship should be kept a secret from the persons related, and that the happiest condition in this respect is that of the foundling who, if he ever meets his parents or brothers or sisters, passes them by without knowing them.

"He (the schoolmaster) is a slave forced to endure your society for his daily bread."

The Roman father was a despot; the Chinese father is an object of worship: the sentimental modern Western father is often a playfellow looked to for toys and pocket money.

All one can say is, roughly, that the homelier the home, and the more familiar the family, the worse for everybody concerned. The family ideal is a humbug and nuisance.

You decide that the Hermes of Praxiteles and Wagner's Tristan are not suited for young girls; and your daughter marries somebody appallingly unlike either Hermes or Tristan solely to escape from your parental protection.

Just at present our young people are going mad over ragtime, apparently because snycopated rhythms are new to them. If they had learnt what can be done with syncopation from Beethoven's Third Leonora Overture, they would enjoy the ragtime all the more; but they would put it in their proper place as amusing vulgarity.

Liberty is the breath of life to nations; and liberty is the one thing that parents, schoolmasters and rulers spend their lives in extirpating for the sake of an immediately quiet and finally disastrous life.

"Excuse me for a moment, my friend," he said. "My cigarette case is empty, and perhaps they keep the brand I smoke in that place over there. I'll step over and see while you are settling with the liveryman."

It was a full 10 minutes before he reappeared, and by that time De Louvisan's carriage stood ready and waiting, De Louvisan's horses pawing impatiently at the ground.

"Sorry," said Cleek airily as he came up and joined him. "The shopman is a Turk who does not know a dozen words of English, and I had some difficulty in making him understand. Shall we be off, monsieur? The journey is rather a long one and I take it that Madame de Louvisan must be extremely anxious."

"Ah, more than anxious," the Austrian replied; "she will be suffering a hundred deaths of suspense and terror until we return!" and, unlatching the carriage door, he stood aside for Cleek to enter, stepped in after him, flung an agitated "Quite all right, Pierre," to the silent coachman, and a moment later the journey to Roehampton had begun.

The last glimmer of day had gone, and night—cool, silent, shadowless—had dropped down over the upreaching tree tops when the carriage bowled into the hush and solitude of Roehampton, swung round a wooded curve, flashed on noiseless rubber tires through a wide gateway, ran like a fleet moving shadow between lines of shadowy trees to a gray and silent house.

SILENT as had been the vehicle's approach its advent must have been eagerly awaited, for as it halted lights sprung up behind the tinted glass that arched the doorway of the entrance hall; the door itself swung inward, giving a glimpse of a corridor rich with carving, stately with antlered heads.

"Ah, it is you, Ponistierre," said De Louvisan as he advanced, with Cleek a serene and silent figure at his heels. "You have the ears of a cat, it would seem. Where is your mistress—in the nursery or in her boudoir?"

"In neither, monsieur," replied the servant, with a burr in his speech that made Cleek pick up his ears and twitch a swift, sharp glance toward him. "Madame is in the picture gallery—walking, walking, walking as though some fever burns within her. Shall I carry a message to her, or will monsieur go up?"

It was Cleek who gave a reply.

"Oh, let us go up, by all means," he said. "It is a good marksman who brings down two birds with one stone, monsieur, and to meet Madame de Louvisan and to stand in the presence of Lord Lavenstock's pictures at one and the same time will be a double pleasure, I assure you. But first, as I am a fastidious man, and rather careful of my toilet when entering the presence of ladies, will you permit me to make a necessary change? Ponistierre," turning serenely to the liveried servant, "you look an efficient valet, and, as such, assist me. First this, then this, now this, and viola! I am ready."

Speaking, he had given a twitch and a pull at two buttons situated upon either hip—buttons which came away with a length of thin stout twine attached—and let a part of his clothing fall upon the floor. Another twitch had taken off his coat and thrown it over Ponistierre's head, a third had removed the "captain's" wig and beard, and—a gentleman in faultless afternoon dress, fair of hair and smooth of face, stood waiting at De Louvisan's elbow.

"Monsieur," he began, "monsieur, if I had not seen"——

"Don't see—feel!" rapped out Cleek. Then he flashed around suddenly—moved with the quickness of a leaping cat to left and then to right. There was a sharp "click-click"—the snap of metal leaping into metal with the clamp of a lock—and before De Louvisan could move to evade it, or indeed had guessed what was coming, one band of steel was locked about his wrist, its fellow snapped fast around the lower rail of the staircase banister, and Cleek, kneeling on the floor and snapping a second pair of handcuffs upon the wrists of the struggling coat-enveloped servitor, was looking up at him and saying: "Got you, Merode! Got you at last, you hound, and the game, begun with the Red Crawl, ends here with the 'Silver Snare!' You, too, Serpice, my excellent 'Austrian' valet, who could not drop the burr of the Apaches from your blundering fool's head tongue—you, too, I've got; and now," rising to his feet and twitching back his head with a little laugh—"now gentlemen, 'The Cracksman' is once more at your service! Bawl, if you like; I'm going up, unaccompanied, to pay my respects to the lady in the case!"

Then he dashed by the figure chained to the banister rail, waved it an airy adieu, and went fleetly up the staircase. They followed him with their eyes, and neither spoke so long as his fleet-moving figure remained in sight.

Through the silence Cleek went on up through the stillness and the gloom, until the landing above was reached and at its far end a streak of light, arrowing out from the crack of a half-closed door, gave a glimpse of gold-framed pictures behind it.

He walked straight down, flung open the door, stepped in, and came upon just such a tableau as he had expected.

It strengthened, that cry, as her quick ear caught the sound of his approach across the oaken floor, and she knew that he was well within the four walls of the entrapping room; but of a sudden his clinking footsteps stopped—stopped short—while he was yet a dozen paces from her, and it came as a shock when a voice that was not the voice she had expected came down the long length of the room to her.

"Badly played, Margot," it said crisply. "The Silver Snare is a silver boomerang, you see, that comes back to the hand that cast it."

She twitched around on him with a queer, blurred cry, saw that he was alone, saw that he had come into the trap unaccompanied.

"Merode!" she flung out in a voice of blank amazement. "Merode, where are you? Merode, do you hear?"

"Merode is otherwise engaged," said Cleek serenely. "You'll find him keeping Serpice company at the foot of the stairs."

For an instant she was silent, amazed beyond all words, staring at him in open-mouth astonishment and breathing hard. Then of a sudden, her features relaxed, a smile moved up over her pretty brazen face, a smile that changed instantly into an open laugh, and, putting one curved hand to her lips, she flung forth suddenly the "Halo! Halo! la la loi!" of the Apaches, until the whole room rang with it.

This much Cleek had expected. That he would have others of her band to contend with was a thing on which he had reckoned, but what really came to pass came to him as an utter and complete surprise. No rush of footsteps clattered down the stairs; no tumbling mass of snarling men, blood drunk and savage, came piling through the door. Instead, first one picture shifted, and then another moving as panels sliding back in the four high walls, and in the gap left by the vanishing of each a man—an Apache—stood, making him the target of a leveled revolver, and "covering" him from all parts of the room.

They had got him, that was certain—got him, in spite of all his plans, all his reckless endeavors, and facing that certainty with a courage of a soul that is not afraid, he stood and looked straight down the room at Margot.

She was laughing still, laughing and looking at him with eyes of hate and jeering mockery. But of a sudden she struck her hands together with a sharp slapping sound, and then, the surprise of all surprises—the thing he had not dreamed of—the motive that lay behind the whole scheme of the thing called the Silver Snare confronted him.

A footstep clicked, a figure darkened the threshold of the open door, a man moved out of the darkness into the light, and, turning his eyes, Cleek saw him, and, seeing, understood.

All in a moment the Mauravanian puzzle fell to pieces, all in a moment he knew upon what errand Ulric of Mauravania really had dispatched that Baron de Carsarole to Great Britain; and what methods were to be adopted to quell the threatened rising. For the Baron de Carsarole stood before him.

"It is he," said the Baron turning round and looking up at Margot as she advanced toward him. "It is indeed the man I want. You are right, Mademoiselle. There is the check. One hundred thousand crowns, payable on presentation. You have your money, and you have your man. Now finish him!"

With that he twisted round on his heel, flashed one last look at Cleek, and moved to pass by him to the open door. But in that one moment, as the two men came abreast, Cleek, watching his chance, and knowing it when it came, seized upon it and acted.

As a hungry tiger leaps when it falls upon an unsuspecting quarry, so leaped he, his hands, out-reaching with a flashing movement, caught at the Baron's throat; his strong arms, jerking suddenly, whirled De Carsarole's body reeling and sprawling across the room until it landed with a thump against the wall where the electric button bulged, and then "snick" went the sound of the disconnected switch, the lights winked and went out, the blackness of night shut down over everything, and, under cover of that darkness, Cleek, ducking suddenly until his face was on a level with the floor, whipped out a revolver and fired a single shot.

And in a moment there was pandemonium.

EGGED on by Margot's shrilled outcry: "Get to the door! Head him off! Up with the lights! Kill him! Kill him, you idiots!" and yapping and snarling like a drove of panic-stricken curs, the Apaches poured out from their screening niches and flocked into the room until the place was thick with them. But as they moved other forces moved also. From below there arose suddenly a roar and a rush, a clatter of footsteps in the lower hall, a crash of glass and a jostle of bodies on the outer stairs, and a voice that could be no voice but Dollop's yelled out lustily: "That's it bobbies; that's the signal! Lay into 'em; bottle 'em. Nab every mother's son of 'em! Come on—come on!" and before the startled Apaches could realize what had happened the Law had sprung into the breach and a detachment of police came rushing pell-mell into the ink-black room.

"Where are yer, guv'ner? Where are yer, bless yer heart?" sang out Dollops, anxiously. "Got your telephone message, I did; rung up the Yard, and here we are, sir, for the beanfeast! Guv'ner, guv'ner, ain't yer here?"

"Yes," called back Cleek's voice in response. "All here, my lad, and quite busy, thank you! Turn up the light. This little riddle's solved."

And when the lights were turned on, so, in very truth, it was. For there, on one side of the room, gyves on her wrists, Margot stood, snarling, with a blue-coated policeman in charge of her. And on the other the Baron de Carsarole lay, his face battered and pummelled until it was one huge bruise, and over him stood Cleek.

THE grating of the brakes of an automobile suddenly stopped were heard outside and in a moment Superintendent Narkom pushed his way into the room followed closely by Ailsa Lorne.

"What have I done?" she wailed. "Oh, Mr. Cleek, what danger did I throw you into by my insane meddling? I disobeyed your instructions to go home and went to Mr. Narkom. I could not feel at ease. Why is Madame de Louvisan handcuffed?"

Cleek, advancing, looked fondly upon Miss Lorne and then with one of his queer half smiles said, "Well, you see, Miss Lorne, they took advantage of your tender heartedness.

"Through your compassion, however, you have given me the chance for which I have been wishing a long time. I would have thrown that chance away but for your appeal.

"The 'Silver Snare' has caught something after all, you see, Baron," he said, as he reached out for a pair of handcuffs, which a policeman proffered, and snapped them quickly on the Mauravanian's wrists. "Got you! Got you tight and fast, my friend; and I'm of the opinion that the Prime Minister of Mauravania is going to make a long, long stay in England. Take him, officers—he's yours! The lady is yours also; and so, too, is the lady's pal and partner, Monsieur Henri Merode, whom you will find attached to the banisters at the bottom of the stairs. The game's up, Margot; the play's played out, Monsieur de Baron; and as a reward for bringing it to an unexpected conclusion, I'll take this little check for one hundred thousand crowns, which I see you have been thoughtful enough to make out to 'Bearer.' Mademoiselle," bowing sarcastically to Margot, "my compliments, and goodby!"

In next week's story, "The Amsterdam Diamonds," Cleek pays two visits to New York for which certain American officials not only pay his expenses, but also grant him some thousands of dollars in addition.

The Big Five of Germany's War Machine

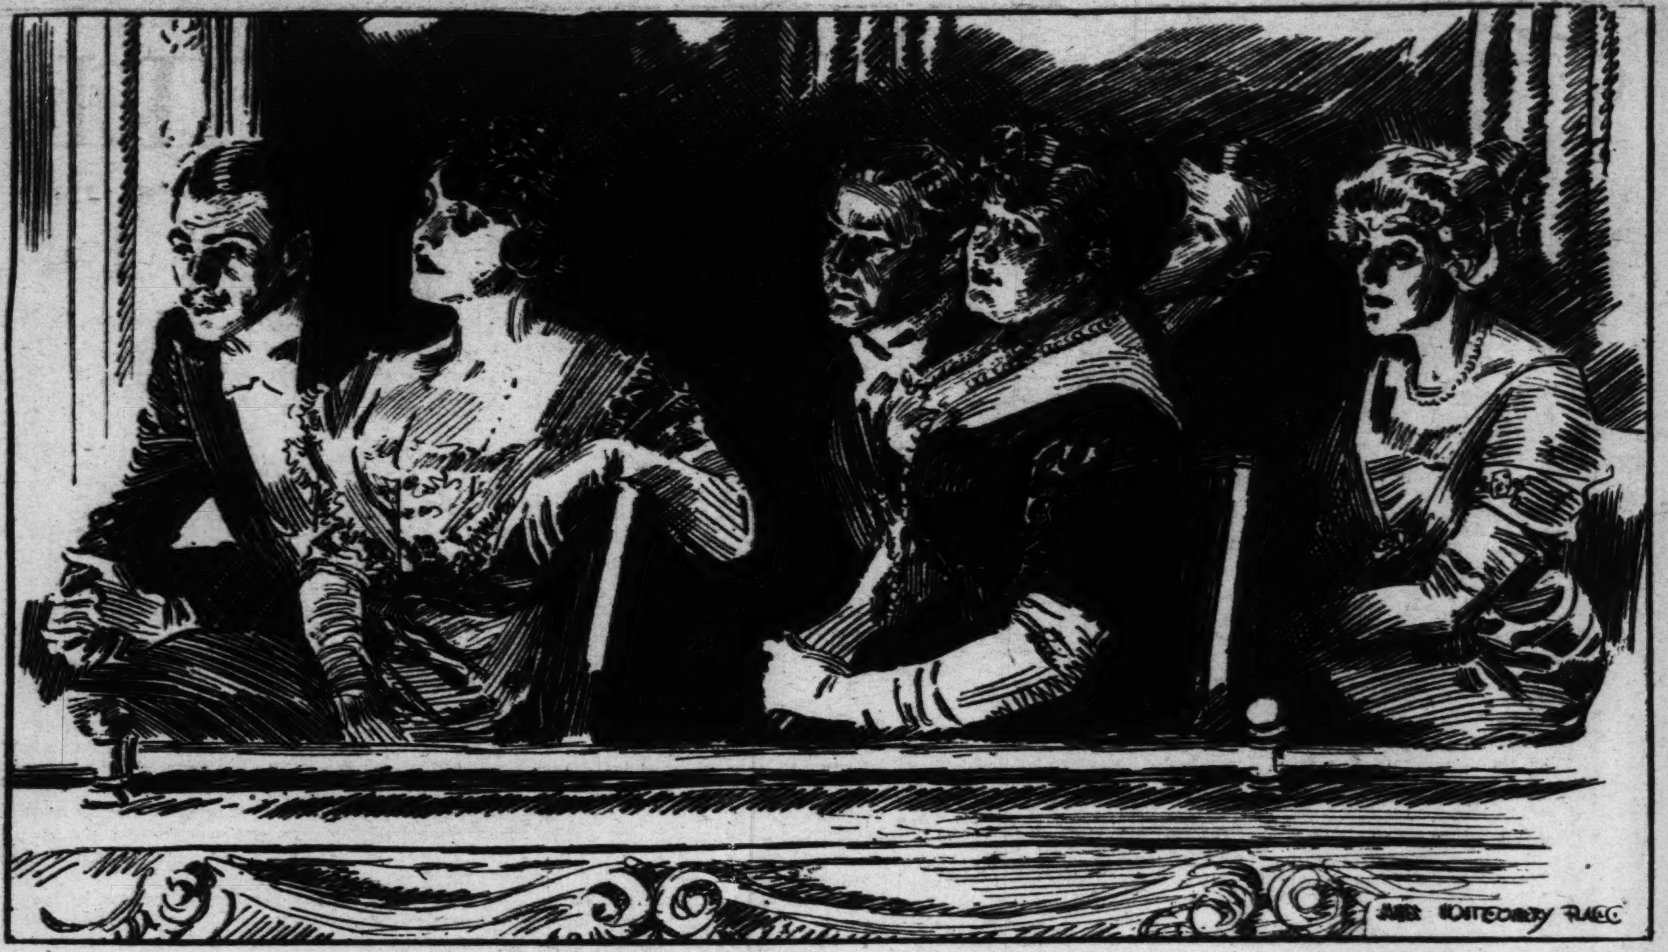
forgot its stomach. That essential organ was not left to the mercy of army contractors. Twelve months' supply of food was ready at all times in the Government storage and ware houses. It was not embalmed and poisoned. "Erbswurst" was a staple upon which particular dependence was placed. This is a preparation of peas, meal, bacon, salt and seasoning, compressed while dry in air-tight tubes. A tube weighing a quarter of a pound, mixed with hot water, will make a palatable meal.

Most interesting and most important of all branches of this fighting machine is the Intelligence Department. The business of its members is to know—to know everything that it might be advantageous for an army at war with all the world to know. Here are systematized all the possible data of general science, strategy, topography, ballistics, etc. Here also is tabulated all the gettable information concerning other nations and their people, with the plans and maps of the other countries and exact details concerning their forts and batteries.

To know every other country just as thoroughly as they know their own—that is the aim of officers in the Intelligence Department. No officer in the field can be taken by surprise through sheer ignorance of the land. It is impossible under the Prussian system for an army corps to lose any time or any strategic position through any such ignorance. Thus a boy in the Intelligence Department was able to talk with Dr. Graves about roadhouses, blacksmith shops and farmer's residences between two towns in England, although he had never been out of Germany in his life.

And it is not only the places but the people with whom the Intelligence Department deals. The machine is intimately acquainted with all the leaders of the allies, their personal weaknesses and hobbies, their habits of thought and all the little details by which they can take the measure of what the man is apt to do.

And all this was in the hands of five men, five men who considered themselves, and were, superior to financiers and diplomats and representatives of all the thousand varied interests which we have usually associated with civilization.



"He was posted at the side of this creature who had fascinated him from afar and who terrified him anear. and whose last name he did not yet know."

This tower of fabrics went along as if it were carried on a pole, and Forbes could see no semblance of human shape or stride inside it. But he judged that it contained a personality, for it paused to listen to something another pile of fabrics said to it, and from both came a snicker—or was it only a frou-frou of garments? In any case, it angered the part of the audience adjacent. The group went down the side aisle, up a few steps to the little space behind the box.

From where he stood Forbes could see the usher helping them lay off their wraps. They showed no anxiety to catch the remainder of the act, but stood gossiping while the frantic usher waited, not daring to reprimand them, yet dreading the noise of their incursion.

From somewhere in the chaos two long-gloved arms came up; they were strangely shapely; they made motions like swans' necks dipping into water lilies. A garland of fog came away, and a head on a throat appeared, a bust set upon a heap of drapery. Then the opera cloak slipped off into the usher's hands. And now the design emerged, a woman stood revealed. The head and throat were seen to be attached to a scroll of shoulders, and a figure like a column rose from the floor—strangely columnar it was, and so slender that there was merely the slightest inslope of waist, merely the slightest entasis at the hips.

Just then the costume was hardly more of a disguise than the gold or bronze powder smeared on by those who post as statues at vaudevilles. Inside their outer wraps women were rather wall-papering themselves than draping their forms. It was saner, too, and decenter, too, perhaps.

And yet Forbes stared at this woman as Adam must have stared at Eve when the scales were off his eyes. Even her hair was almost all her own, and it was coiled and parted with simple grace. Her headdress was something bizarre—not a tiara of diamonds, but a black crest with a pearl or two studding it—the iridescent breast of a lyre-bird it was, though he did not know. A cord of pearls was flung around her throat. At the peak of each shoulder her gown began, but the two elements did not conjoin till just in time above the breast, and just a little too late at the back.

Forbes was so startled that he felt all the chagrin of one who is caught staring at a woman just returned from the surf in a wet bathing suit. He shifted his eyes from her. When he looked back she had vanished into the crimson cavern of the box.

The other women followed her, and the men them. They seated themselves just as the curtain fell.

And now Forbes felt at liberty to go to his own seat, found an usher to pilot him down the aisle.

A voice that should have reminded him of the landaulet, but did not, caught his ear and led his eyes to the box. He was not far from the late arrivals.

They were attracting a deal of attention from the audience, and paying it none. The loudness of their speech and their laughter would have shocked him in a crowd of farmers. Coming from people of evident wealth and familiarity with town customs, it astounded him.

He had not yet seen the face of the woman of whom he had seen so much else. She was talking to a man in the interior of the box. Her back was turned to the house.

It never occurred to Forbes that it might be the same back he had followed up the avenue. How could he have told?

At length the footlights went up, the curtain went up. The three women aligned themselves in profile along the rail as if they were seated on unseen horses. The men were mere silhouettes in the background.

The bulk of the audience was in darkness; but the people in the boxes were illumined with a light reflected from the scenery, and it warmed them like a dawn glowing upon peaks of snow.

And now, at last, Forbes saw the face he had watched for with such impatience. It did not disappoint him At first she gave him only the profile; but that magic light of stage craft was upon it, and once she turned her head and cast a slow, vague look along the shadowy valley of the audience. She could not have seen him, but he saw her and found her so beautiful, so bewitchingly beautiful and desirable, that he caught his breath with a stitch of pain, an ache of admiration.

Just a moment her eyes dreamed across the gloom, and she turned back to watch the stage. It was like a parting after a tryst. Then she broke the spell with a sudden throe of laughter. The little shoplifter and blackmailer on the stage was describing her efforts to learn the ways of society, the technique of pouring tea and pretending to like it.

Jarred back to reasonableness by the shock of laughter, Forbes looked again to the box to see what manner of women this woman went with. One of them was tiny, but quite perfect. She had the face of a debutante under the white hair of a matron. If her age were betrayed by her neck, the dog collar of pearls concealed the ravage. She sat exceedingly erect and seemed to be cold and haughty till another splurge of slang from the shoplifter provoked her to a laugh that was like a child's.

The other woman laughed, too, laughed large and wide. She was beautiful, too, a Rubens ideal, drawn in liberal rotundities—cheeks, chin, throat, bust, hips. No cubist could have painted her, for she was like a cluster of soap bubbles. Her face was a great baby's.

The men were almost invisible, mere cut-outs in black and white.

When the curtain fell on the second act Forbes saw one of the men in the box rise and leave along the side aisle. Forbes knew the man. His name was Ten Eyck —Murray Ten Eyck.

Forbes dreaded to repeat that voyage through the strait between knees and seat backs; but he had seen at last a man he knew. And the man he knew knew the woman he wanted to know.

By the time he was in the open Ten Eyck had disappeared. He was not in the lobby, nor among the men smoking on the sidewalk, nor dashing across the street to one of the cafes where coffee could not be obtained Forbes found him at last in the smoking room below stairs.

He was puffing a cigarette, and met Forbes' eager glance with such blank indifference that Forbes' words of greeting were stopped in his throat.

The two men paced back and forth on crisscrossing paths as violently oblivious of each other as the two traditional Englishmen who were cast away on the same desert island and had never been introduced.

It was not till Murray Ten Eyck flung down his cigarette and made to leave that Forbes mustered courage enough to speak, in his Virginian voice:

"Pardon me, suh, but aren't you Mr. Mu'y Ten Eyck?"

"Yes," said Ten Eyck—simply that, and nothing more.

Forbes, nonplussed at the abrupt brevity of the answer, tried again:

"I reckon you don't remember me?"

Ten Eyck showed a hint of interest. If he were a snob he blamed it on his own weaknesses.

"I seemed to, but—well, I'm simply putrid at names and faces. A man pulled me out of the surf at Palm Beach last winter—I had a cramp, you know. I cut him dead two weeks later. When I knew what I had done I wished he had let me drown. So don't mind me if I don't remember you. Who are you? Did you ever save my life? Where was it we met?"

"It was at Manila. You were"——

"Oh, God bless me! You're Harvey Forbes—well, I'll be"—— He reversed the prayer. "Of course it's you." He was cordial enough now as he clapped both hands on Forbes' shoulders. "But how was I to know you all dolled up like this? I used to see you in uniform, with cap and bronze buttons and sword and puttees. You were a Lieutenant then. I dare say you're a Colonel by now, what?" Forbes shook his head. "No? Well, you ought to be. You did save my life out in that God-forsaken hole. And now you're here! Well, I'll be—Let's have a drink."

"No, thank you!"

"Yes, thank you!" He hurried Forbes up the stairs, out into the street and into a peacock-rivaling cafe. With one foot on the rail, one elbow on the bar and one elbow crooked upward they toasted each other in a hearty "How!" Then, with libations tossed inward, the old friendship was consecrated anew.

"Tell me," said Ten Eyck, "are you alone or with somebody? Don't answer if it will incriminate you."

"No such luck," groaned Forbes. "I'm alone, a castaway on this deserted island."

"Well, I'm the little rescuing party. How long are you here for?"

"I don't know. I was ordered to Governor's Island. I don't have to report for a week, so I thought I'd have a look at New York."

"That won't take you long. There's nothing going on, and nobody in town."

Forbes remembered the crowds he had seen, and smiled. "I saw three ve'y charming ladies in that party of yours."

"Glad you like 'em. Come and meet 'em."

"Perhaps one of them is your wife. Are you ma'ied yet?"

"Not yet. Not while I have my health and strength."

"I'm right glad to hear it. I was beginning to feel afraid that you had ma'ied that wonderful one."

Ten Eyck shook his head and laughed.

"Who? Me? Me marry Persis Cabot?"

"Is that her name? Well, why not?"

"If you only knew her you wouldn't ask why. I'm not a millionaire."

"She doesn't look mercenary."

"She's not. Money is nothing to her; she doesn't know what it means; she just tosses it away. She's like a yacht. You think it costs a lot to buy, but wait till you count the upkeep. Persis is a corker. She's a fine girl to play with. But you must promise not to marry her."

"I promise."

"Fine! Come along."

Ten Eyck waived Forbes' scruples, dragged him to the box and presented him to the women and two other men. Forbes was too much perturbed to catch a single name Even the last name of Persis escaped both his memory and his attention.

Ten Eyck gave Forbes a glowing advertisement as a brilliant soldier and a life saver, and offered him his own chair next to Persis.

She had answered his low bow of homage with nothing more than a wren-like bow and half a hint of a smile.

Ten Eyck threw Forbes into confusion by saying:

"You'll have to do better than that, old girl. Mr. Forbes not only rescued me from the depths, but he told me you were the most beautiful thing he ever saw on earth."

Persis smiled a little more cordially and murmured:

"That was very nice of him."

She was evidently so used to bouquets in the face that they neither offended nor excited her. But Miss—or was it Mrs.?—anyway, the plump woman interposed:

"He must have been referring to me. My mirror tells me I am fatally beautiful, and God knows there's more of me than of anybody else on earth."

Fortunately, the lights sank just then, and the curtain went up with a sound like a great "Hush!" The party, having been once rebuked, fell into silence. Forbes rose to return to his own seat, but Ten Eyck, standing back of him, pressed him into his chair with powerful hands.

He stayed put. But the play no longer held him. He could think only of one thing. He was posted at the side of this creature who had fascinated him from afar and terrified him anear, and whose last name he did not yet know.

At the end of the act Forbes rose to go, but Ten Eyck checked him again.

"What you doing after the play?"

"Nothing."

"Come turkey-trotting with us."

"Turkey-trotting!" Forbes gasped. "Do nice people"—

"We're not nice people," said Persis, "but we do."

"It's awful. People have gone stark mad over it. The Mayor ought to stop it," said one of the men, a queer little fellow, he was.

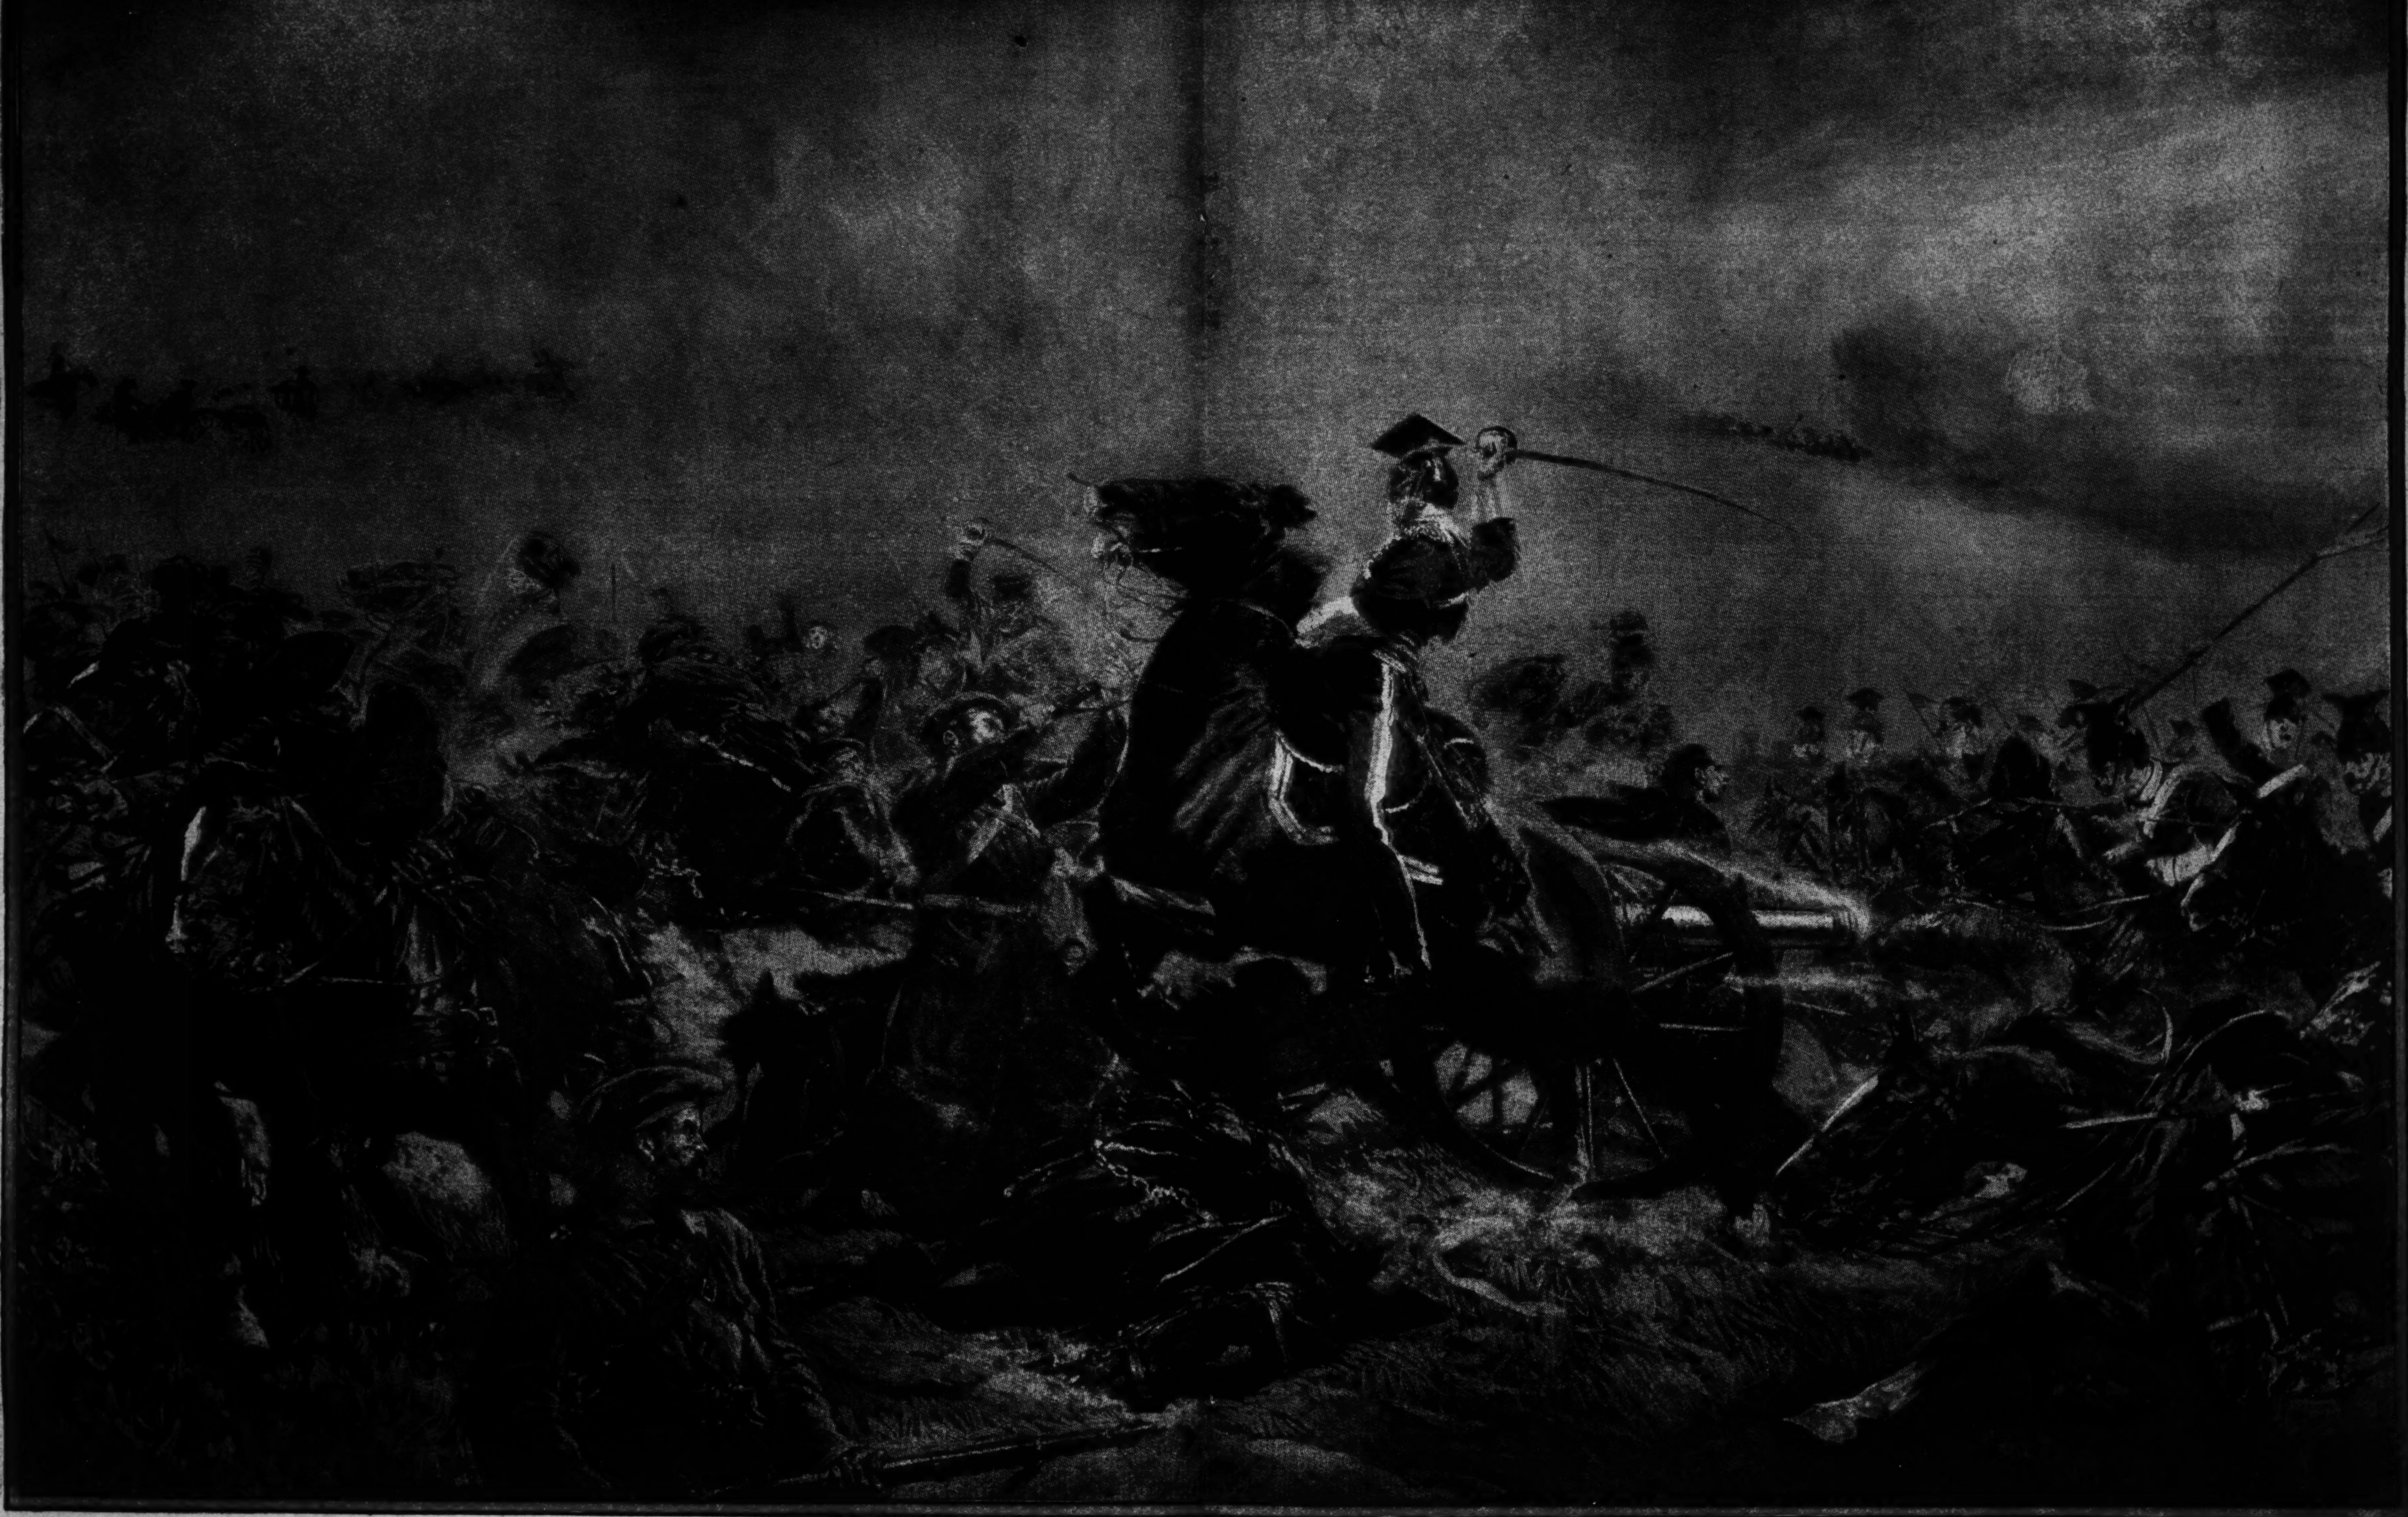
"Oh, Willie, don't be a prude," said Persis. "You know it's healthier than playing bridge all day and all night."

"The police ought to stop it. I tell you," Willie insisted, with a peevishness that was like a dash of vinegar. "I hate to see it."

"Then don't come along, my dear," Persis answered, with a glint of temper.

Forbes did not like that "my dear." It might mean nothing, but it might mean everything.

Chapter II of this fascinating story, in which Lieut. Forbes and the lovely Persis Cabot become better acquainted, will appear in the next Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine



Charge of the British Lancers

On Sept. 3 the London Daily Mail printed the following story of a similar episode in fighting between the British and Germans, the locality being unnamed, as the censor had deleted it:

"Terrible havoc has been caused in our ranks by shells from a battery of 11 German guns posted inside a forest near the Belgian frontier. It seemed impossible to silence their fire until the Ninth Lancers made their attempt, riding straight at the guns after debouching into the open and charging under a hail of melinite and lyddite.

"I have not been able to get reliable figures as to the distance they rode, but they reached their goal. Nothing could stop them. They reached the guns, killed the gunners and put the guns out of action. Then, like their prototypes of Balaklava, they rode back. On the return they fell in greater numbers still from the attack of other German batteries, posted at vantage points around the valley." Thus is the charge of the Light Brigade is repeated and, it seems, with as little success.

THE MYSTERY of the SILVER SNARE

This is a tale of stirring adventure—of love, war and intrigue. Cleek, of course, is the hero. The problem before him now is his own. How is he to escape from the trap into which he has unsuspectingly walked? It takes quick thinking as well as rapid firing, but the result is as successful as it is sensational.

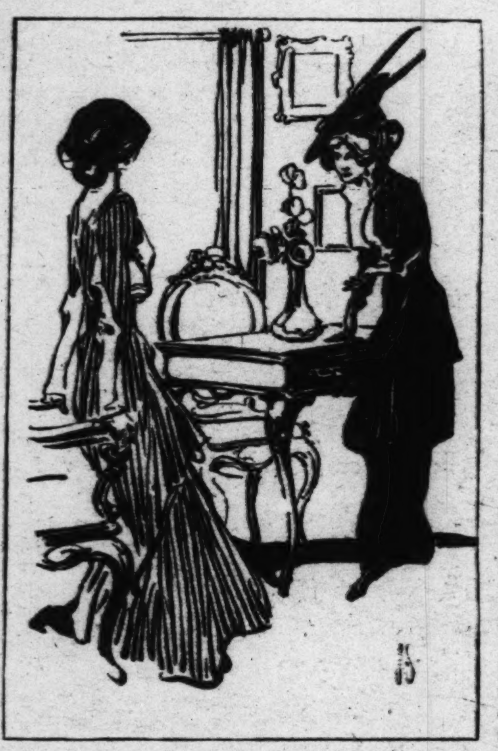
FOR the second time the cry sounded, faint over the hum of the distant traffic. Cleek rose, and, walking to the window, flung up the sash and bent out. Half way up the street a newsboy was racing, a bundle of papers over his arm, a wind-blown placard wrapping his breast.

Even at that distance Cleek could see the ominous word "Revolution" splotched on it in broad black capitals, and under that the yet more significant name "Mauravania."

In two minutes Dollops had been summoned, sent out, and was back in the room again, panting.

"Here y'are, guv'ner," said he, as he laid the paper on the table beside his master. "More Continental flareups, sir. They're having a high old time in that place you went to last year, guv'ner. Troops called out and what not."

Cleek unfolded the paper as the door closed behind Dollops, and, spreading it out on the table, ran his eye over it in quest of the important item. "Revolution," which had at first fixed his attention, he now saw was preceded by the word "Threatened," and he gave a sort of sigh of relief. For days and days the papers had been full of the most disquieting rumors relative to Mauravanian affairs; for weeks and weeks the mutterings of that red devil, "Revolution," had been growling sullenly in the dark alleys of her capital city, and none knew how it started, nor by whom—hands that had deposed Queen Karma and set a Sforza on the royal throne now itched to tear the purple trappings from the puppet heir of the puppet King they had made, and to set yet another in Ulric's place. Yesterday's news had been most threatening—today's was even worse.



"'It means little to you, but it means everything to me.'"

"Crisis approaching in Mauravanian affairs. Threatened revolution," he read. "Mysterious departure of Baron de Carsarole, the Prime Minister, on an errand reputed to be connected with an appeal to Great Britain to uphold the cause of the Royalist party." And under this glaring heading there was a brief dispatch, setting forth the dangers of a threatened rising, and the craven terror of a coward King.

"Oh, you pay, Mauravania, you pay!" muttered Cleek, "and you deserve to pay. The hand that put an adder in the dove's nest deserves no better than the sting it has received. Your fate is merited. You and your King are nothing under God's free heaven to me. And you send a De Carsarole to England, do you? You send an appeal to the country of the man whose blood you poured out, and whose children you despoiled? And sent by a De Carsarole, the offspring of the race that was the firmest upholder of Albertus the Usurper. Will you get it? Will England forget and forgive? I think not, my friend—indeed I think not."

THEN he gave a little rattling laugh, looked toward the window, saw that it was yet early enough for a stroll among the flower beds at Hyde Park, and had just stretched forth his hand to take up his hat when there was a sharp metallic whir, and the bell of the telephone rang.

As no one but Narkom used that instrument, he knew what to expect.

"It will be a call," he said resignedly.

He was not mistaken in his expectations, for he had barely spoken the prefactory "Hullo!" into the instrument before from the other end there came the customary signal of the whistled National Anthem, and hard after it Narkom's voice saying cheerily:

"Caught you in, did I, old chap? Was half afraid I shouldn't. I say, can you make it convenient to meet a gentleman who wishes to engage your services inside of the next half hour at 'The Coach and Horses,' Farthingdale Lane, Chiswick, old chap? Meet him alone, I mean, because I'm prevented by an extra special case from getting away from here for hours to come. Gentleman's a stranger to me—French or Italian, I fancy, although domiciled in England, and, he tells he, naturalized. Plenty of money; willing to pay any price in the world to secure your services, and won't have those of anybody else. Case will interest you, old chap, and a pot of money for solving it. Feel like tackling it, Cleek?"

"Naturally, after such an introduction as that," replied Cleek with a little laugh. "The Coach and Horses, Farthingdale Lane, Chiswick, is it? All right; I'll be there. But it's a rum sort of a place for a person of any importance to choose. Know it, don't you? No? Well, I do. It's a none too savory 'pub,' in a decidedly unsavory quarter—much frequented by navvies and doing but little business until after dark. Still, I'll be there."

"Good. Go straight to the bar parlor, old chap, and he'll be there waiting for you. Tall, dark man, about five-and-thirty; full-bearded, and will wear a red rose in his buttonhole. Name's De Louvisan. I'll send Lennard around with the limousine, so you can 'change' en route, if you'd like to have me do so."

"No, thanks," replied Cleek serenely, not guessing how in the near future he was to regret that decision. "Capt. Burbage will do, I fancy, and a taxi is always handy. Just say to this Mr. De Louvisan that I will be there inside of the next 40 minutes. Goodby."

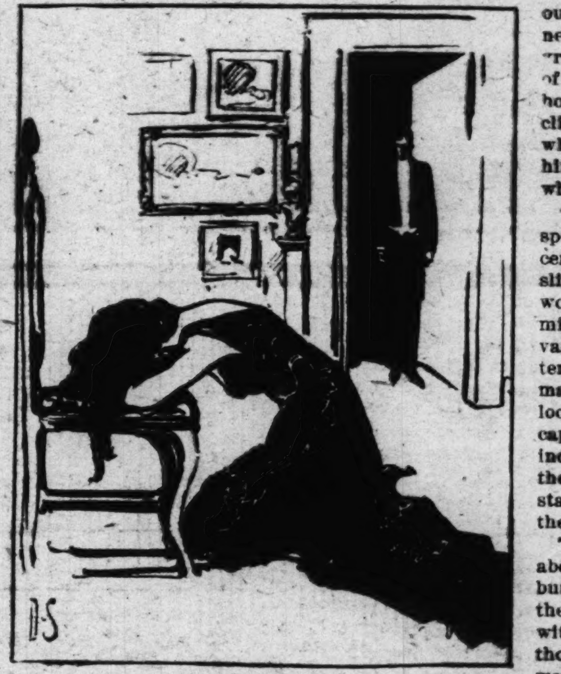
Then he hung up the receiver, rang for Dollops and forthwith set about dressing himself to keep that promise.

* * * * * *

WHILE Cleek was answering this call to duty from the man whom he owed most in all this world, events were shaping themselves in the London suburban (where Ailsa had taken up her abode since that memorable day when Cleek told her that if she would only wait he would pay back one by one the debts of the Vanishing Cracksman and at last make himself worthy of her) so that the summons was to be seconded by the call of love.

With an aged woman serving in the double capacity of companion and servant, Miss Lorne made her home in a little cottage not far from the estate of her uncle, Sir Horace Wyvern, a member of whose household she was at the time of the memorable affair of "The Vanishing Cracksman."

She had just returned from a shopping tour in London when the housekeeper, entering the living room of the cozy little cottage announced a lady visitor.



"Her body was shaking as with half suppressed sobs."

With wonder in her voice, Miss Lorne asked her to show the caller in. The girl's perplexity was still greater when a woman slightly less than middle age, unmistakably dressed in the latest Parisian mode and with a great mass of auburn hair displayed to the best advantage, stood before her.

When the woman spoke, her slight French accent betrayed a burr which would have meant far more to Cleek than it did to her. "Is this Miss Lorne?" asked the visitor, and without waiting for a reply she continued:

"Oh! Miss Lorne you can do so much for me if you only will intercede in my behalf. It means little to you but it means everything to me."

"But what can you mean?" asked Miss Lorne, retreating a step before the vehemence of the woman.

"Just this, the great Cleek"——

"Cleek! What of him? How do you know that I know Mr. Cleek? What can you have to do with him? Why do you come to me? I know nothing of Mr. Cleek's business affairs."

"Listen! You have influence with this Hamilton Cleek and he is the only man who can save my little son from the horrible death that is impending. Won't you help me?"

"But what can I do! I tell you"——

"You can use your influence to make Mr. Cleek accept the case and solve this horrible mystery that is sapping our very lives."

And then for half an hour the woman made the most impassioned appeal to the unsophisticated heart of Ailsa Lorne. In the end Miss Lorne arose and said:

"I do not know how you found me out, but I will go. You say you want me to take a taxicab that is waiting in front and that the chauffeur knows the address where I will find Mr. Cleek talking to your husband. Very well, I will persuade Mr. Cleek to take the case, if I can. I have never done such a thing before and you must understand I have no right to do this now, as I have no influence with him other than that he is a very dear friend and that I admire him most devotedly."

"I can never thank you enough. Now I must fly back to my own home, for even now this terrible thing may be attacking my little son."

And so Miss Lorne walked out of her little cottage with the child-like confidence of an unsophisticated schoolgirl and stepped into the automobile, driven by a man she had never seen before and of whose identity she knew nothing.

WELL within the limits of the time specified a taxicab carried Cleek to within a stone's throw of his destination; a short walk down a narrow, foul-smelling passage brought him to the destination itself, and a minute or so later he was standing in the bar parlor of the "Coach and Horses" for the first time since his far-off cracksman's days.

Not a thing about the place was different from what it had been in those old days. He alone was changed; the rest was as it had been, and the memories it evoked crowded in upon him thick and fast. Here in those other days, he and Margot and Margot's Apache crew had foregathered many times, and laughed and held revels while the hue-and-cry was out and the police of two countries were groping for them. Now he had flung Margot and the rest aside for the light that shone in a good woman's eyes, and today they and he—What were they doing today, that lot? He wondered. Margot and Merode! Merode, the man whom she had taken into the place which he once had filled, the new "King" of the Apaches, with whom he had first come to grips in that wild time of the Red Crawl, and whose defeat he had so surely brought about in the affair of "The Sacred Son."

He had seen nothing of that man nor of Margot since that far-off time; but he knew that they had not forgotten, not forgotten that some day, in some place, in some artful, underhanded manner, they would bait a trap to catch him, and would do their best to sponge out with his life the long reckoning they had scored against him.

A door opened and closed, a footstep sounded in the dim room, and the figure of a man moved rapidly across the floor toward him—a tall fair-hair, fair-beard man, a very giant in size and strength, whose Continental origin was beyond dispute, and whose every movement was instinct with a subtle, panther-like grace.

Cleek, screwing around on his heel as he heard the sound of the man's entrance, flashed him one swift, sharp look, and then, a faint movement—the "jumping" of all his nerves and muscles a sucked-in breath, a quiver of the nostrils, a sudden thick "thumping" of the heart, and in an instant outer placidity, serene calmness and a composure so great that it smacked almost of indifference. That was how he received the new client—that was the state in which the new client found him when he came up to where he stood.

"Monsieur," began the man, speaking with a foreign accent and betraying not the slightest surprise (as one would have thought he might) at finding this much vaunted detective to all intents and appearances a man verging upon sixty, and looking both weak and incapable; "Monsieur, this is indeed good of you! I have the honor, have I not, of standing in the presence of the great Cleek?"

"I don't know so much about the 'great,' monsieur, but I must plead guilty to the other," replied Cleek, and with an air which belied those agitated feelings that were carrying on a little private war within him as he now realized beyond all question at this close range that certain suspicions which had assailed him when the man entered, were founded upon absolute fact. "You are Monsieur de Louvisan, I take it? Thanks very much. Mr. Narkom tells me that you wish to consult me upon a matter of great importance. May I trouble you to come to the point at once, and to let me know the nature of this particular case?"

THE MYSTERY of the SILVER SNARE

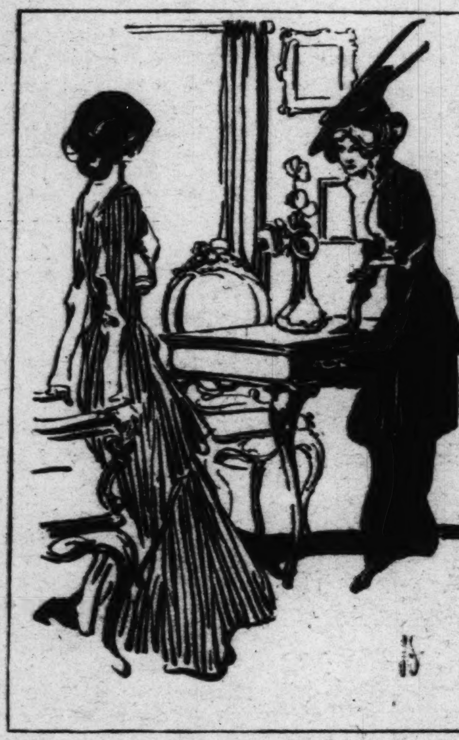
This is a tale of stirring adventure—of love, war and intrigue. Cleek, of course, is the hero. The problem before him now is his own. How is he to escape from the trap into which he has unsuspectingly walked? It takes quick thinking as well as rapid firing, but the result is as successful as it is sensational.

FOR the second time the cry sounded, faint over the hum of the distant traffic. Cleek rose, and, walking to the window, flung up the sash and bent out. Half way up the street a newsboy was racing, a bundle of papers over his arm, a wind-blown placard wrapping his breast.

Even at that distance Cleek could see the ominous word "Revolution" splotched on it in broad black capitals, and under that the yet more significant name "Mauravania."

In two minutes Dollops had been summoned, sent out, and was back in the room again, panting.

"Here y'are, guv'ner," said he, as he laid the paper on the table beside his master. "More Continental flareups, sir. They're having a high old time in that place you went to last year, guv'ner. Troops called out and what not."



"'It means little to you, but it means everything to me.'"

Cleek unfolded the paper as the door closed behind Dollops, and, spreading it out on the table, ran his eye over it in quest of the important item. "Revolution," which had at first fixed his attention, he now saw was preceded by the word "Threatened," and he gave a sort of sigh of relief. For days and days the papers had been full of the most disquieting rumors relative to Mauravanian affairs; for weeks and weeks the mutterings of that red devil, "Revolution," had been growling sullenly in the dark alleys of her capital city, and none knew how it started, nor by whom—hands that had deposed Queen Karma and set a Siorza on the royal throne now itched to tear the purple trappings from the puppet heir of the puppet King they had made, and to set yet another in Ulric's place. Yesterday's news had been most threatening—today's was even worse.

"Crisis approaching in Mauravanian affairs. Threatened revolution," he read. "Mysterious departure of Baron de Carsarole, the Prime Minister, on an errand reputed to be connected with an appeal to Great Britain to uphold the cause of the Royalist party." And under this glaring heading there was a brief dispatch, setting forth the dangers of a threatened rising, and the craven terror of a coward King.

"Oh, you pay, Mauravania, you pay!" muttered Cleek, "and you deserve to pay. The hand that put an adder in the dove's nest deserves no better than the sting it has received. Your fate is merited. You and your King are nothing under God's free heaven to me. And you send a De Carsarole to England, do you? You send an appeal to the country of the man whose blood you poured out, and whose children you despoiled? And sent by a De Carsarole, the offspring of the race that was the firmest upholder of Albertus the Usurper. Will you get it? Will England forget and forgive? I think not, my friend—indeed I think not."

THEN he gave a little rattling laugh, looked toward the window, saw that it was yet early enough for a stroll among the flower beds at Hyde Park, and had just stretched forth his hand to take up his hat when there was a sharp metallic whir, and the bell of the telephone rang.

As no one but Narkom used that instrument, he knew what to expect.

"It will be a call," he said resignedly.

He was not mistaken in his expectations, for he had barely spoken the prefactory "Hullo!" into the instrument before from the other end there came the customary signal of the whistled National Anthem, and hard after it Narkom's voice saying cheerily:

"Caught you in, did I, old chap? Was half afraid I shouldn't. I say, can you make it convenient to meet a gentleman who wishes to engage your services inside of the next half hour at 'The Coach and Horses,' Farthingdale Lane, Chiswick, old chap? Meet him alone, I mean, because I'm prevented by an extra special case from getting away from here for hours to come. Gentleman's a stranger to me—French or Italian, I fancy, although domiciled in England, and, he tells he, naturalized. Plenty of money; willing to pay any price in the world to secure your services, and won't have those of anybody else. Case will interest you, old chap, and a pot of money for solving it. Feel like tackling it, Cleek?"

"Naturally, after such an introduction as that," replied Cleek with a little laugh. "The Coach and Horses, Farthingdale Lane, Chiswick, is it? All right; I'll be there. But it's a rum sort of a place for a person of any importance to choose. Know it, don't you? No? Well, I do. It's a none too savory 'pub,' in a decidedly unsavory quarter—much frequented by navvies and doing but little business until after dark. Still, I'll be there."

"Good. Go straight to the bar parlor, old chap, and he'll be there waiting for you. Tall, dark man, about five-and-thirty; full-bearded, and will wear a red rose in his buttonhole. Name's De Louvisan. I'll send Lennard around with the limousine, so you can 'change' en route, if you'd like to have me do so."

"No, thanks," replied Cleek serenely, not guessing how in the near future he was to regret that decision. "Capt. Burbage will do, I fancy, and a taxi is always handy. Just say to this Mr. De Louvisan that I will be there inside of the next 40 minutes. Goodby."

Then he hung up the receiver, rang for Dollops and forthwith set about dressing himself to keep that promise.

* * * * * *

WHILE Cleek was answering this call to duty from the man whom he owed most in all this world, events were shaping themselves in the London suburban (where Ailsa had taken up her abode since that memorable day when Cleek told her that if she would only wait he would pay back one by one the debts of the Vanishing Cracksman and at last make himself worthy of her) so that the summons was to be seconded by the call of love.

With an aged woman serving in the double capacity of companion and servant, Miss Lorne made her home in a little cottage not far from the estate of her uncle, Sir Horace Wyvern, a member of whose household she was at the time of the memorable affair of "The Vanishing Cracksman."

She had just returned from a shopping tour in London when the housekeeper, entering the living room of the cozy little cottage announced a lady visitor.

With wonder in her voice, Miss Lorne asked her to show the caller in. The girl's perplexity was still greater when a woman slightly less than middle age, unmistakably dressed in the latest Parisian mode and with a great mass of auburn hair displayed to the best advantage, stood before her.

When the woman spoke, her slight French accent betrayed a burr which would have meant far more to Cleek than it did to her. "Is this Miss Lorne?" asked the visitor, and without waiting for a reply she continued:

"Oh! Miss Lorne you can do so much for me if you only will intercede in my behalf. It means little to you but it means everything to me."

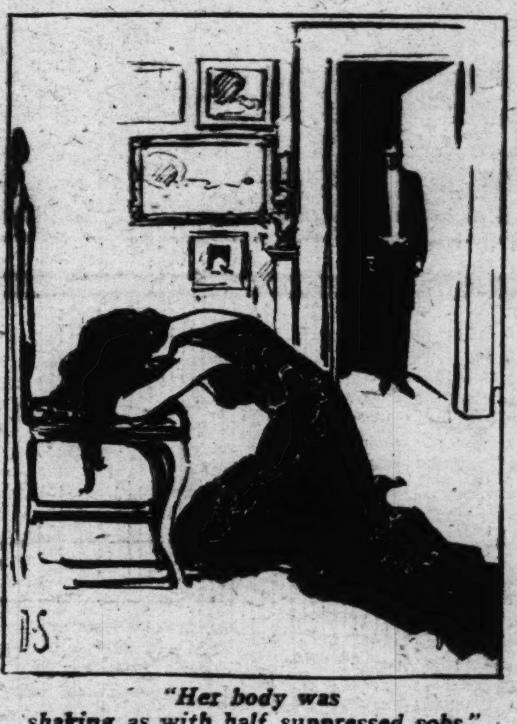
"But what can you mean?" asked Miss Lorne, retreating a step before the vehemence of the woman.

"Just this, the great Cleek"——

"Cleek! What of him? How do you know that I know Mr. Cleek? What can you have to do with him? Why do you come to me? I know nothing of Mr. Cleek's business affairs."

"Listen! You have influence with this Hamilton Cleek and he is the only man who can save my little son from the horrible death that is impending. Won't you help me?"

"But what can I do! I tell you"——



"Her body was shaking as with half suppressed sobs."

"You can use your influence to make Mr. Cleek accept the case and solve this horrible mystery that is sapping our very lives."

And then for half an hour the woman made the most impassioned appeal to the unsophisticated heart of Ailsa Lorne. In the end Miss Lorne arose and said:

"I do not know how you found me out, but I will go. You say you want me to take a taxicab that is waiting in front and that the chauffeur knows the address where I will find Mr. Cleek talking to your husband. The outer gate is provided with a drawbridge and protected by rifle fire through loopholes. It leads past the doors of the barracks, which are under the glacis, into the ditch. It will be noticed that the outer and inner gates are not in a line. The inner gate is protected by rifle fire through loopholes. Another drawbridge, inside, opens on the long gallery which reaches the apex of the fort, where are situated more barracks, as well as defences for the ditch (counterscarp galleries). Other counterscarp galleries at the two other angles of the ditch command the outer gate. On either side of the passage doors lead to the barracks and magazines. The revolving cupolas for guns are reached by different staircases cut out of the enormous concrete roof and side.

Present clash demonstrates that guns have become more powerful than the resistance of steel and stone to their tremendous fire . . . .

SO far as the European War has gone, it has sprung one tremendous surprise upon the military experts and engineers—it has proved the practical worthlessness of the elaborate fortresses of concrete and steel which their engineers had proudly proclaimed impregnable. While this is written, however, the great fortifications environing Paris have not been subjected to the test of a siege.

During the German assault upon the forts of Liege, at the beginning of the war, for a time triumph seemed to be with the fort builders. All of the devices which, on paper, had seemed to render the fort invulnerable, appeared to be gloriously justifying the pretensions of the engineers. The German charges were hurled back by the fire of its machine guns, their entrenchments were shelled by its howitzers, the troops were blinded at night by searchlights which exposed them as a fair target, and their columns were snared in its wire entanglements. The name of Gen. Brialmont, designer of the Liege fortifications, became famous all over the world.

It was established that the forts could with ease repel infantry attacks and the bombardment of ordinary field artillery. But a staggering and unexpected force was about to be brought up to put the fort builders to scorn. This was the enormous siege guns, greater even than those mammoths of artillery introduced by the Germans in field warfare, which soon arrived before Liege.

It happened that at the siege of Port Arthur, in 1904, the Japanese brought up from their coast defenses two 28-centimeter mortars, which, by their terrible fire, had a decided influence in reducing the Russian stronghold, after other means had for five months proved a failure. The Germans profited by this lesson and manufactured a battery of howitzers mounted on freight gondolas, which made them, for all their mass of forty tons, easily mobile wherever railroad tracks were or could be laid.

This siege gun fires a shell 11 inches in diameter and weighing 1000 pounds. It is charged with the high explosive triton, which is more powerful than dynamite, but which will endure with less danger than that unstable compound the shock of being fired from a gun. When the shell strikes it blasts a hole as big as a quarry excavation. The fire control is so accurate that the gun can be fired at a range of five miles with an average error of only 100 yards in the point of fall.

What the German siege guns did to the forts at Liege—These photographs show how an exploded shell destroyed the armored casements of the Belgian guns. It was after days of explosions of this kind that the forts, practically destroyed, had to surrender.

After the Belgians had for a time electrified the world with their heroic defense at Liege against charges as audacious and furious as any recorded in history, the Germans brought up a battery of their great siege guns. These were detrained from their cars and mounted at the proper positions in concrete emplacements.

Abruptly the continent was thrilled with the news that Liege had fallen. Why? It was because wherever a shell from one of the siege guns struck a fortress it collapsed like a house of cards. Concrete was pulverized, steel was blasted into splinters by the terrific impact. When a shell struck one of the steel turrets protecting the gunners in the forts turret, guns and crew were literally blown to fragments. The enormous havoc wrought is shown by photographs of the ruins at Liege, printed upon this page.

At their ease the Germans planted their guns where they would do the most good and out of effective range of the guns of the fortress. Of course, had the forts been equipped with artillery equally powerful, a different story might be to tell. But the defenders apparently anticipated attack from guns of no more than five or six inches caliber—which, indeed, experts had pronounced the largest practicable for field service in Europe, because, with the softness of the soil, the weight of larger ordnance would mire the carriages in the ground. But they had not counted on the dispatch with which German engineers laid loops of railroad track about the Liege forts, making it possible quickly to transport their great artillery to the strategic point of the moment.

The same story was repeated at Namur, which was lauded as one of the strongest fortified places in Belgium. If the Kaiser was halted at Liege, it was asked, how long would it take his troops to capture Namur? This was before particulars concerning the Prussian siege artillery had leaked out.

What was the event? One or two shells were fired at a fort before Namur, which instantly blew up into a mass of wreckage. The others surrendered promptly. Its fortifications, upon which hundreds of thousands of dollars had been spent and upon which a military genius had lavished all of his talent, suddenly became of no more value than if its walls had been wood, instead of concrete and steel

Finger-Squeezing the Latest Anesthetic

By Arthur Benington

"Touch the button," or press a thumb, and shut off sensation in various remote organs and members ✤ That is the new kinetic system, based upon mathematical plotting of human body into zones, independently of nerves, as demonstrated and practiced by leading physicians and dentists ✤ Some remarkable experiments

WE are learning new things about our bodies every day. Some of the newest are terribly disconcerting to our old ideas about anatomy and physiology. For instance:

Dr. G. W. Crile of Cleveland calmly adds a new system to those already known, grouping together under the name "kinetic" organs whose intimate relation had never even been suspected.

Dr. W. H. Fitzgerald of Hartford demonstrates to a gathering of amazed physicians, surgeons and dentists that any part of the body can be anesthetized—cut off so far as feeling is concerned—merely by pressing on certain points, often anatomically remote from those to be deprived of sensation.

The medical world has scarcely had time to digest the story of this extraordinary clinic, as told by Dr. Edwin F. Bowers in this magazine last December, before Dr. Fitzgerald asks it to assist him in an even more radical juggling with the human organs. Dr. Bowers told of Dr. Fitzgerald's demonstration that certain spots on the tongue, palate and throat could be made, by simple pressure, to deaden eyes, ears, teeth and other organs to all pain. That was strange enough. No one could have believed it had it not been vouched for by a score of the leading doctors of New England, who had not only been present at the clinic given in the Hartford General Hospital on November 24, 1913, but had successfully put the system into practice.

Now Dr. Fitzgerald asks us to believe that it is not even necessary to "press the button" in the mouth, the same result being obtainable merely by squeezing a finger or pinching a toe!

According to him—and not only to him but to other doctors who have tested his discovery—any pain in any part of the body can be removed in a few minutes with no other treatment than pressure upon a toe or finger. It must be the correct toe or finger, however. It is no use squeezing the little finger if you have a stomachache, for instance. In this case both thumbs must be pressed. Pressing a thumb has no effect upon a jumping ache in a hollow molar tooth, for then it is the middle finger on the same side as the offending tooth that must be pressed.

It sounds simple, doesn't it? So simple as to seem ridiculous to anyone familiar with the anatomy of the human body. Surgeons who have not seen it done will dismiss it with a scoff, just as they dimissed Harvey's assertion that the blood circulated, just as they dismissed Jenner's discovery of vaccination. Whether they will finally accept it, and revise their physiology accordingly, as they at last accepted the discoveries of Harvey, Jenner and the other great pioneers of medicine, time alone can tell.

But the doctors have received so many shocks to their preconceived ideas that today they hesitate to reject new discoveries without serious examination. And all that Dr. Fitzgerald is asking now is serious examination of the discovery he announces. Many surgeons and more dentists have been testing upon their own patients the simple treatment he describes. Some of them are enthusiastic about the results. Others are still in doubt.

Here is a sample case in point: Dr. Charles De Witt Henry, the New York dentist, went to Hartford one day at the end of June and came back so impressed with what Dr. Fitzgerald showed him that he began experimenting the very next day. His first patient that morning was a stranger who looked like a mechanic of the better class. He had a severe toothache. Dr. Henry could not find a decayed tooth in his head, but quickly discovered which tooth was causing the pain. It was a molar, a good tooth, and the dentist did not want to pull it.

He took hold of the sufferer's hand and began squeezing the knuckle of the middle finger.

"What are you doing that for?" asked the patient.

"Trying a little experiment," replied Dr. Henry, and he went on questioning the man about his health, leading the conversation in such a way as to use up time. He held the finger for nearly ten minutes. Then he asked:

"How's the toothache now?"

"Why—er—it's entirely gone!" replied the man, thoroughly astonished.

Dr. Henry told him to squeeze the knuckle of his own middle finger if the ache returned, and to come back and report how it worked. Up to the present writing the man has not returned.

This is merely an illustration of one dentist's first experience with the method. Dr. Henry has not been so successful in other cases on which he has tried it, but Dr. Fitzgerald had warned him that it required a little practice, and also that some persons were much more susceptible than others.

"I shall not be able to give a definite verdict until I have satisfied myself that I know exactly how to apply it, and have tested it on a large number of persons," says Dr. Henry, "but I have gone far enough to be able to say there is at least something in it. My experiments have been so interesting and suggestive that I shall continue them."

Try the following experiment for yourself. It may work and it may not. It may produce results different from those you expect. Hold the knuckle of your left thumb tight with your right thumb and first finger. After a few minutes turn your thoughts upon your left big toe. If you are a susceptible persons this has probably become numb; it may feel as if it was asleep; perhaps you will be unable to wiggle it. Also, take a needle—it is better to sterilize it first—and try pricking yourself on the inside of the leg or not more than an inch to the left of the median line in any part of your body. Then move the pricking to the right and to the left. If you are susceptible and have squeezed your thumb properly, you will scarcely feel the pricks near the median line, while you will feel them at a slight distance from it.

This is exactly what happened to me the first time I tried it; I was sitting in an easy chair in a half-dark room, smoking a cigar and talking. I held the knuckle of my left thumb and waited expectantly for the numbness to manifest itself in my left big toe. It did not seem to come. As the minutes passed I began to think that I must be immune to such anesthesia. I could detect no change in my toe.

Suddenly I became aware of the fact that my cigar, which had burned down to little more than a stump, and which I was holding between my front teeth and lips, was quivering strangely. I found a difficulty in holding it so. The two upper incisor teeth on the left side and the gum above them felt as if I had put a drop of creme de menth upon them. My throat seemed to shiver from the Adam's apple up to the chin. I moved the cigar to the right and found no difficulty in holding it. But I was unable then to detect any change in my toe. I have since proved that I am far less susceptible than most people.

This is how it worked with a friend of mine. Sitting at a dinner party next to a woman he knew very well, he took her hand and began squeezing her thumb.

"What are you trying to do?" she asked.

"Hold hands with you," he said, laughing.

"That is a funny way to hold hands," she said.

"Never mind, just let me squeeze your thumb; I want to show you something."

He had held the thumb about three minutes when the lady said:

"I've got such a funny feeling in my big toe. It feels as if it were going to sleep."

"Wiggle it," he said.

"Oh, it feels so queer. It is getting quite numb."

"Wiggle the big toes of both feet," said my friend, "and tell me how they feel."

"What! Are you doing that? Are you making my toes go to sleep?" asked the lady.

"Never mind. Just go on wiggling and tell me what happens."

"Why, I can't move one of my big toes. It is as if it were paralyzed."

The toe thus paralyzed was that of the right foot and it was the thumb of the right hand my friend was squeezing. He released her thumb, put his watch on the table and asked her to tell him as soon as sensation returned to the toe. It was just four minutes before this took place.

Dr. Fitzgerald, in describing such cases, says that the anesthesia so produced is in some persons sufficiently deep and lasting to permit of a major operation being performed without pain. It sometimes lasts two hours after the pressure has been removed. Such cases are exceptional, however. What he does claim for the method is that by this simple means any part of the body may be rendered insensible to pain at least long enough to permit of such operations as are normally very painful but do not last long.

This discovery of Dr. Fitzgerald's involves the plotting of the body in an entirely new way. The most extraordinary thing about the plotting is that it is more mathematical than anatomical. It divides the body into zones, regardless of the organs. There are, broadly speaking, 10 of these zones, five on each side of the body. If the body were cut longitudinally into approximately equal slices, each of these would be one of the zones. Each arm and each leg is divided into five such zones, a finger and a toe being the extremity of each.

The thumb and big toe zone extends up the inside of the arm and leg and down the median line of the body, being bordered in the head by a line drawn between the canine tooth and the first bicuspid on each side.

The first finger zone occupies the second fifth of the arm, leg and body, its outer margin in the head being the second bicuspid tooth.

The middle finger zone occupies the middle of the arm and leg and the region adjoining the former on the body, extending in the head to the back of the second molar tooth.

The ring finger zone follows, taking in the wisdom tooth. Then the little finger zone, occupying the outer sides of arms, body, legs and head, completes the list.

Each zone seems to extend through, from front to back. So, for a stomachache or a pain in the spine, one presses one's thumbs. For a jumping corn on the little toe or for the burn of a frozen ear tip, one squeezes the little finger.

These zones are further subdivided. The palmar surface of the fingers and the soles of the feet control the back; the dorsal surface of the hand and the upper surface of the toes control the front of the body.

The tongue, palate and throat are also plotted, not only longitudinally, however, but transversely also, This plotting of the mouth was what Dr. Bowers described in his article in this Magazine last December. The whole head, it seems, can be plotted transversely. But this complicates the subject too much for detailed description here.

A most extraordinary example of the working of this new method of anesthesia is a certain woman who lives near Hartford. She is an unusually good subject because of the startling rapidity with which she answers to the treatment. I met her in Dr. Fitzgerald's office while waiting to consult him and she told me she had become so accustomed to the treatment she could practice it on herself. She consented to allow my companion, an eminent dentist, to experiment upon her while I watched her critically. My companion began with her left thumb. As he pressed it she described a feeling of numbness creeping up her arm. In two minutes the gums over her incisor and canine teeth had become cold and a probe stuck into the gums at this point, drawing blood, failed to make her wince, but when she was pricked beyond the canine she winced instantly. Pressure on the first finger extended the anesthesia to the region of the bicuspids. Pressing one finger after the other deadened the whole left side. We pricked her head and neck at unexpected points and she gave no sign, but the moment we pricked beyond the median line, she jumped. Not only were the sensory nerves paralyzed, but also the motor nerves. She could scarcely lift her left arm and the hand felt like that of a corpse.

Method of pressing the thumb to numb sensation througnout the middle zone, controlled by the thumb and big toe.

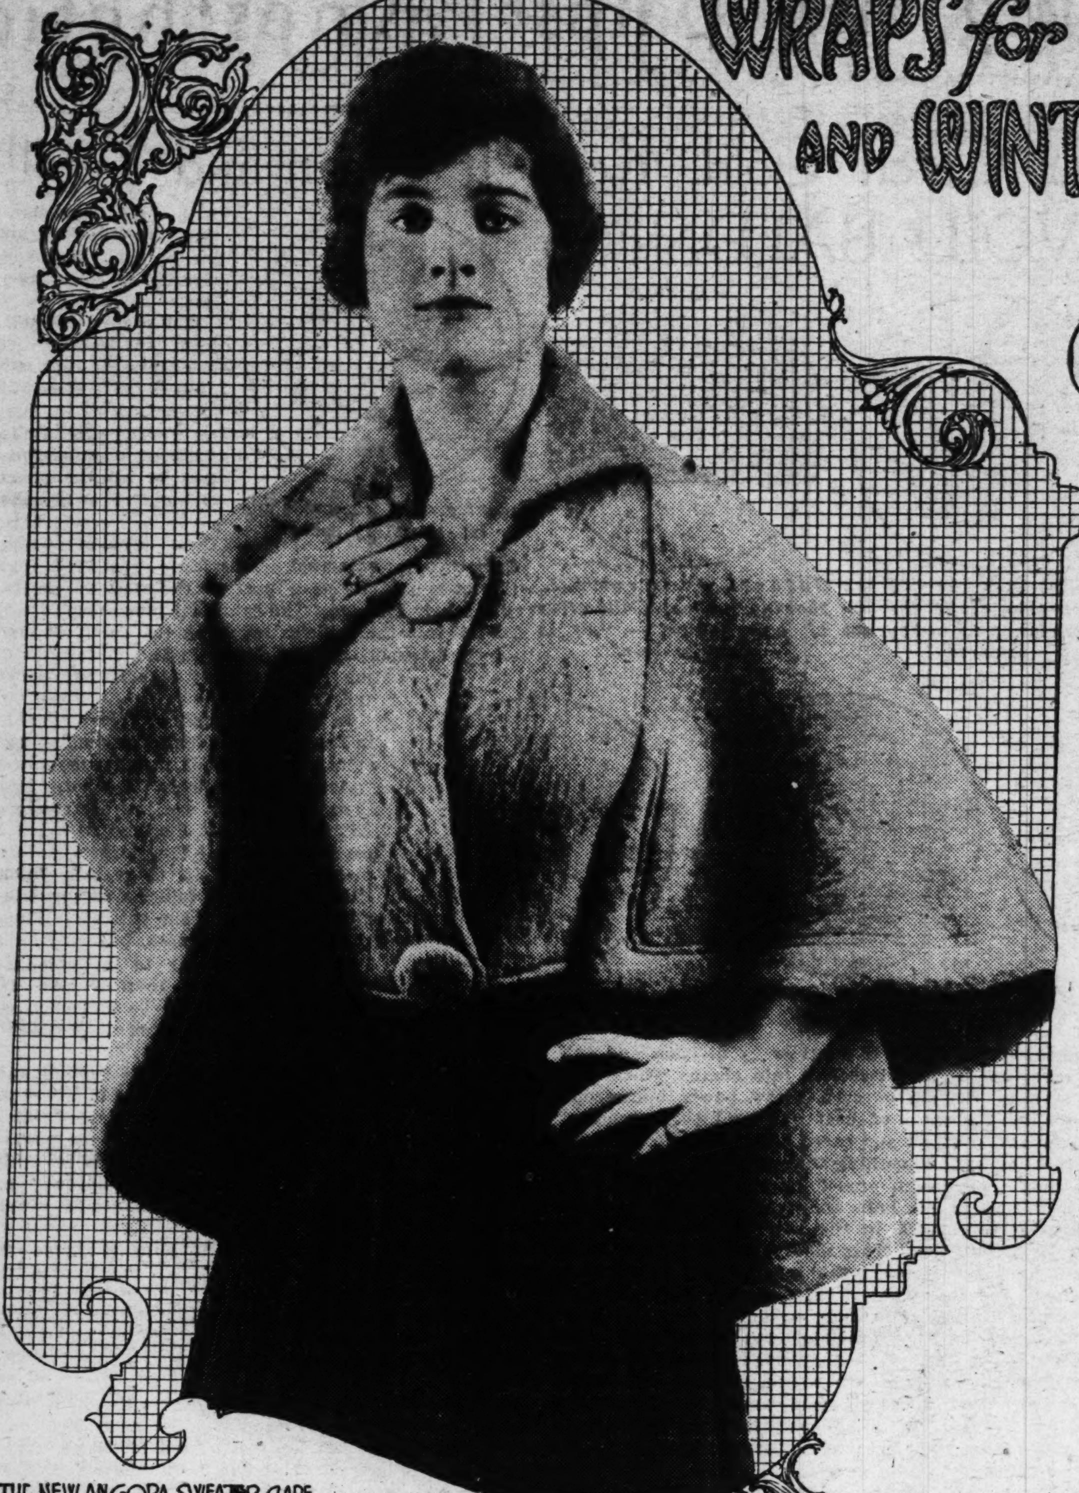
WRAPS for FALL AND WINTER



THE NEW ANGORA SWEATER CAPE

REDINGOTES will be much worn this fall and winter. The style appeared in St. Louis surprisingly early and found much favor; but in spite of great popularity it will probably survive because of its good lines. No wrap was ever so kind to woman as this very feminine overcoat. It gives height to little women, can be modified to minimize dumpiness and shortened to limit the height effect of the tall. The sketches on this page show some fine examples.

The photograph of the winter wrap presents a good style and very sensibly heavy cape with vest for cold weather. It is made of chinchilla, astrakhan or lamb's wool. The model was in geranium red with a baby blue vest.

The coming season will see a greater variety of modes clashing in the battle for fashionables' favor than ever before. Paris is shut in; her dressmakers and milliners have gone to the war, fighting the hated German with weapons which they handle with less artistry than they draped fabrics for the delectation of the rich and favored. London, Berlin and Vienna—who have long coveted Paris' pre-eminence in dressmaking and millinery—are in no position to take her abandoned business. We must make our styles at home with such left overs as the period preceding the war supplied and, in consequence of the tightening of money, many fashionable ladies may find it a virtue to wear out old clothes.

Do Not Let Your Hair Catch Cold, Keep It Clean and You'll AVOID BALDNESS

By Ferdinand King, M. D., Ph. G.

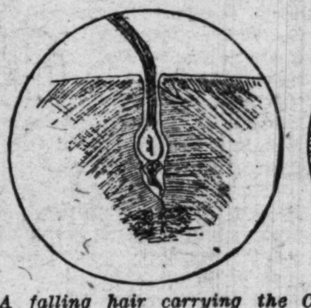
Eczema—How the hair root looks in eczema when crust is forcibly removed.



A falling hair carrying the dead papilla, while the follicle is closing up in hopeless baldness.

Disintegrating cocoon, showing sprouting spores.

How a drop of pus looks magnified.

A fallen hair with fungus-covered root.

KEEP your head clean. This is the best way to avoid baldness.

It is also necessary to avoid letting the scalp get cold. The scalp is poorly supplied with blood, and this blood flows sluggishly. The blood is the life of the hair, as it is of all other organs. Therefore the blood must be encouraged, and not checked. Cold drives the blood from the surface and so deprives the hairs of their nutrition.

Dirt clogs the pores. Gentle rubbing will keep the blood flowing in the scalp, and cleanliness will prevent accretions of matter that form an ideal breeding ground for the invisible microbes that will eventually kill the hair.

So much absolute nonsense has been written recently about the causes and the cures of baldness that it is well the plain facts should be set before those who fear to lose their hair.

First of all, let it be known that the microbe of baldness never enters from without. It is a product of pus formation and has its origin within the hair follicle. Therein it lives, thrives during its brief existence and finally dies. In fact it cannot live a single second when exposed to the air, hence it is absurd to charge the barber or hairdresser with transferring it from one person to another by means of the fingers or otherwise.

Many millions of these microbes, or more properly speaking, micro-organisms, are thrown out upon the scalp and hair from time to time, where they become mixed with other materials and appear as dandruff, but when so expelled they are dead and perfectly harmless.

As to the "dandruff microbe," there is no such thing. Dandruff is merely a symptom—an evidence of a diseased condition of the hair root or follicle, or of the soft tissues adjacent thereto, but not visible to the natural eye. The real cause of its presence can be determined only by microscopical examination.

Dandruff contains myriads of dead parasites or micro-organisms, but absolutely no living ones. If left for any considerable time on the hair and scalp it affords a soil or breeding ground for the germination and development of many forms of spores or fungus growths. These may become quite destructive to the hair.

These spores or fungi multiply by division and subdivision, and form themselves into chains which may be seen by the aid of even a low power microscope. Under the influence of heat and cold these "chains" expand and contract and cause a disagreeable itching—a sensation as if something were crawling on the scalp.

It has always been proved by experiment that fully 90 per cent of all hair and scalp ailments are due primarily to catarrh in the hair follicle, and not to any direct infection. This theory, promulgated a dozen years ago, has received the indorsement of scientific students and investigators all over the world, as well as of the medical profession.

The cause of this follicular catarrh is cold. The scalp may be chilled in many ways; men go out of barber shops, or their own rooms, even on the coldest days, with their hair wet, and women are sometimes equally careless. In either case the scalp is likely to become chilled, and the consequence is catarrh in the hair follicles.

Students and athletes become overheated, and then cool off without any thought of their hair and scalp. The bather is careful to dry his body when he emerges from his bath, but he fails to treat his hair and scalp with like consideration. In the loss of his hair he pays the penalty of such neglect.

The progress of this form of catarrh is usually rapid, but not always so. Here is an outline of its history: The chilling is followed by a congestion of all the scalp tissues. The delicate layer of scarf skin first thickens and then becomes catarrhal. This layer dips down into the scalp and forms a part of the wall or sheath of the hair follicles. The catarrhal inflammation follows it into the follicles involving the hair root and all its appendages. Pus forms in the follicles, and the hair, losing its anchorage, slips and falls out.

In the secretions of this catarrhal inflammation, which gradually assumes the form of pus, the so-called "microbes of baldness" are born, and there begin their work of destruction. After awhile they die, and with their associate material they form a fungus mass, vegetable in character, which fills up the hair follicles and eventually obliterates them entirely. Then there is total baldness.

It is much easier to prevent this catarrhal condition than to cure it. Its treatment should be entrusted to the dermatologist rather than to the barber or hairdresser.

The blood supply of the scalp is quite limited and sluggish, therefore remedies applied thereon are slow of absorption and limited as to amount absorbed. But if the scalp be properly prepared, that is, made porous and receptive, suitable remedies can be made to penetrate. It is important to get the proper remedies, for there are many preparations with a wide sale which are positively injurious.

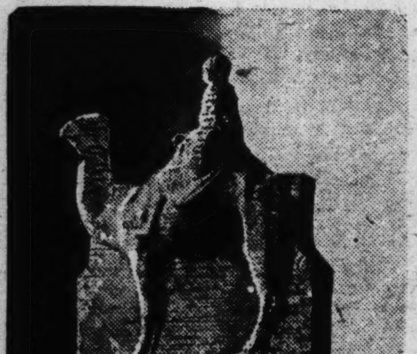
Both alcoholic and excessively alkaline mixtures are death to the hair. They remove all the lubricating elements from it, thereby making it porous and brittle, and in this condition it soon becomes the breeding ground for many forms of spores and fungi, which eventually sap every vestige of the hair's strength and vitality.

Under no circumstances or conditions should a preparation containing more than five per cent of alcohol be applied to the hair and scalp, and all soaps, shampoos, etc, similarly used should be absolutely neutral, that is, free from any excess of alkali, as shown by test paper.

Singeing the hair is a time-honored but senseless practice, and should never be submitted to.

Babylonian Brick Sculpture Revived

ONE of the most ancient forms of monumental sculpture, as handed down to us in magnificent examples from the ruins of Babylon, was that of high-relief figures of animals in glazed brick. These grandiose decorations, an integral part of cyclopean walls, remain in perfect preservation after a lapse of more than 50 centuries.



Monument to an African explorer.

A revival of this Babylonian sculptural art, applied to modern monumental purposes, has been tried with interesting results by a French sculptor, M. Edzard of Paris, working with a German colleague, Rolf Donandt ot Bremen. Their process is described in La Nature:

First of all, let it be noted that the idea is not to carve plastic forms and figures out of solid masses of brickwork, as that would expose the projecting parts to breaking or crumbling away, besides destroying the surface texture and color of the bricks. On the contrary, the monument, statue or relief is first modeled, as an integral whole, in soft brick clay. This completed model is then cut up into blocks, slices and sections, and the face of each block, or "brick," carefully retouched before baking. These are put in the oven on a bed of sand, all risk of breakage or warping being eliminated, and the baking causes in each piece a uniform shrinkage in size of from 15 to 16 per cent. This shrinkage is made up by the mortar cement with which the pieces are joined, in true brickwork fashion, when the monument is built upon its destined site.

The illustration reproduced herewith shows a brick monument of striking design recently completed by Messrs. Edzard and Donandt in memory of an African explorer. The figure of the man, enveloped in a Moroccan burnous and mounted on a camel, emerges from the plain brick wall that surrounds its base, so that the upper half stands, clearly sculptured in the round, at a height of 30 feet above the ground.

New Gem Changes Color

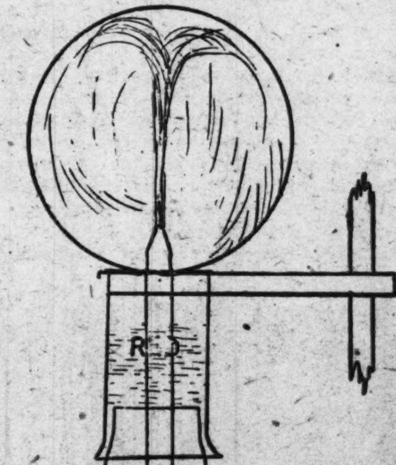
HELIODORE is the newest gem, and it differs from all others in its remarkable faculty of changing color. It is the chameleon of the metal world, and scientists now are busy trying to account for its strange characteristic.

Heliodore is a brand new discovery. It was accidentally unearthed by German prospectors searching for other precious stones in German East Africa. No one knew what the gem was when it was first brought to light, but it did not take long to learn that they had added a new star to the bright firmament of gems.

Samples of the stone were sent to the Kaiser and he is delighted with them. He has had seven heliodore stones set with diamonds and pearls and made into a cross for the Empress. The predominating color of heliodore in daytime is a brilliant golden yellow. In artificial light it changes to a beautiful green. In semi-darkness it shines like a diamond.

Chemicals Make Pretty Fountain

A FOUNTAIN which works without a pump and with the reservoir wholly beneath it, is a novelty which a simple experiment will produce. It depends for its operation upon the remarkably solubility of hydrogen chloride gas in water.



The fountain, made by inverting flask over jar of water.

A flask is filled to the exclusion of all air with hydrogen chloride (made by the reaction between sulphuric acid and common salt) and is tightly stoppered. It is inverted over a jar of water and held in position by a ringstand. A glass tube, tapering to a tiny nozzle at the upper end and stoppered at the other, extends up through the stopper into the flask and reaches down to the bottom of the jar of water.

As soon as the stopper is removed from the base of the tube the gas comes into contact with the water and begins to dissolve in it with great rapidity. Thereby some of the gas is removed from the flask, creating a partial vacuum, which the water rushes up swiftly to fill. One part of water, however, is able to dissolve 500 parts (by volume) of the gas. The result is that the water spouts through the nozzle with great vehemence.

To make the experiment even more striking, the water in the jar is colored blue with litmus. Acid turns blue litmus pink. When the water colored blue with litmus reaches the flask it is acidified by the hydrogen chloride it dissolves and changes in color from blue to pink.

NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

The Philosophy of "Fizz" Drinks

THE reason why we like effervescent drinks, and why nearly all our drinks nowadays are effervescent, is that the slight stinging or pricking of the palate that follows on drinking liquids charged with carbonic acid gas produces immediately an increased flow of saliva, and thus diminishes for the moment the sensation of thirst. But the relief they bring is only temporary, and is followed by a reaction in which the thirst is actually increased. The salivary glands are no more susceptible to perpetual stimulation than any other, and after each period of excitement one of depression supervenes. Young soldiers on route-marches quickly come to understand this, and to discover that the more water they drink the more thirsty they get, and that it is best, therefore, to limit the quantity of liquid swallowed. Moreover, the saliva contains matters of great importance for the digestion of food, particularly of starchy foods; and if it all be washed down the throat into the bowels as soon as it is secreted, a great part of its usefulness is lost. It would therefore seem that a less wasteful way, physiologically, of promoting the flow of saliva might be adopted with profit. The consumption of alcohol much diluted, of tobacco for most smokers (but not for all) and, best of all, of fruit containing sub-acid juices are among these more excellent ways.

Whom and When a Man Should Wed

DR. SAMUEL DIXON, Health Commissioner of Pennsylvania, in an official bulletin, gives the following advice to those about to marry:

"First, a man should not marry unless into a family with a history of reasonable longevity, free from hereditary disease. He should not marry a woman advanced in life, delicate, feeble or afflicted with any inherited deformity. The age most proper for women in this climate is 19 or 20 years and for men 24 or 25 years. Women of a nervous temperament, those who are extremely irritable, hysterical, subject to convulsions or to epilepsy from organic disease, ought to avoid matrimony.

"In this country marriages before the ages of 25 and 19 respectively are contraindicated, because, as a rule, previous to these periods of life, the body is not fully developed; the different functions are not perfect, and any offspring developed by them in their immature condition must be deficient in vital power."

Changing the Boundaries of the Human Brain Map

MATERIAL changes are imminent in the long accepted localizations of motor, speech and other areas of the cortex of the human brain, according to Dr. Eugene Dupuy of Paris, whose recent lecture on the subject, delivered in the physiological laboratory of the University of London, is reported at length in the Lancet.

Since Sir David Terrier, in his authoritative work on the "Functions of the Brain," established the doctrine of localization of the various functions, one may say the universal teaching has been that every convolution of the brain, and even every definite area of them, contain motor or sensory centers from which start the influence which animates not only whole limbs on the opposite side of the body but their different segments, and even the smaller organs, the thumb, for instance.

"I do not wish to be understood that the cortex has no function, but I wish to state clearly that the area of the seat of definite function, as the doctrine universally adopted will have it, is erroneous. In the light of the examples which I have reported it appears that there are no supplemental centers, but that all the cortex is endowed with the faculty of acting in specific and differentiated manner, and that at most disease or destruction of a given area brings on, say, motor paralysis or aphasia by an inhibitory influence, acting both on other parts of the cortex as well as on the ultimate processes, to the nucleus of the nerves which through the muscles manifest the functions externally. This inhibition would naturally imply alterations of the muscular sense. I cannot see any other hypothesis that will account more satisfactorily for all the different manifestations of lesions of the brain. And now let me give a last instance.

"A man was found to have in a very short time become amaurotic in one eye. This condition lasted 13 months, and no morbid symptom existed anywhere except a discharging abscess from one tooth in the upper jaw, which, having become a real infirmity, was drawn out. It was found that in its root canal lay a sharp thin splinter of wood from a toothpick which the patient had used in order to cure the tooth, which was decayed and which was evidently the cause of the recurrent abscesses. But in a very short time, three days in all after the withdrawal of the tooth, sight had returned completely in the amaurotic eye. Here it is no exaggeration to state that the lesion of the nerve of the tooth has induced by inhibition the amaurosis.

"As I have never seen a lesion made in the brain cortex in any special area not followed by distinct and appreciable alteration of tissue elsewhere, it appears to me that by such a process the activity of parts may be altered or inhibited, and one proof thereof consists in the fact that there always elapses a certain length of time before the manifestation of inhibition after irritation and before the restoration of the activity in the part inhibited after the removal of irritation."

Common Cause of Indigestion

THE commonest causes of indigestion were summed up in an address by Dr. Henry P. De Frost, as follows:

"The time allowed for meals is too short and the hours are too irregular in this ever crowding life of ours. From the suburbanite, who eats for a certain number of minutes by the clock and then runs for the morning train, to the shop girl or clerk who consumes a mixture of an egg with malted milk and calls it a lunch, and on again to those who hurry home, devour a dinner and hasten to an entertainment, the list of those who are candidates for the degree of dyspeptic invalids is steadily becoming longer. In the matter of irregular hours, doctors themselves are among the worst sinners.

"In the matter of the use of too finely prepared foods, women are the greatest offenders, and, as a result are the greatest sufferers. The vast number of prepared foods that are on the market, each claiming to be better than all the others, have almost done away with the need for teeth, so far as chewing is concerned. The result is that not only is the food swallowed without mastication, but there is so little solid material left to pass into the large intestine that that organ has but little work to do and retires from business. Add to this improper food, the indoor life, the lack of active exercise in the open air, the modes of dress, and the limited amount of water that is habitually taken, it is little wonder that dyspepsia and constitpation are common among women.

"Other common causes of chronic gastritis are the persistent use of certain articles of diet, such as very fat substances or foods containing too much of the carbohydrates. New England pie and the hot breads of the Southern states are responsible for many cases of chronic dyspepsia. The use in excess of tea or coffee, and, above all, alcohol in its various forms, is also a cause. A common cause of chronic catarrh of the stomach is drinking too freely of iced water during meals, a practice which plays no small part in the prevalence of dyspepsia in America. Another frequent cause is the abuse of tobacco, particularly by chewing."

Treating Scarlet Fever

NO matter how mild the case of scarlet fever, the patient must be put to bed and kept there for four weeks. For it must not be forgotten that his kidneys are affected, just as if his was the most serious case. Milk must be the basis of the diet, no meat in any form, not even broth, being allowed.

Facts and Fallacies About Thunder and Lightning

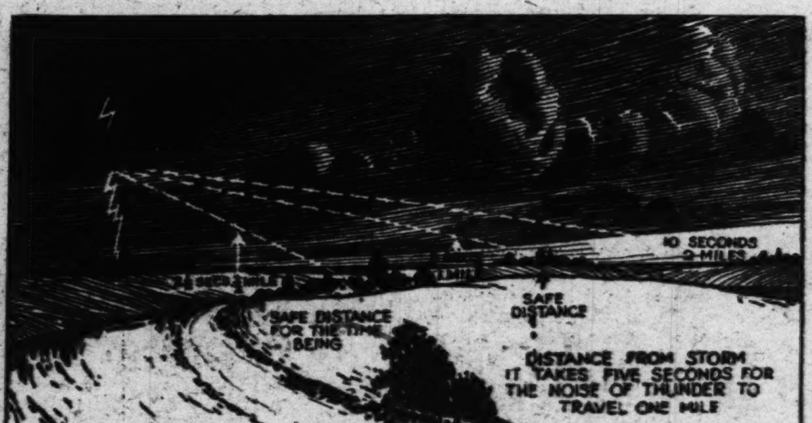
THE latest available statistics on fatalities, injuries and loss by lightning in the United States for one year show a record of 5527 strokes that caused damage; number of deaths by lightning, 563; persons injured, 820; value of property destroyed, including live stock, $3,396,810.

There are five different varieties of "lightning," or visible electrical discharges in our atmosphere: (1) Forked lightning, the familiar and dangerous form; (2) sheet lightning, which is merely a reflection of the former on clouds; (3) St. Elmo's fire, a silent and continuous discharge observed at mastheads on ships or on the tops of mountains; (4) ball lightning, or "thunderbolts," destructive but uncommon, and (5) the Aurora Borealis, occurring only in the Polar regions.

According to Sir Ray Lankester's observations, recorded in the London Graphic, a much larger number of persons in proportion to population is annually killed by lightning in the United States of America than in Great Britain and Ireland. As to whether this disproportion is due to fewer and less violent thunderstorms in the British Isles or to greater carelessness and more outdoor exposure on our part Sir Ray ventures no opinion. He does, however, give some practical hints on how to get struck by lightning, or how not to, what to believe and what to reject from the confused mass of popular notions on the subject.

Don't, in seeking shelter from an electrical storm, stand under any solitary tree, isolated shed or lone haystack. And don't be a solitary upstanding mark yourself by scurrying in the open. There is safety in numbers and masses, so that a refuge in the thick woods or under rocks is not to be despised.

Don't be alarmed at a terrific thunderclap following a lightning flash after an interval of two seconds or more. The sound, which is caused by heating and sudden expansion of the air by the great electric spark, is comparatively slow, traveling only at the rate of a mile in five seconds, while the flash is instantaneous. Therefore, when two seconds or more elapse, the storm is still at a safe distance of half a mile or so. But if the interval between flash and detonation is only a second or less, the electrical disturbance is close at hand, and any prominent upstanding object in your immediate vicinity is liable to be struck.



10 SECONDS 2 MILES
SAFE DISTANCE FOR THE TIME BEING SAFE DISTANCE
DISTANCE FROM STORM
IT TAKES FIVE SECONDS FOR THE NOISE OF THUNDER TO TRAVEL ONE MILE

Don't expose yourself recklessly, with the erroneous idea that the chances against your being struck by lightning are as a million to one. According to Lankesterian reckoning, the chance of escape for a person facing a violent thunderstorm and taking no precaution is in the ratio of 10 to 1 only—not nearly so good as the chance of a soldier in the front line of battle escaping death or a disabling wound, nor as the chance of recovery from a "major" surgical operation.

Don't imagine that lightning rods are an antiquated superstition or a modern "false alarm." On the contrary, competent electricians all over Europe are occupied in the endeavor to improve present methods of protection by "lightning conductors." Westminster Abbey in London, for instance, is covered with an elaborate network system to insure it against the fate of so many historic churches and cathedrals the world over that have been struck by lightning and damaged or entirely destroyed.

Lightning rods placed in high, prominent positions "attract" the electricity from the thunder clouds and conduct it harmlessly to and underneath the surface of the ground. The solitary tree or other upstanding object equally attracts the electric spark, but, not being a good conductor, it obstructs the passage of the electrical current, which thereupon runs wild, bursting and burning any living or inert thing in its way. There must be no break in the flow of the current from cloud to earth, and nothing is more fatal than the lightning conductor or itself when not properly "earthed."

One widespread erroneous notion about lightning is that it may "print" on the body of the person struck a sort of picture or outline presumably having some relation to the locality or spot where the event occurred. The only foundation for such an idea is the fact that branching, tree-like lines are sometimes found on the skin of a person struck by lightning. These are caused by the dissolving of the colored corpuscles of the blood in the blood vessels of the skin where the lightning has reached it.

Another fantastic theory is that certain species of trees are more dangerous than others as shelter in an electrical storm—that more people are killed by lightning under oak trees and elms than under beech trees, and that no one has ever been killed under a birch, etc. There is an attempt to connect these facts, if they are facts, with the nature of the respective woods in these trees; whereas the only possible connection is in that the frequency, height and usual position of these various trees may be the cause of their apparently favoring or repulsing the deadly activity of a lightning flash.

Mumps May Be Serious

THAT mumps is a disease far too serious to be laughed at or joked about is proved by the fact that it causes an average of 100 deaths a year in England. It is more serious in adults than in children, as it often affects other glands than those that produce the saliva.

THE officer is giving the woman a receipt for the milk he has seized. In the early days of the war these receipts were as good as money, but later the Government was unable to take them up, as the Germans had occupied the country. This picture is an actual photograph taken in the field three weeks ago. Dogs are more used in Belgium than in any other country to draw carts and even plows. They are especially bred for the work and are very strong and tractable.

Been Offered $40.00.

I do not suppose you remember me, but I am one of the boys who received a Moving Picture Machine some time ago, and will say it is the finest Moving Picture Machine I ever saw for a premium. It shows a beautiful picture on the screen. Well, many thanks to you and I wish that every boy in the United States could own one. I have been offered $40.00 for it, and could have got more for it. Walter Jones, Yellow Pine, Ala.

Thanks a Thousand Times.

I received the Machine a month ago and I am very pleased with it. It is a beauty in every way. I thank you a thousand times for it. I am proud to own it and I have had so much fun with it that I could not write to you before to tell you that I received it. John Crymes, 524 Ave. C, Bayonne, N. J.

Fifty Friends Saw It.

I received your Moving Picture Machine last Monday and that night I showed it. I had about fifty friends. They could not all fit in my theatre. I am very proud of my Machine, it is a dandy, and my friends say they wish they could have one too. Alex. Mentier, 3666 Lisbon Rd., Cleveland, Ohio.

20th Century Entertainer.

I received my Moving Picture Machine and thank you. I worked it the same day I got it, and it worked fine. I find it a Twentieth Century Entertainer, and I don't think any home is complete without one of your Moving Picture Machines. Henry Thurman, 817 S. Johnson St., New Orleans, La.

Sold 300 Tickets.

I am very thankful for that wonderful Machine and I think it is the best I have ever seen. I am going to have an entertainment to-day and therefore I have not much time to write letters. I think I will make about $10.00. I have sold 300 tickets already. Joseph Rauch, 3411 W. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.
